CHICAMAUGA ("the stream of death"), near Chattanooga, Tennessee, North America. Near here the confederates under general Bragg, aided by Longstreet, totally defeated the federals under Rosecrans, 19, 20 Sept. 1863. The loss was severe on both sides. The credit of the victory was attributed to Longstreet; its fruitlessness to Bragg.

CHICHESTER (Sussex), built by Cissa, about 540. The cathedral was completed about 1108, burnt with the city in 1114, and rebuilt by bishop Seffrid about 1187. The present cathedral was erected during the 13th century. The spire fell 20 Feb. 1861; the foundation of a new one was laid 2 May, 1865, completed June, 1866. The cathedral re-opened after repairs, 14 Nov. 1867. The bishopric originated thus: Wilfrid, archbishop of York, compelled to flee by Egfrid, king of Northumberland, preached the gospel in this country, and built a church in the Isle of Selcey, about 673. In 681 Selsey became a bishopric, and so continued until it was removed to Chichester, then called Cissan-Caester, from its builder, Cissa, by Stigand, about 1082. This see has yielded to the church two saints, and to the nation three lord chancellors. It is valued in the king's books at 677*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* per annum. Present income, 4500*l.* The borough was absorbed into Sussex, 1885. Population, 1901, 12,244.

CHICORY, the wild endive, or Cichorium Intybus of Linnæus, grows wild in calcareous soils. It was for many years so largely mixed with coffee in England that it became a matter of serious complaint, the loss of revenue being estimated at 100,000*l.* a year. An excise order was issued, interdicting the mixture of chicory with coffee, 3 Aug. 1852. The admixture, however, has since been permitted, provided the word "chicory" be plainly printed on each parcel sold. In 1860 a duty of 3s. per cwt. was put upon English-grown chicory until April, 1861; it is now 13s. 3d. per cwt. (1910). Excise on chicory, 1896, 1,502l.; 1908, 625l.

He took part (it was said without authority) in signing the treaty of Tien-tsin in June, 1858. He was consequently condemned to death by suicide. The non-fulfilment of this treaty led gradually to the war of 1856-57.

The emperor Taou-Kwang, who died 25 Feb. 1850, during the latter part of his reign, became liberal in his views, and favoured the introduction of European arts; his son, who succeeded, a rash and narrow-minded man, quickly departed from his father's wise policy, and adopted reactionary measures, particularly against English influence. An insurrection broke out in consequence, Aug. 1850, and quickly became of alarming importance. The insurgents at first proposed only to expel Tartars; but in March, 1851, a pretender was announced among them, first by the name of Tien-teh (Destiny Virtue), but afterwards assuming other names. It is stated to have been a native of Quang-si, of pure origin, but to have obtained some literary knowledge at Canton about 1835, and to have become acquainted at that time with the principles of Christianity from a Chinese Christian, named Leung-shih, and also from the missionary Roberts in 1844. He announced himself as restorer of the worship of the true God, Shang-ti, derived many of his dogmas from the Bible. He declared himself to be the monarch of all beneath the sky, the true lord of China (and thus of all the world), the son of Jesus, and the second son of God, and demanded universal submission. He made overtures for peace to Lord Elgin in Nov. 1860. His followers were called Taiping, "princes of peace," a title utterly repudiated by their atrocious deeds. The rebellion was virtually terminated, 18 July, 1864, by the capture of Nankin, suicide of the Tien-Wang, and the execution of the Tzu leaders.

It was boarded by the Chinese officers, 12 men out of a crew of 14 being carried off and the national ensign run down. Sir J. Bowring, governor of Hong Kong, being compelled to resort to hostilities, applied to India for troops. On 3 March, 1857, the house of commons, by a majority of 19, censured sir John for the violent measures* he had pursued. The ministry (who in his part) dissolved the parliament; but obtained a majority in the new one.

CHIVALRY arose out of the feudal system in the latter part of the 8th century (chevalier, or knight, being derived from the caballarius, the equipped feudal tenant on horseback). From the 12th to the 15th century it tended to refine manners. The knight swore to accomplish the duties of his profession, as the champion of God and the ladies, to speak the truth, to maintain the right, to protect the distressed, to practise courtesy, to fulfil obligations, and to vindicate in every perilous adventure his honour and character. Chivalry expired with the feudal system. See Knighthood and Tournaments. By letters patent of James I. the earl-marshal of England had "the like jurisdiction in the courts of chivalry, when the office of lord high constable was vacant, as this latter and the marshal did jointly exercise," 1623.

CHLORAL HYDRATE, a crystalline compound of the marsh gas series, discovered by Liebig in 1831, which, when taken dissolved in water, produces deep sleep, but not insensibility to pain. This property was discovered by Oscar Liebreich, and reported to the French Academy of Sciences, 16 Aug. 1869. Its use requires great caution, particularly if weakness of the heart is suspected. The lamented death of prof. John Tyndall was caused by an overdose of chloral given by mistake for sulphate of magnesia, 4 Dec. 1893.

CHLORALUM, or chloride of alumina, a compound of chlorine and alumina, an antiseptic disinfectant, invented by Dr. Gamgee about 1870. It is safe and efficacious, and useful in medicine for gargles, washing wounds, &c.

CHLORINE (Greek chloros, pale green), a gas first obtained by Scheele in 1774, by treating manganese with muriatic (hydrochloric) acid. Sir H. Davy, in 1810, stated this gas to be an element, and named it chlorine. Combined with sodium it forms common salt (chloride of sodium), and combined with lime it forms the bleaching powder and disinfectant, chloride of lime; see Bleaching. In 1823 Faraday condensed chlorine into a liquid.

The supposed dissociation of oxygen from chlorine by heat by V. and H. Meyer of Zurich, was announced Aug. 1879. Afterwards chlorine was proved to exist in two similar states at high temperatures.

CHLOROFORM (the ter-chloride of the hypothetical radical formyl) is a compound of carbon, hydrogen, and chlorine, and was made from alcohol, water, and bleaching powder. It was discovered by Soubeiran in 1831, and independently by Liebig in 1832; and its composition was determined by Dumas in 1834. Chloroform was first applied as an anæsthetic experimentally by Mr. Jacob Bell in London, in Feb., and Dr. Simpson of Edinburgh in Nov. 1847: its jubilee was celebrated by the society of Anæsthetists, 18 Nov. 1867; and was administered in England on 14 Dec. 1848, by Mr. James Robinson, surgeon-dentist. A committee of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society in July, 1864, after examining statistics, reported that the use of anæsthetics had in no degree increased the rate of mortality.

By the invitation of the Nizam through the Lancet, Dr. Lauder Brunton arrived at Hyderabad, 21 Oct., 1889; and there with other medical men investigated experimentally on the peculiar action of chloroform. They came to the conclusion that the danger of its use was not specially due to its effect upon the heart, but upon respiration, which could be easily obviated by proper caution. The Nizam remitted 1,000*l.* for the expenses of the commission. Lancet Jan. March, 1890

CHOLERA MORBUS (Asiatic cholera) was described by Garcia del Huerto, a physician of Goa, about 1560. It appeared in India in 1774, and at other times, and became endemic in Lower Bengal in 1817, whence it gradually spread, till it reached Russia in 1830, and Germany in 1831, carrying off more than 900,000 persons in 1829-30. In England and Wales in 1848-9, 53,293 persons died of cholera, and in 1854, 20,097; see Germ Theory of Disease.*

CHORAL HARMONISTS' SOCIETY,
 London, existed 1833-51.

CHORUS, a band of singers which formed an important part of the Greek dramas, beginning in the 6th century B.C., and has been continued in modern oratorios and operas.

CHOUANS, a name given to the Bretons during the war of La Vendée in 1792, from their chief Jean Cottereau, using the cry of the Chat-huant, or screech-owl, as a signal. He was killed in 1794. Georges Cadoudal, their last chief, was said to be connected with Pichegru in a conspiracy against Napoleon when first consul, and was executed in 1804.

CHRISM, consecrated oil, was used early in the ceremonies of the Greek and Roman churches. Musk, saffron, cinnamon, roses, and frankincense, are mentioned as used with the oil, in 1541. It was ordained that chrism should consist of oil and balsam only; the one representing the human nature of Christ, and the other his divine nature, 1596.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL (the Blue-Coat school) was established in conformity with a grant made by Henry VIII. in 1547, by Edward VI. 1553, on the site of the Grey Friars' monastery. A mathematical ward was founded by Charles II. 1672. The Times ward was founded in 1841. Large portions of the edifice having fallen into decay, it was rebuilt: in 1822 a new infirmary was completed, and in 1825 (25 April) the duke of York laid the first stone of the magnificent new hall. On 24 Sept. 1854, the master, Dr. Jacob, in a sermon in the church of the hospital, censured the system of education and the general administration of the establishment, and many improvements have since been made. Rev. G. C. Bell, successor of Dr. Jacob, 12 Aug. 1868-1876. The subordinate school at Hertford, for 416 younger boys and 80 girls, was founded in 1683.—The annual income varies. The removal of the school to the country negated by the governors, 26 April, 1870. The proposal that the buildings and ground should be purchased by the Mid-London Railway Company for 600,000*l.* was not carried out. The Charity Commissioners' scheme for the reformed administration of the hospital published in the Times, 9 March, 1885.

The appeal of the governors against the charity commissioners' scheme was submitted to the judicial committee of the privy council 18 June; the appeal was disallowed . . . 14 Dec. 1889
 Royal assent to the new scheme given . . . 15 Aug. 1890
 The new governing body, the duke of Cambridge president, first met, 1 Jan., 1891, when the scheme came into operation; by it 700 boys, 150 junior boys, and 350 girls are provided for.

Bi-centenary celebrated, meeting at the Guildhall, 8 March, 1898.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS, a sect founded in the United States by Mrs. M. B. G. Eddy. In 1867 she taught that the Spirit of God being Love and Good, moral and physical evil are contrary to that Spirit, and that a true knowledge of God and Christ can therefore cure all disease mental and physical; in 1876 her adherents formed the Christian Scientists Association; in 1905 they are numerous in the United States, 596 branch churches, the majority in the United States, 235 societies in 1903. See Mind cure.

Resolution condemning the teaching of Christian science, adopted at the London diocesan conference 17 May, 1906

Trial of Robert Adeock, at the central criminal court, for the manslaughter of major J. N. White, in connection with "Christian Science" treatment; jury unable to agree 30 June, "

Robert Chisholm, charged with the manslaughter of his 10-year-old son, by failing to call in medical aid, was acquitted of manslaughter, but convicted of the misdemeanour of neglecting the child in a manner likely to cause him unnecessary suffering, and was bound over in 100*l.* to come up for judgment if called upon, 25 Nov. "

CHRISTIAN SOCIALISM had its origin in 1848, under the leadership of Frederick D. Maurice, Charles Kingsley, Tom Hughes, Vansittart Neale, J. M. Ludlow, and others, in the practical interest in social reform evoked by the evils of the factory system, the efforts for reform by the working classes, and the political ideals of the Chartists. It is represented at the present time by the Guild of St. Matthew, and the Christian Social Union, which has a large and increasing membership, and seeks by raising its ideal of Christian duty to increase the quantity and improve the quality of Christian influences on social legislation and administration.

Death of Dr. Lueger, well-known Christian Socialist, of Vienna, born 1844 10 March, 1910

CHRISTINOS, supporters of the queen-regent Christina against the Carlists in Spain during the war, 1833-40.

CHRISTMAS, a festival in commemoration of the nativity of Christ, the exact time of which is quite unknown. Its observation appears to have begun in the second century in different months, January, April or May; for two or three centuries the Eastern church kept the feast Jan. 6 (see Ephiphany), whilst the Latin church observed it 25 Dec. The Armenians celebrate both feasts on 18 Jan.

The holly and mistletoe used at Christmas are said to be the remains of the religious observances of the Druids; see Anno Domini.

Christmas Cards.—About 1862 pictures of robins, holly, &c., on cards, designed by Mr. John Leighton, were issued by Messrs. Goodall of London, playing-card makers. Artistic designs were introduced in 1865. Great improvements were made in Germany, France, and in London, 1879-1910.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, in the Pacific Ocean, so named by captain Cook, who landed here on Christmas-day, 1777. He had passed Christmas-day at Christmas-sound, 1774. On the shore of Christmas Harbour, visited by him in 1776, a man found a piece of parchment inscribed: "Ludovico XV. Galliarum rege, et d. Boynes regi a secretis ad res maritimas, annis 1772 et 1773." On the other side captain Cook wrote: "Naves Resolution et Discovery de rege Magnæ Britannia, Dec. 1777," and placed it in a bottle.

Annexed to the Straits Settlements . . . Jan. 1880

CHRISTMAS ISLAND (Indian Ocean), an ancient coral atoll, visited by H.M.S. Egeria 1887; annexed by Great Britain, 1888; leased to sir John Murray and Mr. G. Clunies Ross, 1891; transferred to a company, 1897; scientifically explored by Mr. C. W. Andrews, a "Monograph" by him published, 1900. Sir John Murray's expedition to the island reported successful, March, 1901.

CHRISTOPHER'S, St. (or St. Kitt's), a West India Island, discovered in 1493, by Columbus, who gave it his own name. Settled by the English and French, 1623 or 1626. Ceded to England by the peace of Utrecht, 1713. Taken by the French in 1782, but restored the next year. The town of Basseterre suffered from fires, 3 Sept. 1776; also 3 and 4 July, 1867, when the cathedral and nearly all the town were destroyed. About 200 lives lost by inundations, 11, 12 Jan. 1880. Population in 1901, 46,446.

CHROMIUM (Greek, chroma, colour), a rare metal, discovered by Vauquelin in 1797. It is found combined with iron and lead, and forms the colouring matter of the emerald. Chromium is now (1903) prepared in large quantities in the electric furnace by a process discovered by Moissan in 1895.

CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHY, see Printing in Colours.

CHRONICLES. The earliest are those of the Jews, Chinese, and Hindoos. In Scripture there are two "Books of Chronicles"; see Bible. Collections of the British chronicles have been published by Camden, Gale, &c., since 1602; in the present century by the English Historical Society, &c. In 1858, the publication of "Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain and Ireland during the Middle Ages," commenced under the direction of the Master of the Rolls (still going on, 1903). In 1845 Macray's "Manual of British Historians" was published. Some of the monkish chronicles are now discredited. "The Chronicle of Froissart," translated by lord Berners, vol. i., Jan. 1901.

CHRONOGRAM, an inscription on tombs, buildings, medals, &c. in which a date or epoch is expressed by letters (the Roman numerals) added together as they occur in the sentence. A large collection of "Chronograms," with translations and explanations, was published by Mr. James Hilton in 1882, 1885, and 1896.

CHRONOLOGY, the science of time; see Eras and Epochs. Valuable works on the subject are l'Art de Vérifier les Dates, compiled by the Benedictines (1783-1820). Playfair's Chronology, 1784; Blair's Chronology, 1753 (new editions by sir H. Ellis in 1844, and by Mr. Rosse, in 1856). The Oxford Chronological Tables, 1838. Sir Harris Nicolas' Chronology of History, 1833; new edition, 1852. Hales' Chronology, 2nd edition, 1830; Woodward and Cates' Encyclopædia of Chronology, 1872; Mr. H. Fynes-Clin-ton's Fasti Hellenici and Fasti Romani (1824-50).

CHRONOMETER, see Clocks, and Harrison.

CHRONOSCOPE, an apparatus invented by professor Wheatstone in 1840, to measure small intervals of time. It has been applied to the velocity of projectiles and of the electric current. A chronoscope was invented by Pouillet, in 1844, and by others since. Capt. Andrew Noble (engaged by sir William Armstrong) invented an apparatus for determining the velocity of a projectile in a gun; a second of time is divided into millionths, and the electric spark is employed in recording the rate of the passage. The apparatus was exhibited at Newcastle-on-Tyne in Aug. 1869, and in London in April, 1870.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS were introduced into England from China, about 1790; and many varieties since. Centenary celebrated in London, 11 Nov. 1890.

CHRYSOPOLIS, or SCUTARIA (which see).

CHUNAR, or CHUNARGHUR, N.W. India, taken by the British, 1763, and ceded to them, 1768. Here was concluded a treaty between the nabob of Oude and governor Hastings, by which the nabob was relieved of his debts to the East India Company, on condition of his seizing the property of the begums, his mother and grandmother, and delivering it up to the English, 19 Sept. 1781. This treaty enabled the nabob to take the lands of Fyzoola Khan, a Rohilla chief, who had settled at Rampoor, under guarantee of the English. The nabob presented to Mr. Hastings 100,000*l.*; see Hastings.

CHUNCHUSES, a warlike race of brigands infesting Manchuria and Mongolia. Nominally under the sovereignty of China, they claim entire independence. Active during the Russo-Japanese war (which see) in attempts to destroy bridges and the track of the trans-Siberian railway in Manchuria. Japan accused by Russia of secretly bribing and inciting the Chunchuses to these acts.

CHURCH (probably derived from the Greek kyriakos, pertaining to the Lord, Kyrios), signifies both a collected body of Christians, and the place where they meet. In the New Testament, it signifies "congregation," in the original ekklesia. Christian architecture commenced with Constantine, who erected at Rome churches called basilicas (from the Greek basileus, a king); St. Peter's about 330. His successors erected others, and adopted the heathen temples as places of worship. Several very ancient churches exist in Britain and Ireland. See Architecture; Choir and Chanting; Rome, Modern; Popes.

CHURCH AND STAGE GUILD, was formed in 1880 to promote morality and temperance by the agency of theatrical performances.

CHURCH ARMY, constituted in 1882 as a working-man's mission to working men, under episcopal control. Founder and Honorary Chief Secretary, Prebendary Carlile; Honorary Treasurer, Mr. W. F. Hamilton, K.C. This Society trains men and women of the working classes as evangeists and mission sisters. It has about 800 of these working in parishes under the clergy throughout the United Kingdom. It has also 67 mission and colportage vans continually travelling the country districts; and conducts missions in prisons, work-houses and slums; on the seashore, to soldiers and sailors and other special classes. It has about 120 labour homes in all parts of the country for ex-prisoners, tramps and social failures generally of both sexes; also lads' homes, a farm colony, fresh air homes, dispensary, temperance homes, labour dépôts for giving work to the respectable unemployed, league of friends of the poor, boys' aid department, city gardens, emigration of men, women and families to Canada and Australia, and a number of other branches. Income, 1909, £264,000. Headquarters and Training Homes, 13 to 62, Bryanston-street, W.; New Central Labour Homes and Labour Relief Dépôts, 187, Marylebone-road, N.W.

CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA was established in Nov. 1784, when bishop Seabury, chosen by the churches in Connecticut, was consecrated in Scotland. The first convention was held at Philadelphia in 1785. On 4 Feb. 1787, bishops Provost and White were consecrated at Lambeth. The centenary was celebrated at Lambeth, 4 Feb. 1887. Two American bishops, Lyman and Potter, were present. In 1851 there were 37 bishops; in 1910 there were, in the United States, 68 dioceses, 7 bishops, 28 missionary bishops, and 5,414 priests and deacons. See Pan-Anglican Synod.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, see Bishops in Scotland. On the abolition of Episcopacy, in 1638, Presbyterianism became the established religion. Its formulary of faith, said to have been compiled by John Knox, in 1560, was approved by the parliament and ratified in 1567, finally settled by act of the Scottish senate in 1606, and secured by the treaty of union with England in 1707; see Discipline, Patronage, and Bishops. The church is regulated by four courts—the general assembly, the synod, the presbytery, and kirk sessions; see Presbyterians. For important secessions, see Burghers (1732), and Free Church (1843).

The first general assembly of the church was held 20 Dec. 1560.

The general assembly constitutes the highest ecclesiastical court in the kingdom; it meets annually in Edinburgh in May, and sits about ten days. It consists of a grand commissioner, appointed by the sovereign, and delegates from presbyteries, royal boroughs, and universities, some being laymen. To this court all appeals from the inferior ecclesiastical courts lie, and its decision is final.

Patronage was abolished after 1 Jan. 1875, by act passed 7 Aug. 1874.

Prosecution of Rev. Wm. L. M'Farlan of Lenzie for heresy in "Scotch Sermons" (published 1880) by the Presbytery of Glasgow, Oct. 1880. Mr. Hastie, principal of the Church (Calcutta) Institution, 1878; dismissed for bad temper, &c., Nov. 1883; his appeal to the General Assembly, dismissed (193-90), 29 May, 1884.

Dr. Cameron's resolution for disestablishment negatived in the Commons, 30 March, 1886; (260-208) 22 June 1888; (256-218) 2 May, 1890; (265-209) 24 May, 1892; his bill read, 1st time, 1893, 1895.

"Basis of Union" between the Church, the United Presbyterians, the Free Church, and some others, reported . . . June, 1895

The Free and United Presbyterian churches of Scotland united as one under the title of the United Free Church of Scotland, by act adopted in Edinburgh (see Glasgow, Jan. 1903). 31 Oct. 1900

*Minority consisting of 24 ministers and 5,000 members organise, and claim to be the original free church; they object to the union of the United Presbyterian and Free Churches (see above) on the ground that the funds of the Free Church could not be legally or consistently used, they being destined to maintain the whole doctrine of the Westminster confession, and further maintain that the United Free Church had abandoned the dogma of predestination and the principle of establishment, and appeal to the Court of Session; lord Low, the lord ordinary, decides in favour of the United Free Church . . . 9 Aug. 1901

On appeal to the second division of the court of session, the three judges, lords Kingsburgh (lord justice clerk), Young, and Trayner, unanimously dismiss the appeal and approve the judgment of the lord ordinary, and hold that the act of union of 1900 is valid and binding . . . 13 May, 1902

Lord Mount-Stephens gives 40,000*l.* to increase the incomes of over 20 ministers in Aberdeenshire and Banffshire, July, 1901; Mrs. Elizabeth Carnegie bequeathed 38,000*l.* to various church schemes . . . 8 July, "

Free Church appeal to the house of lords: case heard by lord Halsbury (lord chancellor), and lords Macnaghten, Shand, Davey, Robertson and Lindley . . . 26 Nov. 1903

*Uniting act, 1900, was passed by both churches, the United Presbyterians and the Free Church. The vote of the United Presbyterians was unanimous, that of the Free Church 643 to 27. The United Free Church of Scotland thus constituted was composed of 594 congregations with 198,089 communicants U. P., and 1,104 congregations, with 296,085 communicants, F. C.

Re-hearing of the case, in consequence of the death of lord Shand before judgment could be pronounced, before the lord chancellor, lords Alvestone (lord chief justice), James of Hereford, Davey, Robertson, Macnaghten and Lindley, 9 June, 1904; judgment pronounced in favour of the appellants (lords Macnaghten and Lindley dissenting), thus reversing the decision of the court of session, and find that the minority (the free church) represents the original church,†

United Church had 1,620 congregations, 1,800 ordained ministers, and 506,573 members, besides adherents—2,362 Sunday Schools with 25,361 teachers and 240,305 children in attendance, 31 Dec. "
The Scottish churches commission, appointed in 1905, concludes its labours; out of the total funds of 1,000,000*l.*, 466,451*l.* are allocated to the minority now known as the Free Church, 31 Dec., 1909

† This judgment affirms that the establishment principle and the dogmas of the Westminster confession are the distinctive tenets of the Free Church, which has no power, so far as property is concerned, to vary its doctrines. By this decision the whole of the corporate property held by the Free Church prior to 1900, in amount over 5,000,000*l.*, its colleges, churches and manse (unless protected by special trust deeds), and missionary buildings were taken from the United Free Church, with a membership of 500,000, and vested in the 30 ministers and 5,000 communicants forming the legal Free Church on 1 Aug. 1904.

CHURCH HOUSE. A corporation was established to commemorate the queen's jubilee of 1887, by the erection of a building in London for the general use of the clergy of England. The two houses of convocation meet in the Church House.

Charter obtained 23 Feb. 1888; on 7 July, 1888, 65,531*l.* had been subscribed, by means of which a site, with useful buildings, in Dean's Yard, Westminster, was purchased. A meeting was held on 21 July, 1888; the 1st general meeting of the corporation on their own premises was held on 26 June, 1890, the archbishop of Canterbury being in the chair. At a meeting at Norwich, 1 Feb. 1890, it was reported that 70,000*l.* had been subscribed.

CHURCH LADS' BRIGADE, a movement to influence the elder boys of a parish by combining systematic religious teaching with physical exercise based on military drill. Founded 1891. Income, 1909, 6,728*l.*, for general support of the work, 1,274 companies in United Kingdom and 81 in the Colonies, 1910.

Review of between 7,000 and 8,000 members by F.-M. the duke of Connaught, president of the brigade, in Hyde Park. 27 June, 1908

CHURCHMEN'S UNION, a broad church movement originated at the Bradford Church congress 1898. It has for its objects the restatement of belief in the light of scientific and biblical criticism, the spirit of tolerance in non-essentials, the rights of the laity, and the promotion of friendly relations with other Christian communities.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY, founded 1799. Income, 1876, 196,890*l.*; 1905, 346,058*l.*; 1910, 412,551*l.* Annual meetings are held.

CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY (Evangelical), instituted in 1836 to maintain curates and lay-agents in densely populated districts. Annual meetings are held. Income utilized 1909, 66,071*l.* amongst 1,145 workers.

CHURCH-RATES. The maintaining the church in repair belongs to the parishioners, who have the sole power of taxing themselves for the expense when assembled in vestry. The enforcement of payment, which is continually disputed by dissenters and others, belonged to the ecclesiastical courts. Many attempts were made to abolish church-rates before Mr. Gladstone's "Compulsory Church-rate Abolition" Bill, passed 31 July, 1868. Church Rate Abolition for Scotland repealed in the Commons (204-143). 11 July, 1877

CHURCH REFORM LEAGUE, for separation of Church and State, began at St. Alban's schools, Holborn, London, Rev. A. H. Mackonochie, president; 1876-7. Frequent meetings at the Church House, Westminster.

CHURCH SERVICES were ordered by pope Vitellianus to be read in Latin, 663; by queen Elizabeth in 1558 to be read in English.

CHURCH-WARDENS, officers of the church, appointed by the first canon of the synod of London, in 1127. Overseers in every parish were also appointed by the same body, and they continue now nearly as then constituted. Johnson's Canons. Church-wardens, by the canon of 1603, are to be chosen annually, and are elected at the Easter vestry.

CHURCHING OF WOMEN is the act of returning thanks in the church by women after child-birth. It began about 214. Wheatley; see Purification.

CHURCHYARDS, are by common law the freehold of the rector of the parish, who has power to prohibit the erection of monuments, &c. See Consecration and Burials.

CHUSAN, a Chinese isle; see China.

CIBORIUM, in early Christian times, was a protection to the altar-table, first a tabernacle, and afterwards a baldachin over the altar, and also a canopy used at solemn processions. Ciborium also means the vessel in which the eucharist is received.

CIDER (Zider, German), when first made in England, was called wine, about 1284. The earl of Manchester, when ambassador in France, is said to have passed off cider for wine. It was subjected to the excise in 1763, et seq. The duty was taken off in 1830. Many orchards were planted in Herefordshire by lord Scudamore, ambassador from Charles I. to France. The National association of Cider-makers founded, in London, Oct. 1894. Great increase of manufacture of cider in France, through failures of the grape crops; reported 1896.

CIGARETTES, see Tobacco.

CIGARS, see Tobacco.

CILICIA, in Asia Minor, partook of the fortunes of that country. It became a Roman province about 64 B.C., and was conquered by the Turks, A.D. 1387.

CIMBRI, a Teutonic race from Jutland, invaded the Roman empire about 120 B.C. They defeated the Romans under Cneius Papirius Carbo, 113 B.C.; the consul Junius Silanus, 109; the consul Cassius Longinus (who was killed) near the lake of Geneva, 107; and the united armies of the consul Cn. Mallius and the proconsul Servilius Cæpio near the Rhone, 105. Their allies, the Teutones, were defeated by Marius in two battles at Aquæ Sextiæ (Aix) in Gaul; 200,000 were killed, and 70,000 made prisoners, 102 B.C. The Cimbri were defeated by Marius and Catulus, at Campus Raudius, when about to enter Italy; 120,000 were killed, and 60,000 taken prisoners, 101 B.C. They were afterwards absorbed into the Teutones or Saxons.

CIMENTO (Italian, experiment). The "Accademia del Cimento," at Florence, held its first meeting for making scientific experiments, 18 June, 1657. It was patronised by Ferdinand, grand duke of Tuscany. The Royal Society of London was founded in 1660, and the Academy of Sciences at Paris in 1666. The Nuovo Cimento, a scientific periodical, published at Pisa, began in 1855.

CINCHONA, or CHINCHONA, see Jesuits' Bark.

CINCINNATI. A society established by officers of the American army soon after the peace of 1783, and still in existence, "to perpetuate friendship, and to raise a fund for relieving the widows and orphans of those who had fallen during the war." On the badge was a figure of Cincinnati as symbolising Washington and other patriots who had left their rural affairs to fight for their country.

CINCINNATI, the chief city of the state of Ohio, North America, founded 1789. This flourishing city desolated by an inundation caused by the rising of the river Ohio, 13 Feb. 1883. Several lives were lost, and about 50,000 rendered homeless. Ample relief afforded. About 50 persons killed and 150 wounded in an attack on the gaol to execute murderers (especially Wm. Berner); new courthouse burnt, 28-30 March, 1884; one regiment refused to march. Ten persons killed by a tramway accident, 15 Oct. 1889. Population in 1890, 296,908; in 1910, (est.), 345,230.

CINNAMON, a species of laurel, is mentioned among the perfumes of the sanctuary (Exodus xxx. 23) 1491 B.C. It was found in the American forests by don Ulloa, 1736, was cultivated in Jamaica and Dominica 1788, and is now grown in Ceylon.

CINQUE PORTS, on the south coast of England, were originally five (hence the name)—Dover, Hastings, Hythe, Romney, and Sandwich; Winchelsea and Rye were afterwards added. Jeake. Their jurisdiction was vested in barons, called wardens. These ports, instituted by Saxon monarchs, were constituted by William I. and succeeding kings, who required them to supply ships to defend the coast. Nearly all the harbours, except Dover, have been destroyed by the action of the sea. The latest lord-wardens: the duke of Wellington, 1828-52; the marquis of Dalhousie, 1852-60; lord Palmerston, 1861-65; earl Granville, appointed Dec. 1865, died 31 March, 1891; W. H. Smith, May, died 6 Oct.; the marquis of Duferin and Ava, about 4 Nov. 1891; resigned; the marquis of Salisbury, Oct. 1895 died 22 Aug. 1903; lord Curzon, appointed 2 July, 1904; resigned, prince of Wales appointed, 11 Feb. 1905. Their peculiar jurisdiction was abolished in 1855.

Lord Brassey appointed in the place of the prince of Wales, resigned	25 June, 1908

CINTRA (Portugal). Here was signed an agreement on 22 Aug. 1808, between the French and English the day after the battle of Vimeira. As it contained the basis of the convention signed on 30 Aug. following, it has been termed the convention of Cintra. By it Junot and his army were permitted to evacuate Portugal free, in British ships. The convention was publicly condemned, and a court of inquiry was held at Chelsea, which exonerated the British commanders. Both Wellington and Napoleon justified sir Hew Dalrymple.

CIPHER, a secret manner of writing: Julius Cæsar and Augustus when writing secret despatches are said to have employed the second or third letter instead of the first, and the same sequence with regard to the others. This cipher was in use till the reign of Sixtus IV. (1471-84), when the secret was divulged by Leon Battista Alberti, and a new sort of cipher sprang up. The father of Venetian cipher was Zuan Soro, who flourished about 1516. Rawdon Brown. Cipher telegrams, see Transvaal, 29 April, 1896.—See Cryptograph.

CIRCASSIA (Asia, on N. side of the Caucasus). The Circassians, said to be descended from the Albanians, were unsubdued, even by Timour. In the 16th century they acknowledged the authority of the czar Ivan II. of Russia, and about 1745, the princes of Kabarda took oaths of fealty. Many Circassians became Mahometans in the 18th century.

CIRCASSIAN GAMES were combats in the Roman circus (at first in honour of Consus, the god of councils, but afterwards of Jupiter, Neptune, Juno, and Minerva), said to have been instituted by Evander, and established at Rome, 732 B.C. by Romulus. Tarquin named them Circensian; their celebration continued from 4 to 12 Sept.

CIRCLE. The quadrature, or ratio of the diameter of the circle to its circumference, has exercised the ingenuity of mathematicians of all ages. Archimedes, about 221 B.C., gave it as 7 to 22; Abraham Sharp (1717) as 1 to 3 and 72 decimals; and Lagny (1719) as 1 to 3 and 122 decimals.

CIRCLES OF GERMANY (formed by Maximilian I. about 1500, to distinguish the members of the diet of the empire) were, in 1512, Franconia, Bavaria, Upper Rhine, Suabia, Westphalia, and Lower Saxony; in 1512, Austria, Burgundy, Lower Rhine, the Palatinate, Upper Saxony and Brandenburg were added. In 1804 these divisions were annulled by the establishment of the Confederation of the Rhine, in 1806 (which see).

CIRCUITS IN ENGLAND were divided into three, and three justices were appointed to each, 1176. They were afterwards divided into four, with five justices to each division, 1180. They have been frequently altered. England and Wales were formerly divided into eight—each travelled in spring and summer for the trial of civil and criminal cases, the larger towns are visited in winter for trials of criminals only; this is called "going the circuit." The circuits were settled by order in council, 5 Feb. 1876; modified 10 June, 1884, and Dec. 1887.

The system was again changed, eight circuits being arranged for with three assizes to each, excepting Lancashire and Yorkshire, which have four each (civil and criminal January, May; criminal only, excepting Glamorganshire and Lancashire, Oct.).

CIRCULAR IRONCLADS. The design is attributed to the Russian admiral Popoff; died March, 1808; one of these, named after himself, was launched at the port of Nicolaieff, 7 Oct. 1875. The admiral stated that he derived the idea from the works and views of Mr. E. J. Reed, late constructor of the British navy, who has expressed his approbation of the admiral's works.

CIRCULATING LIBRARY. Stationers' lent books on hire in the middle ages. The public circulating library in England, opened by Samuel Fancourt, a dissenting minister of Salisbury, about 1740, failed; but similar institutions at Bath and in London succeeded, and others were established throughout the kingdom. There was a circulating library at Crane-court, London, in 1748, of which a catalogue in two vols. was published.—No books can be taken from the British Museum except for judicial purposes, but the libraries of the Royal Society and the principal scientific societies, except that of the Royal Institution, London, are circulating.—The London Library (circulating), which was founded 24 June, 1840, is of great value to literary men.—Of the subscription libraries that founded by Chas. E. Mudie, in New Oxford-street, was the first of its kind. It began in 1842, and grew into celebrity in Dec. 1848, when the first two volumes of Macaulay's History of England were published, for which there was an unprecedented demand, supplied by this library. The hall was opened in Dec. 1860. Mr. C. E. Mudie died 28 Oct. 1890, aged 72. Other libraries are:—The Grosvenor Gallery Library; W. H. Smith (exchanges made at railway stations); Mitchell's Royal Library; Law Lending Library; Day's Library, and Cawthorn and Hutt's Library; Westerton's, and Bolton's of Knightsbridge, Miles of Islington. The "Tabard," with numerous exchange depôts, 1903; Boots', 1904; the Times, started 1905.

CIRCUMCISION (instituted 1897 B.C.) was the seal of the covenant made by God with Abraham. It was practised by the ancient Egyptians, and is still by the Copts and some oriental nations. The Festival of the Circumcision (of Christ), originally the octave of Christmas, is mentioned about 487. It was introduced from the Roman missal into the first English prayer-book in 1549.

CIRCUMNAVIGATORS. Among the most daring human enterprises at the period when it was first attempted, was the circumnavigation of the earth in 1519-22.

Magellan or Magalhaens, a native of Portugal, in the service of Spain, sailed from San Lucar, 20 Sept. 1519; with three ships passed the Straits named after him, 28 Nov. 1520; he was killed in a conflict on the Philippine Isles, 17 April, 1521; Juan Sebastian del Cano in the Vittoria, the only remaining ship of five, reached San Lucar 6 Sept. 1522

CIRCUS (Greek, Hippodrome). There were eight (some say ten) buildings of this kind at Rome; the largest the Circus Maximus, was built by the elder Tarquin, 605 B.C. It was an oval figure: length three stadia and a half, or more than three English furlongs; breadth 960 Roman feet. It was enlarged by Julius Cæsar so as to seat 150,000 persons, and was rebuilt by Augustus. Julius Cæsar introduced into it large canals of water, which could be quickly covered with vessels, and represent a sea fight. Pliny; see Amphitheatres, Factions and Hippodrome.

CIRRHÆA, a town of Phocis (N. Greece), for sacrilege, razed to the ground in the Sacred War, 586 B.C.

CISALPINE REPUBLIC, including the territories of Milan, Mantua, Modena, Bergamo, Ferrara, Bologna, Ravenna, &c. (N. Italy), formed by the French in May, 1797, from the Cispadane and Transpadane republics, acknowledged by the emperor of Germany by the treaty of Campo Formio (which see), 17 Oct. following. It received a new constitution in Sept. 1798; was remodelled, and named the Italian republic, with Napoleon Bonaparte as president, 1802; and merged into the kingdom of Italy in March, 1805; see Italy.

CISPADANE REPUBLIC, with the Transpadane republic, merged into the Cisalpine republic, Oct. 1797.

CISTERCIANS (the order of Cîteaux), a powerful order of monks founded about 1098 by Robert, a Benedictine, abbot of Molesme, named from Cîteaux, in France, the site of the first convent, near the end of the 11th century. The monks observed silence, abstained from flesh, lay on straw, and wore neither shoes nor shirts. They were reformed by St. Bernard; see Bernardines. The Feuillants, and the nuns of Port Royal, the Recollets (reformed Cistercians), and the monks of La Trappe, emanated from this order. Their earliest establishment in England (1128) was Waverley Abbey, Farnham.

CITATE. The Russian general Gortschakoff, intending to storm Kalafat, threw up redoubts at Citate, close to the Danube, which were stormed by the Turks under Omer Pacha, 6 Jan. 1854. The fighting continued on the 7th, 8th and 9th, when the Russians were compelled to retire to their former position at Krajowa, having lost 1500 killed and 2000 wounded. The loss of the Turks was estimated at 338 killed and 700 wounded.

CITIZEN. It was not lawful to scourge a citizen of Rome. Livy. In England a citizen is a person who is free of a city, or who doth carry on a trade therein. Camden. Various privileges have been conferred on citizens as freemen in several reigns.—The wives of citizens of London (not being aldermen's wives, nor gentlewomen by descent) were obliged to wear miniver caps, being white woollen knit three-cornered, with the peaks projecting three or four inches beyond their foreheads; aldermen's wives made them of velvet, 1 Eliz. 1558. Stow.—On 10 Oct. 1792, the convention decreed that "citoyen" and "citoyenne" should be the only titles in France.

CITY. (Latin civitas, French citê, Italian città.) Originally signified a state. Cities were incorporated in Spain, France, and England in the 11th and 12th centuries. A city has been usually, but not always, the seat of a bishop. Truro and St. Albans were made cities in 1877, Newcastle in 1882, and Liverpool in 1883, having become bishoprics. Birmingham was made a city, Jan. 1889.

CITY'S CASH. The City of London have published a tabulated statement of the receipts and payments of that portion of their property known as "the City's Cash" during the years 1892-1905. The receipts in that time amounted to £5,76,191*l.*—viz., in 1892, 771,455*l.*; 1893, 711,428*l.*; in 1894, 718,722*l.*; 1895, 509,545*l.*; 1896, 733,123*l.*; 1897, 1,010,835*l.*; 1898, 1,508,614*l.*; 1899, 430,408*l.*; 1900, 464,300*l.*; 1901, 611,330*l.*; 1902, 917,478*l.*; 1903, 445,638*l.*; 1904, 1,235,098*l.*; 1905, 1,213,260*l.* The principal totals in that period were the following:—rents, 1,905,537*l.*; interest, 48,000*l.*; markets, 1,905,951*l.*; mayor's court fees, 80,886*l.*, &c. The payments in the same period were as follows:—1892, 770,117*l.*; 1893, 717,029*l.*; 1894, 729,355*l.*; 1895, 499,753*l.*; 1896, 740,539*l.*; 1897, 1,004,048*l.*; 1898, 1,532,301*l.*; 1899, 422,677*l.*; 1900, 489,859*l.*; 1901, 625,066*l.*; 1902, 955,938*l.*; 1903, 403,629*l.*; 1904, 1,222,658*l.*; 1905, 1,187,231*l.*; making a total of 8,643,891*l.* Among the chief items of expenditure were:—income-tax, 146,960*l.*; charges on markets, 2,563,350*l.*; allowances to lord mayors, 101,000*l.*; expenses of the Mansion-house, 63,876*l.*; salaries to officers, 332,822*l.*; charitable donations and pensions, 194,825*l.*; donations for public and other purposes, 7,670*l.*; celebration of coronation, 27,705*l.*; celebration of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee, 9,786*l.*

CITY CHURCH PROTECTION SOCIETY, founded to preserve old churches, 1879.

CITY GUILDS REFORM ASSOCIATION held fifth annual meeting, 2 Sept. 1880. It had recommended the appointment of the royal commission of inquiry of 1880.

CITY OF LONDON COLLEGE (for young men) established 1861; began in 1848 as Metropolitan Evening Classes. New buildings opened by lord Londonderry, 26 May, 1905.

CITY OF LONDON COURT, the name given to the Sheriffs' Court (established 1517) by the County Courts act of Aug. 1867.

CITY OF LONDON SCHOOL, established by parliament in 1834 (based on an endowment by John Carpenter in 1442) was opened first in Honey-lane. The foundation of the new buildings on the Victoria Embankment laid 14 Oct. 1880; opened, 1883. Head master, rev. A. Chilton, elected 6 July, 1905.

CITY OF REFUGE, the name given to each of the six cities of Canaan set apart by the Mosaic law as places of refuge to which the person who had committed unintentional homicide might flee (see Num. xxxv., Deut. xix., Josh. xx.). If the elders of the city recognised the manslayer's claim for asylum, he was secure from the avenger, until his right to protection was judicially decided. The cities of refuge on the west side of Jordan were Hebron, Shechem, and Kedesh; on the east Golan, Ramoth-Gilead, and Bezer.

CITY ROAD, from London to Islington, was projected by Mr. Dingler, and cut out about 1760.

CIUDAD RODRIGO, a strong fortified town in Spain invested by the French, 11 June, 1810, and surrendered to them 10 July. It remained in their possession until it was stormed by the British, under Wellington, 19 Jan. 1812.

CIVIL CLUB (at the New Corn Exchange Tavern, Mark-lane), was established 19 Nov. 1669, for the purpose of promoting fellowship, mutual assistance, and the revival of trade after the interruption to business in consequence of the fire, Sept. 1666.

Only one person of the same trade or profession could be a member of this club, and the members pledge themselves to give "preference to each other in their respective callings."

CIVIL ENGINEERS, see Engineers.

CIVIL LAW. See Codes. Civil law was restored in Italy, Germany, &c., 1127. Blair. It was introduced into England by Theobald, a Norman abbot, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, in 1138. It is now used in the spiritual courts only, and in maritime affairs; see Doctors' Commons, and Laws.

CIVIL LIST. This now comprehends the revenue awarded to the kings of England in lieu of their ancient hereditary income. The entire revenue of Elizabeth was not more than 600,000*l.*, and that of Charles I. was about 800,000*l.* After the revolution a civil list revenue was settled on the new king and queen of 700,000*l.* (in 1660), the parliament taking into its own hands the support of the forces both maritime and military. The civil list of George II. was increased to 800,000*l.*; and that of George III., in the 55th year of his reign, was 1,030,000*l.*

In 1831, the civil list of the sovereign was fixed at 510,000*l.*, and in December, 1837, the civil list of the queen was fixed at 385,000*l.*

Prince Albert obtained an exclusive sum from parliament of 30,000*l.* per ann. 7 Feb. 1840

Sir H. Parnell's motion for inquiry into the civil list led to the resignation of the Wellington administration 15 Nov. 1830

A select committee was appointed by the house of commons for the purpose 2 Feb. 1860

See Crown Lands.

A select committee appointed to consider the provision to be made for the king and the royal family, 11 March, 1901; the civil list of the king fixed at 470,000*l.*; total, with annuities and pensions for members of the royal family, 543,000*l.*

9 May; act passed 25 June, 1901

Civil list act 470,000*l.* 1910

CIVIL PROCEDURE ACTS, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, passed 15 Aug. 1879 (it abolishes outlawry in civil proceedings); and 44 & 45 Vict. c. 59, passed 27 Aug. 1881.

CIVIL SERVICE. Nearly 17,000 persons were employed in this service under the direction of the treasury, and the home, foreign, colonial, post, and revenue offices, &c. In 1855, a commission reported most unfavourably on the existing system of appointments, and on 21 May commissioners were appointed to examine into the qualifications of the candidates, who report annually. By an order of council, 4 June, 1870, the system of competitive examination was made general after 1 Oct. 1870. The civil service superannuation act passed in April, 1859. Civil service for the year (ending 31 March)—

A select committee to inquire into this expenditure issued its report, June, 1874. Important changes made, by order in council, 12 Feb. 1875. See Public Departments Commission. Further changes in the lower, now named second division; salaries limited, to be from 70*l.* to 250*l.* a year, 4 Feb. 1890. The fourth and last report of the Royal Commission on Civil Establishments, dated 30 July, issued 28 Aug. 1890. Parliamentary return, issued Jan. 1903, shows that the total number of persons employed in the civil service on 31 March, 1902, was 107,782, including 77,035 employed in the postal service, and 8,869 in the Admiralty.

CLAN-NA-GAEL (brotherhood of Gaels), an Irish secret oath-bound society, originating out of the Fenian brotherhood in 1870, it became the heart of the Irish National League in the United States, of which it was the extreme violent part. Its action much restrained by the influence of Messrs. Parnell, Sexton, and other members of the Irish Parliamentary party who originated a "new departure." It obtained the support of the Irish peasantry by promising to obtain them their farms without rent. The ultimate object of the Clan-na-Gael is said to be the establishment of Ireland as a perfectly independent state; it is termed a dynamite party ("Parnellism and Crime," series III., June 1887).

For murder of Dr. Cronin, &c., see United States, 1889. The Clan-na-Gael at Chicago declared against any form of violence . . . reported Feb. 1890

CLANS are said to have arisen in Scotland, in the reign of king Malcolm II., about 1008. The legal power of the chiefs and other remains of heritable jurisdiction were abolished in Scotland, and liberty was granted to clansmen in 1747, in consequence of the rebellion of 1745. The following is a list of all the known clans of Scotland, with the badge of distinction anciently worn by each. The chief of each clan wears two eagle's feathers in his bonnet, in addition to the badge. Chambers. A history of the clans by Wm. Buchanan was published in 1775.

CLAPHAM SECT, a name given to the evangelical party in the Church of England, first by the rev. Sydney Smith, in the latter part of the 18th century. The rev. Henry Venn was vicar of Clapham, and several of its eminent members lived there. The sect included Wm. Wilberforce, Zachary Macaulay (father of the historian), and the Rev. W. Romaine.

Memoirs of some appear in sir James Stephen's "Ecclesiastical Biography," 1849.

CLARE and CLARENCE (Suffolk). Richard de Clare, earl of Gloucester, is said to have seated here a monastery of the order of Friars Eremites, the first of this kind of mendicants who came to England, 1248. Tanner. Lionel, third son of Edward III., becoming possessed of the honour of Clare, by marriage, was created duke of Clarence. The title has ever since belonged to a branch of the royal family.

DUKES OF CLARENCE.

1362. Lionel, born 1338, died, 1369; see York.
 1411. Thomas (second son of Henry IV.), born 1389; killed at Baugé, 1421.
 1461. George (brother of Edward IV.), murdered, 1478.
 1789. William (third son of George III.), afterwards king William IV.
 1890. Albert Victor Christian Edward, eldest son of the prince of Wales, see under Wales, created duke of Clarence and Avondale and earl of Athlone, about 23 May; died 14 Jan., 1892. See England, 1892.

CLARE was the first place in Ireland since 1689 that elected a Roman Catholic M.P.; see Roman Catholics. At the election, held at Ennis, the county town, Mr. Daniel O'Connell was returned, 5 July, 1828. He did not sit till after the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Act, in 1829, being re-elected 30 July, 1829.

CLARE, NUNS OF ST., a sisterhood, called Minorettes, founded in Italy by St. Clare and St. Francis d'Assisi, about 1212. They were also called Urbanists; their rule having been modified by pope Urban IV., who died 1264. This order settled in France about 1260, and in England, in the Minorities without Aldgate, London, about 1293, by Blanche, queen of Navarre, wife of Edmund, earl of Lancaster, brother of Edward I. At the suppression, the site was granted to the bishopric of Bath and Wells, 1539. Tanner.

CLAREMONT (Surrey), the residence of the princess Charlotte (daughter of the prince-regent, afterwards George IV., married to prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, 2 May, 1816): here she died in childbirth, 6 Nov. 1817. The house was built by sir John Vanbrugh, and was the seat successively of the earl of Clare, of lord Clive, lord Galloway, and the earl of Tyrconnel. It was purchased of Mr. Ellis by government for 65,000*l.* for the prince and princess of Saxe-Coburg; and the former, the late king of Belgium, assigned it to prince Albert in 1840. The exiled royal family of France resided at Claremont, 4 March, 1848; and the king, Louis Philippe, died there, 29 Aug. 1850. Bought by Queen Victoria, March, 1882. The duchess of Albany lived here for a time, returned 27 April, 1903.

CLARENCIEUX, the second king-at-arms, said to have been nominated by Thomas, son of Henry IV., created duke of Clarence, 1411. His duty was to arrange the funerals of baronets, knights, esquires, and gentlemen, on the south side of the Trent, from whence he is also called sur-roy or south-roy.

CLARENDON, CONSTITUTIONS OF, were enacted at a council held 25 Jan. 1164, at Clarendon, in Wiltshire, to retrench the power of the clergy. They led to Becket's quarrel with Henry II., were annulled by the pope, and abandoned by the king, April, 1174. The following is approximative:

- I. All suits concerning advowsons to be determined in civil courts.
- II. The clergy accused of any crime to be tried by civil judges.
- III. No person of any rank whatever to be permitted to leave the realm without the royal licence.
- IV. Laics not to be accused in spiritual courts, except by legal and reputable promoters and witnesses.
- V. No chief tenant of the crown to be excommunicated, nor his lands put under interdict.
- VI. Revenues of vacant sees to belong to the king.
- VII. Goods forfeited to the crown not to be protected in churches.
- VIII. Sons of villains not to be ordained clerks without the consent of their lord.
- IX. Bishops to be regarded as barons, and be subjected to the burthens belonging to that rank.
- X. Churches belonging to the king's see not to be granted in perpetuity against his will.
- XI. Excommunicated persons not to be bound to give security for continuing in their abode.
- XII. No inhabitant in demesne to be excommunicated for non-appearance in a spiritual court.
- XIII. If any tenant in capite should refuse submission to spiritual courts, the case to be referred to the king.
- XIV. The clergy no longer to pretend to the right of enforcing debts contracted by oath or promise.
- XV. Causes between laymen and ecclesiastics to be determined by a jury.
- XVI. Appeals to be ultimately carried to the king, and no further without his consent.

CLARENDON PRESS, OXFORD. The building was erected by sir John Vanbrugh, in 1711-13, the expense being defrayed out of the profits of lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion, the copyright of which was given to the university by his son. The original building was converted into a museum, lecture-rooms, &c., and a new printing-office erected by Blore and Robertson, 1825-30.

CLARINET, or CLARINET, a wind instrument of the reed kind, said to have been invented by Johann Christopher Denner, in Nuremberg, about 1690. Mr. James Clinton's "combination" clarinet was exhibited at the Royal College of Music, 7 July, 1895. A tenor clarinet, called the basset-horn, is used in orchestral music.

CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION OF ENGLAND AND WALES, founded; first meeting held in London, president, the master of the rolls, 19 Dec. 1903. The name of the Association changed to "Classical Association" by omission of the words "of England and Wales" at the general meeting held, 5-6 Jan., 1906.

CLASSIS. The name was first used by Tullius Servius (the sixth king of ancient Rome), in making divisions of the Roman people, 573 B.C. The first of the six classes were called classici, by way of eminence, and hence authors of the first rank (especially Greek and Latin) came to be called classics.

CLAVECIN, French for harpsichord. See Pianoforte.

CLAVICHORD, a keyed-stringed musical instrument of various forms in use in France, Spain, and Germany, in the 16th and 17th centuries. See Virginals, Spinnet, Harp and Piano.

CLAVICYTHERIUM, an upright musical instrument, probably resembling the harpsichord, used in the 16th century.

CLAVIER, German for pianoforte (which see).

CLAY'S ACT, SIR WILLIAM, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 14 (1851), relates to the compound householders.

CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY, see Bulwer.

CLEARING-HOUSE. In 1775, a building in Lombard-street was set apart for the use of bankers, in which they might exchange drafts, bills, and securities, and thereby save labour and curtail the amount of floating cash requisite to meet the settlement of the different houses, if effected singly. By means of transfer tickets, transactions to the amount of millions daily are settled without the intervention of a bank note. In 1861, the clearing-house was used by 117 companies, and in May, 1864, it was joined by the Bank of England. In the year ending 30 April, 1868, 3,257,411,000*l.* passed through the clearing-house; 30 April, 1873, 6,003,335,000*l.*; 31 Dec. 1887, 6,077,097,000*l.*; 1900, 8,960,000,000*l.*; 1905, 12,287,935,000*l.*; 1908, 12,120,362,000*l.*; 1909, 13,525,446,000*l.* The Railway clearing-house in Seymour-street, near Euston square, established 2 Jan. 1842, is regulated by an act passed in 1850. The jubilee was celebrated Jan. 1892. Clearing House Act (Ireland) 1860, and the Cotton Brokers Bank, at Liverpool. New York clearing-house, the first started in America, 1853; Vienna, 1864; Paris, 1872; Berlin, 1883. A clearing-house for the systematic relief of the unemployed in London was constituted at the Polytechnic Institution, Regent Street, in 1892.

CLEMENTINES, apocryphal pieces, attributed to Clemens Romanus, a contemporary of St. Paul, and said to have succeeded St. Peter as bishop of Rome. He died 102. Niceron. Also the decretals of pope Clement V. who died 1314, published by his successor. Bowyer. Also Augustine monks, each of whom having been a superior nine years, then merged into a common monk.—CLEMENTINES were the adherents of Robert, son of the count of Geneva, who took the title of Clement VII. on the death of Gregory XI., 1378, and URBANISTS, those of pope Urban VI. Christendom was divided by their claims: France, Castile, Scotland, &c., adhering to Clement; Rome, Italy, and England, to Urban. The schism ended in 1409, when Alexander V. was elected pope, and his rivals resigned; see Anti-Popes.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE, see Obelisks.

CLEPSYDRA, a water-clock; see Clocks.

CLERGY (from the Greek kleros, a lot or inheritance) in the first century were termed presbyters, elders, or bishops, and deacons. The bishops (episcopi or overseers), elected from the presbyters, in the second century assumed higher functions (about 330), and, under Constantine, obtained the recognition and protection of the secular power. Under the Lombard and Norman-French kings in the 7th and 8th centuries, the clergy began to possess temporal power, as owners of lands; and after the establishment of monachism, a distinction was made between the regular clergy, who lived apart from the world, in accordance with a regula or rule, and the secular (worldly) or beneficed clergy. The English clergy write clerk after their names in legal documents. See Church of England (note) and Bishops.

The clergy were first styled clerks, owing to the judges being chosen after the Norman custom from the sacred order, and the officers being clergy: this gave them that denomination, which they keep to this day. Blackstone.

As the Druids kept the keys of their religion and of letters, so did the priests keep both these to themselves; they alone make profession of letters, and a man of letters was called a clerk, and hence learning went by the name of clerkship. Pasquier.

BENEFIT OF CLERGY, Privilegium Clericale, arose in the regard paid by Christian princes to the church, and consisted of: 1st, an exemption of places consecrated to religious duties from criminal arrests, which was the foundation of sanctuaries; 2nd, exemption of the persons of clergymen from criminal process before the secular judge, in particular cases, which was the original meaning of the privilegium clericale. The benefit of clergy was afterwards extended to everyone who could read; and it was enacted, that there should be a prerogative allowed to the clergy, that if any man who could read were to be condemned to death, the bishop of the diocese might, if he would, claim him as a clerk, and dispose of him in some places of the clergy as he might deem meet. The ordinary gave the prisoner at the bar a Latin book, in a black Gothic character, from which to read a verse or two; and if the ordinary said, "Legit ut Clericus," ("He reads like a clerk"), the offender was only burnt in the hand; otherwise, he suffered death, 3 Edw. I. (1274). The privilege was restricted by Henry VII. in 1489, and abolished, with respect to murderers and other great criminals, by Henry VIII., 1512. Stow. The reading was discontinued by 5 Anne. c. 6 (1706). Benefit of Clergy was wholly repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 25 (1827).

CLERGY CHARITIES.

William Assheton, an eminent theological writer, was the first proposer of a plan to provide for the families of deceased clergy. He died Sept. 1711. Watts's Life of Assheton.

Festival of the "Sons of the Clergy," held annually at St. Paul's cathedral instituted about 1655; from it sprang the charity called the "Sons of the Clergy" (Clergy Orphan and Widow corporation), incorporated, 1 July, 1678.

CLERKENWELL, a parish, N. E. London, so called from a well (fons clericorum) in Ray-street, where the parish clerks occasionally acted mystery-plays: once before Richard II. in 1390. Hunt's political meetings in 1817 were held in Spa-fields in this parish. In St. John's parish are the remains of the priory of the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. Clerkenwell prison was built in 1615, in lieu of the noted prison called the Cage, which was taken down in 1614; the then Bride-well having been found insufficient. The prison called the House of Detention, erected in 1775, was rebuilt in 1818; again 1844. For the explosion here, see Fenians, Dec. 1867. At Clerkenwell-cloose formerly stood the house of Oliver Cromwell, where some suppose the death-warrant of Charles I. was signed, Jan. 1649.

CLERMONT (France). Here was held the council under pope Urban II. in 1095, in which the first crusade against the infidels was determined upon, and Godfrey of Bouillon appointed to command it. In this council the name of pope is said to have been first given to the head of the Roman Catholic church, exclusively of the bishops who used previously to assume the title. Philip I. of France was (a second time) excommunicated by this assembly. Hénault.

CLEVES (N. E. Germany). Rutger, count of Cleves, lived at the beginning of the 11th century. Adolphus, count of Mark, was made duke of Cleves by the emperor Sigismund, 1417. John William, duke of Cleves, Berg, Juliers, &c., died without issue, 25 March, 1609, which led to a war of succession. Eventually Cleves was assigned to the elector of Brandenburg in 1666; seized by the French in 1757; restored at the peace in 1763; and now forms part of the Prussian dominions.

CLIFTON SUSPENSION BRIDGE, over the Avon, connecting Gloucestershire and Somersetshire, constructed of the removed Hungerford-bridge, was completed in Oct. and opened 8 Dec. 1864. It is said to have the largest span (702 feet) of any chain bridge in the world. In 1753 Alderman Vick, of Bristol, bequeathed 1000*l.* to accumulate for the erection of a bridge over the Avon. In 1831 Brunel began one, which was abandoned after the expenditure of 45,000*l.*

CLOCK. The clepsydra, or water-clock, was introduced at Rome from the east about 158 B.C. by Scipio Nasica. Toothed wheels were applied to them by Ctesibius, about 140 B.C. Clocks said to have been found by Cæsar on invading Britain, 55 B.C. The only clock supposed to be then in the world was sent by pope Paul I. to Pepin, king of France, A.D.

760. Pacificus, archdeacon of Genoa, invented one in the 9th century. Originally the wheels were three feet in diameter. The earliest complete clock of which there is any certain record was made by a Saracen mechanic in the 13th century. Alfred is said to have measured time by wax tapers, and to have used lanterns to defend them from the wind, about 887.

CLOGHER (Ireland). St. Macartin, a disciple of St. Patrick, fixed a bishopric at Clogher, where he also built an abbey "in the street before the royal seat of the kings of Ergal." He died in 506. Clogher takes its name from a golden stone, from which, in times of paganism, the devil used to pronounce juggling answers, like the oracles of Apollo Pythius. Sir James Ware. In 1041 the cathedral was built anew, and dedicated to its founder. Clogher merged, on the death of its last prelate (Dr. Tottenham), into the archiepiscopal see of Armagh, by the act of 1833.

CLONFERT (Ireland). St. Brendan founded an abbey at Clonfert in 558: his life is extant in jingling monkish metre in the Cottonian library at Westminster. In his time the cathedral, famous in ancient days for its seven altars, was erected; and Colgan makes St. Brendan its founder and the first bishop; but it is said, in the Ulster Annals, under the year 571, "Mena, bishop of Clonfert-Brenain, went to rest." Clonfert, in Irish, signifies a wonderful den or retirement. In 1839 the see merged into that of Killaloe; see Bishops.

CLONTARF (near Dublin), the site of a battle fought on Good Friday, 23 April, 1014, between the Irish and Danes, the former headed by Bryan Boroinhe, monarch of Ireland, who defeated the invaders, after a long and bloody engagement, was wounded, and soon afterwards died. His son Murchard also fell with many of the nobility; 13,000 Danes are said to have perished in the battle.

CLOSTERSEVEN (Hanover) CONVENTION OF, was entered into 8 Sept. 1757, between the duke of Cumberland, third son of George II., hardly pressed, and the duke of Kichelieu, commander of the French. By it 38,000 Hanoverians laid down their arms, and were dispersed. The treaty was disavowed by the king, and soon broken; the duke resigned all his commands.

CLOSURE, see Clôture.

CLOTH, see Woollen Cloth and Calico.

CLÔTURE, the power of closing a debate in the French chamber of deputies, exercised by the president. A similar power, termed Closure, was given to the speaker of the House of Commons, 11 Nov. 1882; first enforced 24 Feb. 1885; the closure made part of a standing order, 18, 19 March, 1887. By a new rule the power of closure was given to a house of 100, 28 Feb. 1888; and was frequently exercised in 1888, and since. See Parliament, 1887 and 1893.

CLOUD, St., a palace near Paris, named from prince Clodoald or Cloud, who became a monk there in 533, after the murder of his brothers, and died in 560. The palace was built in the 16th century, and in it Henry III. was stabbed by Clement, 1 Aug. (died 2 Aug.) 1589. This palace, long the property of the dukes of Orleans, was bought by Marie Antoinette in 1785. It was a favourite residence of the empress Josephine, of Charles X. and his family, and of the emperor Napoleon III. It was burnt during the siege of Paris, having been fired upon by the French themselves, 13 Oct. 1870. The ruins were cleared away, and the site sold, July, 1892.

CLOUDS consist of minute particles of water, often in a frozen state, floating in the air. In 1803 Mr. Luke Howard published his classification of clouds, now generally adopted, consisting of three primary forms—cirrus, cumulus, and stratus; three compounds of these forms; and the nimbus or black rain clouds (cumulo cirro-stratus.) A new edition of Howard's Essay on the Clouds appeared in 1865. Important international cloud work by prof. F. H. Bigelow; 10 standard types of clouds defined by the international cloud committee, taken during 1896; published by the U.S. Weather Bureau, 1900.

CLOVESHOO (now Cliff), Kent. Here was held an important council of nobility and clergy concerning the government and discipline of the church, Sept. 747; and others were held here, 800, 803, 822 824.

CLOYNE (S. Ireland), a bishopric, founded in the 7th century by St. Coleman, was in 1431 united to that of Cork, and so continued for 200 years. It was united with that of Cork and Ross, 1834; see Bishops.

CLUB-FOOT, a deformity due to the shortening of one or more of the muscles, although attempted to be relieved by Lorenz in 1784, by cutting the tendo Achillis, was not effectually cured till 1831, when Stromeyer of Erlangen cured Dr. Little by dividing the tendons of the contracted muscles with a very thin knife.

CLUBMEN, associations founded in the southern and western counties of England, to restrain the excesses of the armies during the civil wars, 1642-9. They professed neutrality, but inclined towards the king, and were considered enemies by his opponents.

CLUBS, originally consisted of a small number of persons of kindred tastes and pursuits, who met together at stated times for social intercourse. The club at the Mermaid tavern, established about the end of the 16th century, consisted of Raleigh, Shakespeare, and others. Ben Jonson set up a club at the Devil tavern. Addison, Steele, and others, frequently met at Button's coffee-house, as described in the Spectator. Some odd clubs are described in No. 9 of that journal, 10 March, 1710-11. The present London clubs, some comprising 500, others about 6000 members, possess handsome, luxuriously furnished edifices in or near Pall Mall. The members obtain choice viands and wines at moderate charges, and many clubs possess excellent libraries, particularly the Athenæum (which see). The annual payment varies from 3*l.* 3*s.* to 11*l.* 11*s.*; the entrance fee from 5*l.* 5*s.* to 42*l.* A bill for the registration of clubs was read a second time in the commons, 22 March, 1893. The following are the principal clubs; several are described in separate articles:—

CLUBS, FRENCH. The first arose about 1782. They were essentially political, and greatly concerned in the revolution. The Club Breton became the celebrated Club des Jacobins, and the Club des Cordeliers comprised among its members Danton and Camille Desmoulins. From these two came the Mountain party which overthrew the Girondists in 1793, and fell in its turn in 1794. The clubs disappeared with the Directory in 1799. They were revived in 1848, but did not attain to their former eminence, and were suppressed by decrees, 22 June, 1849, and 6 June, 1850. Bouillet.

CLUGNY or CLUNY, ABBEY OF, in France, formerly most magnificent, founded by Benedictines, under the abbot Bern, about 910, and sustained afterwards by William, duke of Berry and Aquitaine. English foundations for Cluniac monks were instituted soon after.

CLYDE AND FORTH WALL was built by Agricola, 84. The Forth and Clyde CANAL was commenced by Mr. Smeaton, 10 July, 1768, and was opened 28 July, 1790. It forms a communication between the seas on the eastern and western coasts of Scotland.

CNIDUS, in Caria, Asia Minor: near here Conon the Athenian defeated the Lacedæmonian fleet, under Peisander, 394 B.C.

COACH (from coche, Spanish). Beckmann states that Charles of Anjou's queen entered Naples in a caretta (about 1282). Under Francis I. there were two in Paris, one belonging to the queen, the other to Diana, the natural daughter of Henry II. There were but three in Paris in 1550; and Henry IV. had one without straps or springs. John de Laval de Bois-Dauphin set up a coach on account of his enormous bulk. The first coach seen in England was about 1553. Coaches were introduced by Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel, in 1580. Stow. A bill was brought into parliament to prevent the effeminacy of men riding in coaches, 43 Eliz. 1601. Carte. Repealed 1625. The coach of the duke of Buckingham had six horses, that of the earl of Northumberland eight, 1619. The coach-tax commenced in 1747. Horace Walpole says that the present royal state coach (first used 16 Nov. 1762) cost 7,528*l.* The lord mayor's old state coach was not used 9 Nov. 1867; see Car, Carriages, Chariots, Hackney Coaches, Mail Coaches, &c.

A private university teacher is termed a "Coach." Dr. Edward John Routh, of Cambridge, out of 631 pupils produced 27 senior wranglers, 1858-58.

COAL.* It is contended, with much seeming truth, that coal, although not mentioned by the Romans in their notices of Britain, was yet in use by the ancient Britons. Brandt. Henry III. is said to have granted a licence to dig coals near Newcastle-upon-Tyne in 1234; some say earlier, and others in 1239. Sea-coal was prohibited from being used in and near London, as being "prejudicial to human health;" and even smiths were obliged to burn wood, 1273. Stow. In 1306 the gentry petitioned against its use. Coal was first made an article of trade from Newcastle to London, 4 Rich II. 1381. Rymer's Fædera. Notwithstanding the many previous complaints against coal as a public nuisance, it was at length generally burned in London in 1400; but it was not in common use in England until the reign of Charles I. 1625. Coal was brought from Dublin to Newry in 1742. Coal declared a contraband of war by Great Britain, April, 1898.

The coal-fields of Great Britain are estimated at 5400 square miles: of Durham and Northumberland, 723 square miles. Bakewell. In 1857 about 65½ millions of tons were extracted (value about 16,348,676*l.*) from 2095 collieries; about 25 millions are consumed annually in Great Britain.

Mr. Sopwith, in 1855, computed the annual product of the coal-mines of Durham and Northumberland at 14 million tons:—6 millions for London, 2½ millions exported, 2½ millions for coke, 1 million for colliery engines, &c., and two millions for local consumption.

* There are five kinds of fossil fuel: anthracite, coal, lignite, bituminous shale, and bitumen. No satisfactory definition of coal has yet been given. The composition of wood is 49.1 carbon, 6.3 hydrogen, 44.6 oxygen; of coal 82.6 carbon, 5.6 hydrogen, 11.8 oxygen.

By a stipulation in the commercial treaty of 1860, in consequence of the French government greatly reducing the duty on imported coal, the British government (it is thought by many imprudently) engaged to lay no duty on exported coal for ten years. In 1859 about 7,000,000 tons of British coals were exported, of which 1,391,009 tons went to France; over 8,000,000 tons sent in 1900.

A commission (consisting of the duke of Argyll, sir R. I. Murchison, Dr. John Percy, professor Ramsay, and others) appointed to investigate into the probable quantity of coal in the coal-fields of the United Kingdom, &c. 28 June, 1866, reported 27 July, 1871:—

	TONS
Attainable quantity of coal known	90,207,000,000
Probable available coal in other places	56,273,000,000
	146,480,000,000

Sale of Coal Regulation Act

The duties on the exportation of British coal, which had existed since the 16th century, were practically repealed

Women were prohibited from working in English collieries in

Sir R. Peel imposed a duty of 4s. a ton in 1842; caused much dissatisfaction; repealed

The consumption of coal in France in 1780, only 400,000 tons, rises to 6,000,000 tons in

The United States produced between 8 and 9 millions of tons: Belgium, 5,000,000; and France, 4,500,000.

An Act for the regulation and inspection of mines passed

COAL EXCHANGE, London, established by 47 Geo. III. c. 68 (1807). The present building (a most interesting structure) was erected by Mr. J. B. Bunning, and opened by prince Albert 30 Oct. 1849.

COAL-WHIPPERS' BOARD, to protect the men employed in unloading coal-vessels from publicans, formed by an act of parliament in 1843, lasted till 1856, when the coal-owners themselves established a whipping office.

COAL DUES, on coal entering the port of London for metage are mentioned in 1444. The right of the Corporation to 4*d*. per chaldron was established in 1591. The amount of the tax and the term of levying it have been frequently changed since 1694. In 1831, the tax was directed to be levied on all coals entering London by water or railways, to be regulated by weight and not by measure. The tax of 13*d*. per ton by the act of 1868 extended to 5 July, 1889. The receipts in 1885 amounted to 449,343*l*. Later the money was expended on extensive City improvements. Much discussion on the subject, 1887-9.

An act for the abolition of these dues received the royal assent 9 July, 1889. Provision was made for the continuance of these dues another year to enable the corporation to pay debts due for the Holborn Viaduct and various city improvements. They ceased 5 July, 1890. Tax of 1*s*. per ton on exported coal, 18 March, see Budget, 26 July, 1901, repealed by the Budget of 1907-8. It produced, in six years, a total of 11,086,649*l*.

COALING STATIONS, for supplying ships of the navy and the mercantile marine, are established by the British government at important parts of the empire. Many of these stations are fortified, and in the event of war would be of the first importance to the navy as points of refuge, defence, and repair, as Aden, Hong Kong, Singapore, St. Helena, Simon's Town, and other stations.

COALITIONS AGAINST FRANCE generally arose through England subsidising the great powers of the continent. See Treaties.

COBURG see Saxe-Coburg.

COCA, a powerful narcotic existing in the Erythroxylon Coca, a South American plant known in 1580; men taking a little of this are enabled to endure hard labour without any food for six or seven days and nights. Dr. Mantegazza's prize essay in German was published at Vienna in 1849. Cocaine, an anæsthetic obtained from this plant, is used in operations of the eye and mucous membranes. The habitual use of cocaine produces cocainism, which induces deterioration of the moral sense and various nervous conditions.

COCCEIANS, a small sect founded by John Cocceius, of Bremen, in the seventeenth century. He held, amongst other opinions, that of a visible reign of Christ in this world, after a general conversion of the Jews and all other people to the Christian faith. He died in 1665.

COCHEREL (near Evreux, N. W. France). Here Bertrand du Guesclin defeated the king of Navarre, and took prisoner the capital de Buch, 16 May, 1364.

COCHIN (India), held by the Portuguese, 1503; by the Dutch, 1663; by Hyder Ali, 1776; taken by the British, 1796; ceded to them, 1814.

COCHIN CHINA, previously province of Annam, was acquired by the French in 1861-62, and their sovereignty recognized by treaty, 25 Aug. 1884; by China, 9 June, 1885. Population, 1885, 1,792,933; 1901, 2,968,529. Capital, Saigon; population, 1910 (est.), 20,250. Lieut.-gov. M. Ducos, 1895; M. Picanon, 1900; M. Rodier, 1902. See Indo-China.

COCHINEAL INSECT (Coccus cacti), deriving its colour from feeding on the cactus, became known to the Spaniards soon after their conquest of Mexico in 1518. Cochineal was brought to Europe about 1523, but was not known in Italy in 1548, although the art of dyeing then flourished there.

In 1858 it was cultivated successfully in Teneriffe, the vines having failed through disease. 260,000 lbs. of cochineal were imported into England in 1830; 1,081,776 lbs. in 1845; 428,176 lbs. in 1899. The use of cochineal has been much replaced by the coal tar colours. Duty repealed 1845.

COCKER'S ARITHMETIC. Edward Cocker, an eminent penman, born 1631, died 1675, compiled a book which first appeared in 1677, edited by John Hawkins.

COCKERTON CASE, see Education, 1900.

COCK-FIGHTING, practised by the Greeks, was brought by the Romans into England. William Fitz-Stephen, in the reign of Henry II., describes cock-fighting as the sport of school-boys on Shrove-Tuesday. It was prohibited by Edward III. 1365; by Henry VIII.; and by Cromwell, 1653, and latterly in 1849. Part of the site of Drury-lane theatre was a cock-pit in the reign of James I., and the Cock-pit at Whitehall was erected by Charles II. Formerly there was a Cock-pit-Royal in St. James's Park; but the governors of Christ's Hospital would not renew the lease for the building. Cock-fighting is now forbidden by law. On 22 April, 1865, 34 persons were fined at Marlborough-street police-office for being present at a cock-fight. It was popular in New York, 1873. Still occasional "mains" in north of England.

COCK-LANE GHOST, an imposition practised by William Parsons, his wife, and daughter, by means of a female ventriloquist, during 1760 and 1761, at No. 33, Cock-lane, London, was at length detected, and the parents were condemned to the pillory and imprisonment, 16 July, 1762.

COCOA or CACAO, the kernel or seed of Theobroma Cacao (Linn.), was introduced into this country shortly after the discovery of Mexico, where it is an article of diet. From cocoa is produced chocolate. The cocoa imported into the United Kingdom, chiefly from the British West Indies, the Congo and Guiana, was in 1849, 1,280,477 lbs.; in 1855, 7,343,458 lbs.; in 1866, 10,308,278 lbs.; in 1876, 20,443,591 lbs.; in 1887, 27,352,568 lbs.; in 1896, 38,281,803 lbs.; in 1900, 52,047,318 lbs.; in 1904, 60,008,704 lbs.; in 1905, 54,107,990 lbs.; in 1907, 51,670,321 lbs.; in 1907, 57,108,050 lbs.; in 1908, 66,833,413 lbs.

COCOA-NUT TREE (Cocos nucifera, Linn.), supplies the Indians with almost all they need—bread, water, wine, vinegar, brandy, milk, oil, honey, sugar, needles, clothes, thread, cups, spoons, basins, baskets, paper, masts for ships, sails, cordage, nails, covering for their houses, &c. Ray. In Sept. 1829, Mr. Soames patented his mode of procuring stearine and elaine from cocoa-nut oil.

CODES, see Laws. Alfrenus Varus, the civilian, first collected the Roman laws about 66 B.C.; and Servius Sulpicius, the civilian, embodied them about 53 B.C. The Gregorian and Hermoginian codes were published A.D. 290; the Theodosian code commenced by order of Theodosius II. in 429; and published for the eastern empire in 438. In 447 he transmitted to Valentinian his new constitutions promulgated as the law of the west in 448. The celebrated code of the emperor Justinian in 529—a digest from this last made in 533; see Basilica. Alfred's code, a selection from existing laws, is the foundation of the common law of England, 887.—The CODE NAPOLEON, the civil code of France, was promulgated from 1803 to 1810. The emperor considered it his most enduring monument. It was prepared under his supervision by the most eminent jurists, from the 400 systems previously existing, and has been adopted by other countries. For Code telegrams, see Telegraphs.

CŒUR DE LION or THE LION-HEARTED, a surname given to Richard I. of England, on account of his courage, about 1192; and also to Louis VIII. of France, who signified himself in the crusades, and in his wars against England, about 1223.

COFFEE. The tree was conveyed from Mocha in Arabia to Holland about 1616; and carried to the West Indies in 1726. First cultivated at Surinam by the Dutch, 1718. The culture was encouraged in the plantations about 1732, and the British and French colonies now grow coffee abundantly. Its use as a beverage is traced to the Persians. It came into great repute in Arabia Felix about 1454; and passed thence into Egypt and Syria, and thence (in 1511) to Constantinople, where a coffee-house was opened in 1551. M. Thevenot, the traveller, first brought it to France, 1662. The existence of coffee-houses or cafés in Turkey is mentioned by Burton, 1621, and Bacon, 1627. They were introduced in Venice, 1645.

COFFERER OF THE HOUSEHOLD, formerly an officer of state, and a member of the privy council, who had special charge of the other officers of the household. Sir Henry Cocks was cofferer to queen Elizabeth. In 1782 the office was suppressed.

COFFINS. Athenian heroes were buried in coffins of cedar, owing to its aromatic and incorruptible qualities. Thucydides. Coffins of marble and stone were used by the Romans. Alexander is said to have been buried in one of gold; and glass coffins have been found in England. Gough. Patent coffins were invented in 1796; air-tight metallic coffins advertised at Birmingham in 1861. Coffins of wickerwork have been invented, but have not come into general use.

COIF. The serjeant's coif was introduced before 1259, to hide the tonsure of such clergymen as chose to remain advocates in the secular courts, notwithstanding their prohibition by canon. Blackstone. The coif was at first a thin linen cover gathered together in the form of a skull or helmet, the material being afterwards changed into white silk, and the form eventually into the black patch at the top of the forensic wig, which is now the distinguishing mark of the degree of serjeant-at-law. Foss's Lives of the Judges.

COIMBRA was made the capital of Portugal by Alfonso, the first king, 1139, and remained so for about 250 years; many of the early kings of Portugal are interred here. The only Portuguese university was transferred from Lisbon, where it was originally established 1288, to Coimbra in 1308; finally settled in 1527. In a convent here, Alfonso IV. caused Izêz de Castro, at first mistress and afterwards wife of his son Pedro, to be cruelly murdered in 1355. Fatal riots against the rates mid-March, 1903. Population, 1900, 18,144.

COIN. Homer speaks of brass money, 1184 B.C. The invention of coin is ascribed to the Lydians, whose money was of gold and silver. Both were coined by Pheidon, tyrant of Argos, about 862 B.C. Money was coined at Rome under Servius Tullius, about 573 B.C. The most ancient known coins are Macedonian of the 5th century B.C. Brass money only was in use at Rome previously to 269 B.C. (when Fabius Pictor coined silver). Gold was coined 206 B.C. Iron money was used in Sparta, and iron and tin in Britain. Dufresnoy. In the earlier days of Rome the heads were those of deities, or of those who had received divine honours. Julius Cæsar first obtained permission of the senate to place his portrait on the coins, and the example was soon followed. The Britons and Saxons coined silver.—Rev. Roger Ruding's "Annals of the Coinage of Great Britain," published 1817-40.—The gold and silver coinage in the world is about 250,000,000l. silver, and 150,000,000l. gold. Times, 25 June, 1852. See Gold, Silver, Copper and Guineas, and other coins under names. An international conference relative to a universal system of coinage met at Paris in 1867; and a royal commission was appointed in London, Feb. 1868. £ for libra, Roman pound of 12 ounces; s. for solidi (Anglo-Saxon scill or scilling); d. for denarii, the Roman penny.

COINAGE. Originally the metal was placed between two steel dies, and struck by a hammer. In 1553, a mill, invented by Antoine Brucher, introduced into England, 1562. An engine invented by Balancier, 1617. Great improvements effected by Boulton and Watt, at Soho, 1788. The erection of the Mint machinery, London, began 1811. The machinery was re-organised in 1869.

COLCHESTER (Essex), Camulodunum, a Roman station, obtained its first charter from Richard I., 1189. Its sixteen churches and all its buildings sustained great damage at the ten weeks' siege, June-Aug. 1648. Two of its defenders, sir George Lisle and sir Charles Lucas, were tried and shot after surrendering. The baize manufacture was established here, 1660. Anderson. The railway to London was opened in 1843. A great fire; several business establishments destroyed, about 25,000*l.* damage, 18 Aug. 1882. Foundation stone of a new town hall laid by the duke of Cambridge, 31 Oct., 1898; opened by lord Rosebery, who was presented with the freedom of the city, 15 May, 1902. Treasure trove of 10,000 silver groats discovered, July, 1902. Population in 1901, 38,373. See Earthquakes, 22 April, 1884.

COLCHIS, N.W. Asia, now Mingrelia. See Argonautic Expedition.

COLD. On 3 Jan. 1854, the thermometer in London marked 8° below zero, Fahrenheit; on 25 Dec. 1860, it fell (on the grass) at Nottingham, to 13° 8' Fahr. Mr. Lowe. From 23 to 30 Dec. the cold was excessive. On 4 Jan. 1867, the thermometer stood at 3° below zero at Hammersmith and Hornsey, near London; on 7 Jan., at 55° above.

Very cold Nov. 1878—May 1879, and Nov. 1879—Feb. 1880.

The December of 1879 said to be the coldest since 1796. Temperature said to have been on 10 Jan. 13° Fahr. at Stepney, London, 1881; Cambridge, 4° Fahr; Oxford, 9° Fahr; London, 16° Fahr. 21 Dec. 1890.

The summer of 1888 exceptionally cold in Europe; London, 11 July, temperature from 42° 8' to 55° 7' (Jan. 1, 1877, from 49° 3' to 54° 0' Fahr.)—(G. J. Symons).

Very cold throughout the continent; the Danube, Elbe, Rhine, Seine and other rivers frozen; heavy falls of snow, Jan. 1891.

COLDINGHAM, near Berwick, is celebrated for the heroism of its nuns, who, on the attack of the Danes, to disfigure themselves, cut off their noses and lips. The Danes burnt them all, with the abbess Ebba, in their monastery, 870.

COLDSTREAM GUARDS. General Monk, before marching from Scotland into England to restore Charles II., raised this regiment at Coldstream, at the confluence of the Leet and Tweed, 1660. For its services in suppressing Venner's insurrection in 1661, it was not disbanded, but constituted the 2nd regiment of foot guards. There are 3 battalions, and on the regimental colours are 16 war honours. It is a tradition that since the regiment's foundation there has always been a "Monk" serving. Col. Ross-of-Bladenburg's "History of the Coldstream Guards," published Dec. 1896.

COLEY'S FLUID, a fluid obtained by the culture of the bacilli of erysipelas, streptococci, and staphylococci, used in the treatment of cancer.

COLIN, see Kolin.

COLISEUM or COLOSSEUM, at Rome, an elliptical amphitheatre, of which the external diameter is 1641 Italian feet, supposed to have been able to contain 80,000 spectators of the fights with wild beasts, and other sports in the arena. It was erected between 75 (some say 77) and 80, by the emperors Vespasian and Titus, at an expense sufficient to have built a metropolis. Its remains are very imposing. Excavations have been made since 1874.

COLISEUM, in St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross, built on the site of old Roman ruins, was opened 24 Dec., 1904, as a variety theatre.

COLLAR, a very ancient ornament. The Roman hero Titus Manlius slew a gigantic Gaul in single combat, and put his torques (twisted chain or collar) on his own neck, and was hence surnamed Torquatus, 361 B.C. A collar is part of the ensigns of the order of knighthood. That of the order of the garter is described, and its wearing enjoined, in the statutes of Henry VIII., 24 April, 1522; but a collar had been previously worn. Ashmole. The collar of SS. was adopted by Henry IV., and became a Lancastrian badge; some consider the letters stand for "sovereigne," in reference to his claim to the crown. Some writers consider SS. to be in honour of St. Simplicius, a martyr. The order of the Collar or Necklace (or Annonciata) was instituted by Amadeus VI. of Savoy, about 1360.

COLLECTIVISTS, a name adopted by some socialists, who opened their fourth congress at Calais, 13 Oct., 1890. Collectivism is a name given to a scheme for reconstituting society, by union of individuals together for mutual benefit, in 1894.

COLLECTS, short prayers, very ancient, introduced into the Roman service by pope Gelasius, about 493, and into the English liturgy in 1548. The king of England coming into Normandy, appointed a collect for the relief of the Holy Land, 1166. Rapin.

COLLEGES, from the Latin collegium, assemblages of persons for some specific study or purpose. In Roman law the term corresponded to our word corporation, but the English word college has become chiefly identified with purposes of training or study. University education preceded the erection of colleges, which were foundations to relieve the students from the expense of living at lodging-houses and at inns. On the Continent collegiate or academic degrees are said to have been first conferred at the University of Paris, 1140; but some authorities say not before 1215. In England it is contended that the date is much earlier, and some hold that Bede obtained a degree formally at Cambridge, and John de Beverley at Oxford, and that they were the first doctors of these universities. Many of the older public schools contain the word college as part of their formal title, and many more modern establishments, which are, strictly speaking, schools rather than colleges, have adopted the same title. See Education, and also Universities, Schools, Oxford, Cambridge, Law, Medicine, Science, Women's, Military, Naval, Music, Agriculture, Technical, Veterinary, Theological, Heraldry, Preceptors, Secondary Education.

College de France, the name given about 1793 to the Collège Royal, which in the 16th century was formed by the incorporation of the "king's readers" or professors, and settled at Paris, independently of the universities. The college was much favoured by the Directory and Napoleon I. It is supported by the state, and the lectures, by eminent men, are free.

COLLISIONS, see Seas, and Railways.

COLLODION, a film obtained from the solution of gun-cotton in ether. The iodised collodion, extensively employed in photography, was invented by Mr. F. Scott Archer, March, 1851. On the premature death of himself and wife, a pension of 50*l.* per annum was granted by government to his three orphan children.

COLLYRIDIANs, Arab heretics who offered collyrides, little cakes, to the Virgin Mary as a goddess in the 4th century.

COLMAR, W. Germany; an imperial city 13th century; taken by the Swedes, 1632; by Louis XIV. of France, who destroyed the fortifications, 1673; ceded to France, 1697; with Alsace, restored to Germany, 1871.

COLNEY HATCH, Middlesex. County lunatic asylum here erected, 1851; see Fires, 27 Jan. 1903.

COLOGNE (Colonia Agrippina), on the Rhine, the site of a colony founded by the empress Agrippina, about 50; an imperial town, 957; a member of the Hanseatic league, 1260. Many ecclesiastical councils held here, 782-1536. The Jews were expelled from it in 1485, and the Protestants in 1618, and it then fell into decay. Cologne was taken by the French under Jourdan, Oct. 1794. The archbishopric secularised, 1801; assigned to Prussia, 1814. Population in 1885, 161,401; in 1895, 321,564; 1900, 372,228; 1905, 428,722.

COLON (:). The colon and period were adopted by Thrasymachus about 373 B.C. (Suidas), and known to Aristotle. The colon and semicolon (;) first used in British literature in the 16th century. For Colon, a S. American seaport, see Panama.

COLONEL (from Italian colonna, a column), the highest regimental military officer. The term had become common in England in the 16th century.

COLONIAL COLLEGE, THE, was founded 1887 to train youths for colonial life. The course of instruction is scientific and practical, and includes veterinary science, hygiene, surveying, farming, fruit culture, dairy keeping, and other branches of agricultural knowledge. The college is at Hollesley Bay, Suffolk, with an estate of 2000 acres.

COLONIES. The Phœnician and Greek colonies, frequently founded by political exiles, soon became independent of the mother country. The Roman colonies, on the contrary, continued in close connection with Rome itself, being governed almost entirely by military law.—THE COLONIES OF GREAT BRITAIN partake of both these characters. The N. American colonies revolted in consequence of the attempt at taxation without their consent in 1764. The loyal condition of the present colonies now is due to the gradual relaxation of the pressure of the home government. The population of the British colonies in all parts of the world was estimated, in 1861, at 142,952,243; in 1888, 275,520,216; in 1910, 352,750,000. The revenue of the colonies was estimated in 1865 to be 51,492,000*l.*; in 1908, 173,979,765*l.*; the expenditure, in 1865, 59,353,000*l.*; in 1908, 172,868,146*l.* Total imports from the United Kingdom, 1908, 161,376,328*l.*; exports to the United Kingdom, 193,538,434*l.* The act for the abolition of slavery in the British colonies, and for compensation to the owners of slaves (20,000,000*l.* sterling), was passed in 1833. All the slaves throughout the British colonies were emancipated on 1 Aug. 1834. Germany and other powers showed great desire for colonization in 1834-5 et seq. See Holland and Germany.

Resolution of House of Commons recognises the claims of colonies to protection from consequences of imperial policy, but "is of opinion that colonies exercising rights of self-government ought to undertake the main responsibility of providing for their own internal order and security, and ought to assist in their own external defence" 1862

COLORADO BEETLE, so called from its striped colouring, was first found in Wisconsin, was described by Thomas Say, and named Doryphora decemlineata, in 1824, when he found it near the Upper Missouri. It soon took to feeding on potatoes, as they were planted, and gradually proceeded eastward through Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, &c., to the New England states, destroying the crops, 1859 et seq. In 1873 it reached New York, and the Atlantic seaboard in 1874, swarming there in 1876, and attacking Canada. The fear of its invading Britain led to an order in council respecting its destruction, &c., 14 Aug. 1877. Very few specimens arrived. Discovered among potatoes at Tilbury dock, crops and grass promptly destroyed in the infected area, reported, 3 Sept. 1901; again there May, 1902.

COLOSSEUM, see Coliseum. The building in Regent's Park, London, was planned by Mr. Hornor, a land surveyor, and commenced, in 1824, by Peto and Grissell, from designs by Decimus Burton. The chief portion was a polygon of 16 faces, 126 feet in diameter externally: the walls were three feet thick at the ground: the height to the glazed dome 112 feet. On the canvas walls of the dome was painted the panoramic view of London, completed in 1829 from sketches by Mr. Hornor taken from the summit of St. Paul's cathedral in 1821-2. The picture covered above 46,000 square feet, more than an acre of canvas. The different parts were combined by Mr. E. T. Parris, who in 1845 repainted the whole. In 1848 a panorama of Paris was exhibited; succeeded, in 1850, by the lake of Thun in Switzerland; in 1851 the panorama of London was reproduced. In 1848 the theatre, with the panorama of Lisbon, was added. In 1831, when Mr. Hornor failed, the establishment was sold for 40,000*l.* to Messrs. Braham and Yates. In 1843 it was bought by Mr. D. Montague for 23,000 guineas. Timbs. After having been long closed, the building was opened to the public at Christmas, 1856, at one shilling. Under the charge of Dr. Bachhoffner, it continued open till the spring of 1864, when it was again closed. The sale of the site was announced 1870. It was announced in Dec. 1871 that a company was about to transform the building and grounds into club-chambers, baths, a winter garden, &c. In 1874, it was sold; large mansions have been erected on the site.

COLOSSUS OF RHODES, a brass statue of Apollo, seventy cubits high, esteemed one of the wonders of the world, was erected at the port of Rhodes in honour of the sun, by Chares of Lindus, disciple of Lysippus, 290 or 288 B.C. It was thrown down by an earthquake about 224 B.C. The figure is said mythically to have stood upon two moles, a leg being extended on each side of the harbour, so that a vessel in full sail could enter between. The statue was in ruins for nearly nine centuries, and had never been repaired; when the Saracens, taking Rhodes, pulled it to pieces, and sold the metal, weighing 720,900 lbs., to a Jew, who is said to have loaded 900 camels in transporting it to Alexandria about 653. Dufresnoy.

COLOSSUS, the ninth British battleship of the Dreadnought type. The length of the ship is 545 ft. The vessel was launched on the Clyde, 9 April, 1910.

COLOUR is to light what pitch is to sound, according to the undulatory theory of Huyghens (about 1678), established by Dr. T. Young and others. The shade varies according to the number of vibrations. 458 millions of millions of vibrations in a second attributed to the red end of the spectrum; to the violet, 727; see Spectrum.*

* Some persons (about 65 out of 1154) cannot distinguish between colours, and are termed Colour blind. The defect said to have been first described by Priestley, Phil. Trans. 1777. In 1859, professor J. Clerk Maxwell invented spectacles to remedy this defect, which is also called "Daltonism," after John Dalton, the chemist, to COLUMBIA, a federal district round the city of Washington in Maryland; established 1800. Slavery was abolished in 1862. Population in 1880, 177,624; 1890, 230,392; 1900, 278,718; 1908, 339,403 (including 97,483 negroes), see British Columbia.

COLUMBIA MARKET, Bethnal Green, E. London; erected by Mr. Darbishire, architect, in the pointed Gothic style, and inaugurated by Miss (afterwards baroness) Burdett-Coutts, 28 April, 1869. It cost her 200,000*l.* It was opened as a wholesale fish-market, 21 Feb. 1870, but was not successful. On 3 Nov. 1871, baroness Burdett-Coutts presented the market to the corporation of London, and on 18 July, 1872, she received publicly the freedom of that city. The market was never a success, and eventually the building was converted into industrial dwellings.

COLUMBIUM, a metal discovered by C. Hatchett, in a mineral named columbite, in 1801. It is identical with niobium, and not with tantalum, as supposed by some chemists. Watts.

COLUMBUS, capital of Ohio, U.S.A., founded in 1812, is the seat of important manufactures. Population, 1900, 125,560; 1906 (est.), 145,414. Columbus celebrations, see Spain, United States, Genoa, Chicago, &c., 1892.

COMBAT, SINGLE. Trial by this commenced by the Lombards, 659. Baronius. It was introduced into England for accusations of treason, if neither the accuser nor the accused could produce good evidence; see Appeal of Battle.

A battle by single combat was fought before the king, William II., and the peers, between Geoffrey Baynard and William, earl of Eu, who was accused by Baynard of high treason; and Baynard having conquered, Eu was deemed convicted, and blinded and mutilated, 1096.

A combat proposed between Henry of Bolingbroke, duke of Hereford (afterwards Henry IV.), and Thomas, duke of Norfolk, was forbidden by Richard II. Sept. 1398.

A trial was appointed between the prior of Kilmainham and the earl of Ormond, the former having impeached the latter of high treason quarrel taken up by the king, decided without fighting, 1446.

A combat was proposed between lord Reay and Mr. David Ramsey, in 1631, but the king prevented it.

In a combat in Dublin castle, before the lords justices and council, between Connor MacCormack O'Connor and Teig Mac-Gilpatrick O'Connor, the former had his head cut off, and presented to the lords, 1553.

COMBINATION. Laws were enacted from the time of Edward I. downwards, regulating the price of labour and the relations between masters and workmen, and prohibiting the latter from combining for their own protection. The combination laws, consolidated in 1799 and 1800, were repealed in 1825, due protection being given to both parties. The act was amended in 1859 by 22 Vict. c. 34, when the subject was much discussed, in consequence of the strike in the building trades, see Trades Unions and Strikes.

COMÉDIE FRANÇAISE, Paris, established 1680.

At the death of Molière in 1673, his company of actors, at the Palais Royal, separated into two bodies. The fusion of these formed the French National Theatre, founded by Louis XIV. by a decree 18 Aug., first performance 25 Aug. 1680; the actors, 15 men and 12 women, being the best of the time. The theatre was much depressed in the king's last years; revived under Louis XV.; ceased in 1799; restored in 1803; and established in the Théâtre Français, Paris.

The company visited London in 1789; first appearance at the Gaiety, 2 June, 1789; eminent actors, Madame Sarah Bernhardt, MM. Got (died 21 March, 1901), DeLannay, and Coquelin, and Miles. Brohan and Favart.

The 200th anniversary of the establishment celebrated 21 Oct. et seq., 1880.

The Théâtre Français burnt down, Mlle. Henriot, a young actress, killed, 8 March, 1900. New theatre opened, state performance, 29 Dec. 1900.

COMEDY. Thalia is the muse of comedy and lyric poetry. Susarion and Dolon, the reputed inventors of theatrical exhibitions, 578 B.C., performed the first comedy at Athens, on a waggon or movable stage, on four wheels, for which they were rewarded with a basket of figs and a cask of wine; see Arun-delian Marbles, and Drama.

Comedy, for libel, prohibited at Athens, 440 B.C. Aristophanes called the prince of ancient comedy, 434 B.C., and Menander that of the new, 320 B.C. Of Plautus, 20 comedies are extant; he flourished 220 B.C. Statius Cæcilius wrote upwards of 30 comedies; flourished at Rome 180 B.C.

Comedies of Lælius and Terence first acted 154 B.C. First regular comedy performed in England about A.D. 1551.

It was said of Sheridan that he wrote the best comedy (the School for Scandal), the best opera (the Duenna), and the best afterpiece (the Critic), in the English language (1775-1779).

COMETS (Greek come, a hair). See Astron. Soc. Mr. Hind, in his little work on comets, gave a chronological list (1852). The spectrum analysis of Donati (1864), Dr. Wm. Huggins, and Dr. William Allen Miller in 1866 et seq., and others, indicate in comets the presence of gaseous matter in a state of incandescence, giving spectra, chiefly composed of bright bands due to hydro-carbons. The comet of Sept. 1882 showed spectra also of iron and sodium. There are 11 periodic comets of which the return has been observed, 1905.

The Chinese annalists give early accounts of comets. Aristotle describes one which appeared B.C. 371. At the birth of the great Mithridates two (probably only one) large comets appeared, which were seen for seventy-two days together, whose splendour eclipsed that of the mid-day sun, and occupied the fourth part of the heavens, about 134 B.C. Justin.

A grand comet seen, 1264. It is considered to have reappeared in 1556, with diminished splendour; and was expected to appear again about Aug. 1858 or Aug. 1860. Hind.

A remarkable one seen in England, June, 1337. Stow. Tycho Brahe demonstrated that comets are extraneous to our atmosphere, about 1577.

A comet observed by Tycho Brahe and others in 1556.

A comet which terrified the people from its near approach to the earth was visible from 3 Nov. 1679 to 9 March, 1680. It enabled Newton to demonstrate that comets, as well as planets, are subject to the law of gravitation, and most probably move in elliptic orbits, 1704.

A comet first seen by Klinkenberg at Haarlem, 9 Dec. 1743.

HAILEY'S COMET, 1682. Named after one of the greatest astronomers of England. He first proved that many of the appearances of comets were but the periodical returns of the same bodies, and he demonstrated that the comet of 1682 was the same with the comet of 1456, 1531, and 1607, deducing this fact from a minute observation of the first-mentioned comet, and being struck by its wonderful resemblance to the comets described as having appeared in those years: Halley, therefore, first fixed the identity of comets, and predicted their periodical returns. Vince's Astronomy. The revolution of Halley's comet is performed in about 75 years; it appeared (as he had predicted) in 1758, and came to its perihelion on March 13; it next appeared in 1835 and last in 1909-10. Seen at the Königstuhl observatory, Heidelberg, 12 Sept. 1909. Seen by Mr. Newall at the Cambridge observatory, 21 Oct. 1909.

A most brilliant comet appeared in 1769, which passed within two millions of miles of the earth, first seen by Messier 8 Aug. This beautiful comet, moving with immense swiftness, was seen in London; its tail stretched across the heavens like a prodigious luminous arch, 36,000,000 miles in length.

The computed length of that which appeared in 1811, and which was so remarkably conspicuous, was, on 15 Oct., according to the late Dr. Herschel, upwards of 100,000,000 miles, and its apparent greatest breadth, at the same time, 15,000,000 miles. It was visible all the autumn to the naked eye. Philos. Trans. Royal Soc. for 1812. Another comet, Dec. 1823.

ENCKE'S COMET was observed by Méchain in 1786, Miss Caroline Herschel in 1795, and Thulis in 1805; rediscovered by Pons, 26 Nov. 1818, but justly named by astronomers after professor Encke, for his success in detecting its orbit, motions, and perturbations; it is, like the preceding one of the three comets which have appeared according to prediction, and its revolutions are made in 3 years and 15 weeks. Thirteenth return observed at Copenhagen by M. d'Arrest, 20 July, 1863; observed in England, 14 Oct. 1871; seen 13 April, 1875; in New South Wales, 3 Aug. 1878; visible at Washington, &c., 18-21 Sept. 1881; imperfectly seen in Italy by Cerulli and others, 1 Nov. 1804; seen at Cambridge, Mass., 6 Aug.; and at Heidelberg, 9, 10 Aug. 1901.

BIELA'S COMET has been an object of fear to many on account of the nearness with which it has approached, not the earth, but a point of the earth's path; it was first discovered by M. Biela, an Austrian officer, 27 Feb. 1826. It is one of the three comets whose re-appearance was predicted, its revolution being performed in 6 years and 38 weeks. Its second appearance was in 1832, when the time of its perihelion passage was 27 Nov.; its third was in 1839; its fourth in 1845; and its fifth in 1852; it has since vanished.

Comet discovered by M. Faye at Paris, Nov. 1843; reappears every 7 years. Brorsen's comet discovered by him in 1846.

M. Babinet considered that comets had so little density that the earth might pass through the tail of one without our being aware of it, 4 May, 1857.

DONATI'S COMET, so called from its having been first observed by Dr. Donati, of Florence, 2 June, 1858, being then calculated to be 228,000,000 miles from our earth. It was very brilliant in England in the end of September and October following, when the tail was said to be 40,000,000 miles long. On the 10th of October it was nearest to the earth; on the 18th it was near coming into collision with Venus. Opinions varied as to this comet's brilliancy compared with that of 1811.

One discovered at Bonn by Dr. Winnecke, 13 June, 1858.

THE GREAT COMET of 1861 was first seen by Mr. Tebbutt at Sydney, in Australia, 13 May; by M. Goldschmidt and others in France and England on 29, 30 June. The nucleus was about 400 miles in diameter, with a long bush-like tail, travelling at the rate of 10,000,000 miles in 24 hours. On 30 June, it was suggested that we were in the tail—there being "a phosphorescent auroral glare."

A tailless comet was discovered in the constellation Cassiopeia, by M. Seeling, at Athens, on 2 July, and by M. Tempel, at Marseilles, 2 and 3 July, 1867.

A comet detected at Marathon, N.Y., by Mr. Swift, 15 July, and by Rosa, at Rome, on 25 July, 1862. It was visible to the naked eye in August and September.

Six telescopic comets were observed in 1863, and several in 1864.

A fine comet appeared in the southern hemisphere, and was visible in South America and Australia, in Jan.-Feb. 1865.

Schiaparelli, of Milan, discovered that the August meteors move round the sun in an orbit almost identical with the third comet of 1862.

One discovered at Bonn by Dr. Winnecke, 13 June, 1858. Several small comets discovered by various astronomers, 1873-81.

COGGIA'S COMET, discovered by him at Marseilles, 18 April, became visible (near Polar star) in London about 4 July; gradually increased in brightness, and passed out of sight in a few weeks, in Europe; and appeared brilliant at Melbourne, 1 Aug. 1874.

A bright comet appeared in the southern hemisphere, large nucleus, fan-shaped tail; visible in the southern hemisphere, May; in London, 22 June et seq. 1881.

DENNING's comet appears 4 Oct. 1881.

Another at Madeira, at Ealing, near London, &c. (probably that of 1843 and 1880) 17 Sept. 1882; at Paris, 27 Sept.; seen at Vienna, 29 Sept. 1882.

New comet discovered by prof. Barnard at Lick, 16 July, 1884.

New comet discovered at Heidelberg by Dr. Max Wolf, 17 Sept. 1884.

Another discovered by M. Fabry of Paris, 3 Dec. 1885; by Mr. Brooks of New York Jan. 1886.

Three comets visible, Brooks', Fabry's, and Barnard's, Jan.; increasing in brightness, May, 1886.

New comet discovered by Mr. Finlay of the Cape observatory 26 Sept. 1886.

One discovered by Mr. Brooks at Geneva, New York, 6 July, 1889.

A comet observed by Mr. Brooks at New York, 19 March; one by prof. Denning at Bristol, 23 July; one by prof. Zona at Palermo, 15 Nov. 1890.

Tempel Swift's comet (1869 and 1880) seen by Mr. Denning, 30 Sept., 1 Oct. 1891.

A comet observed by prof. Lewis Swift, 7 March; one by Mr. W. F. Denning near Bristol, 18 March, 1892.

Winnecke's comet observed by Dr. Spitaler, 18 March, 1892; one discovered by Mr. Edwin Holmes at Islington, London, 6 Nov. 1892.

A comet a discovered by Mr. Denning at Bristol, 26 March, 1894.

A comet b discovered by Mr. Gale, of Sydney, 3 April, 1894.

Numerous telescopic comets observed at different places in 1892-4.

Temple's comet (discovered by him at Milan, 3 July, 1873) seen again by Mr. Finlay at the Cape, 8 May, 1894; one discovered by Mr. E. Swift in California, 21 Nov., 1894.

One discovered by prof. L. Swift, California, 20 Sept. 1895; one discovered by Mr. Perrine at the Lick observatory, U.S.A., 16-17 Nov. 1895; one by prof. Brooks at Geneva, New York, 21 Nov. 1895.

One by Mr. Perrine at Lick, 14 Feb. 1896; one b discovered by prof. Swift at S. Carolina, 13 April, 1896; one by Mr. W. Sperra, Ohio, 31 Aug. 1896; one by M. Giacobini, 4 Sept. 1896; two near the sun by prof. L. Swift at Lick, 20 Sept. 1896; one f discovered by Mr. Perrine at Lick, California, 2 Nov. 1896; one g discovered by him at Lick, 9 Dec. 1896.

One a discovered by Mr. Perrine at Lick, 16 Oct. 1897; one b discovered by him there, 8 Dec., and another 20 March, 1898; one b by M. Giacobini, Nice, 18 June, 1898.

One a discovered by prof. L. Swift, California, 3 March, 1899; Tuttle's periodical comet b (first discovered by Méchain in 1790) detected by Dr. Wolf, 5 March; one c discovered by M. Giacobini, 30 Sept. 1899.

One a discovered by him, 31 Jan. 1900; one b by M. Borrelly at Marseilles, and Mr. Brooks at Geneva, N.Y., 23 July, 1900; one c by M. Giacobini at Nice, 20 Dec. 1900.

One a by Mr. A. Hill at Queenstown, S. Africa, and by Mr. Tattersall at Cape Leeuwin, Australia, 24 April, 1901.

One a by Mr. Brooks at Geneva, 15 April, 1902; b by Mr. Perrine at Lick, 1 Sept. 1902; c by Mr. Grigg at Marnes, N.Z., 22 July, 1902; d by M. Giacobini, Nice, 2 Dec. 1902, and remained visible until about the end of June, 1903.

The first comet of 1903 discovered on 15 January, by M. Giacobini, at Nice; one on 16 April, by Mr. Grigg, of Thames, New Zealand; one on 21 June, by M. Borrelly, of Marseilles; on 20 August, Mr. Aitken, of the Lick Observatory, found Brooks's comet.

The following comets have been discovered during the year 1904. One a by Mr. Brooks, at Geneva, U.S.A. on April 16; one on 17 December, by M. Giacobini at Nice; one on 30 December by M. Borrelly of Marseilles. Tempel's comet (1873 II) was found by M. Javelle at Nice on 30 November; Encke's comet was observed in November and December.

New comet discovered by M. Giacobini at Nice, 6 Dec. 1905.

MOORHOUSE COMET, discovered early Sept., distinctly visible to the naked eye, 23 Oct.; passes perihelion on 26 Dec., its distance from the sun at that point being 88,000,000 miles, so that it will be slightly inside the earth's orbit. Times, 23 Oct. 1908.

A faint comet of the 11th magnitude discovered by Mr. Daniel, of Princetown, New Jersey, on 6 Dec. 1909.

New comet observed by Mr. Drake at Johannesburg, 17 Jan. 1910.

COMMENDAM, "a benefice or church living, which, being void, is commended to the charge of some sufficient clerk, to be supplied until it may be conveniently supplied with a pastor." Blount. By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 77 (1836), future bishops were prohibited from holding in commendam the livings they held when consecrated.

COMMERCE early flourished in Arabia, Egypt, and among the Phœnicians, see the description of Tyre, 588 B.C., Ezek. xxvii. In later times it was spread over Europe by a confederacy of maritime cities, 1241 (see Hanse Towns); by the discoveries of Columbus; and by the enterprises of the Dutch and Portuguese; see Exports, Imports, and articles connected with this subject.

The first treaty of commerce made by England with any foreign nation was entered into with the Flemings, 1 Edw. I. 1272. The second was with Portugal and Spain, 2 Edw. II. 1308. Anderson; see Treaties. Hertlet's Collection, in 16 vols. 8vo, published 1828-85, has a copious index. (See French Treaty, 1860.)

Chambers of Commerce originated at Marseilles in the 14th century, and similar chambers were instituted in all the chief cities in France, about 1700
These chambers suppressed in 1791; restored by decrees 3 Sept. 1851

A chamber of commerce was started by John Weskett, merchant, he receiving payment, about 1782

The chamber of commerce at Glasgow was established 1783; at Edinburgh, 1785; Manchester, 1820; Hull, 1837; at Liverpool (mainly through the exertions of Professor Leone Levi) 1849

Associated (twenty-seven) chambers of commerce (not including Liverpool, Manchester, and Glasgow) met at Westminster for interchange of opinions on various questions, 21 Feb. 1865; annual and other meetings held since.

Congress of chambers of the empire, 1886; 28 June, 1892; 9 June, 1896. Fifth congress at Montreal, 17 Aug. 1903

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION: conference at the Mansion House to promote the scheme put forth by the London chamber of commerce, 5 Feb. 1890; another at the Guildhall, 9 July, 1898; reported successful Nov. 1899; 6th international congress at Venice, 4 May, 1899.

The London chamber of commerce constituted, Sept., issued prospectus about 10 Oct. 1881; 600 members first general meeting 25 Jan. 1882

First annual meeting, 24 Jan. 1883 (publishes its report of its special commission on secret commissions prevalent in all trades and said to be increasing March, 1899

The International Congress of Commercial Law met at Antwerp, 1885; Brussels 30 Sept. 1888

Australasian chamber of commerce founded in London 4 July, 1901

International Congress of Commerce at Brussels, 6-10 Sept. 1883; one at Philadelphia, mid Oct.-Nov. 1899; one at Ostend 26 Aug. 1902

Commercial Travellers' schools, Pinner, founded 1845; Benevolent Institution, Finsbury 1849

Commercial Travellers' Association founded in Manchester, 1883, has many branches in the country. See London Chamber of Arbitration.

Commercial Court. The judges of the Queen's Bench resolved, May, 1894, "That a Commercial Court should be constituted from amongst themselves; in 1895 they laid down rules for procedure. It is not authorised by act of parliament, as a matter of convenience it is much resorted to 1905

Sixth congress of the chambers of commerce of the empire opened in London, lord Elgin, colonial secretary, presiding; 500 delegates present, 10 July, 1906

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE OFFICE, a branch of the board of trade, instituted Oct. 1893, "to provide the public with accurate information on all tariff and trade matters." Statistics of wages, the conditions and hours of labour, state of the labour market and the social condition of the working classes are collected, with statistics relating to strikes and industrial questions. The Labour Gazette containing such information is published monthly.

COMMISSION, see High Commission, Court of.

COMMISSIONNAIRES, street messengers in Paris. In 1859 a few old soldiers and sailors who had been wounded in the Crimean and Indian Mutiny campaigns were provided with uniforms and formed into a society called "The Corps of Commissionnaires" by capt. Edward Walter. The fundamental principles were "thrift" and "self help." By March, 1864, their numbers had increased to 250, and in that year capt. Walter appealed to the public for an officers' endowment fund to provide salaries for a staff of officers to assist him. This was liberally responded to, and enabled him to open branches of the corps in several great cities in the United Kingdom. In 1887 the strength had increased to 1,650; in 1905, to 3,000; in 1910, to 3,950, of whom 2,400 are in London. A testimonial from officers of the army and navy was presented to captain Walter in 1884; he was knighted in 1887; K.C.B. in 1889; died Feb. 26, 1904, aged 80. The corps was inspected by king Edward VII. at Buckingham Palace, June 16, 1907; and by the Prince of Wales at Chelsea hospital, June 27, 1909.

COMMITTEES, Standing and Grand, were directed to be appointed by the new rules for procedure passed by the House of Commons in 1882, for facilitating the progress of legislation. The first grand committee (on trade, shipping, &c.) met 9 April, 1883; another (on law, &c.) soon after.

These Committees were re-appointed by the new rule (11), March 1888, and since. See Scotland, April 1894, May 1895.

COMMON COUNCIL OF LONDON. The city parliament consists of 206 members, elected annually on St. Thomas's day, 21 Dec. by the freemen householders of the 26 wards and their aldermen. This court, which appears to have been gradually organized in the 12th century, is mentioned in a charter granted by John, 1214. See Plough Monday. A Common Hall is held occasionally. The common council supported the prince of Orange in 1688, and queen Caroline in 1820. It vigorously opposed the scheme for amalgamation with the London County Council, 1893. Agrees, under certain conditions (widening of Blackfriars bridge), with the London County Council in its proposal embodied in bill (rejected by house of lords, Aug. 1905) to extend the southern system of tramways over Blackfriars bridge and along the Victoria embankment, June, 1905.

COMMON LAW OF ENGLAND, an ancient collection of unwritten maxims and customs (leges non scriptæ), of British, Saxon, and Danish origin, which has subsisted immemorially in this kingdom; and although somewhat impaired by the rude shock of the Norman conquest, has weathered the violence of the times. At the parliament of Merton, 1236, "all the earls and barons," says the parliament roll, "with one voice answered that they would not change the laws of England, which have hitherto been used and approved"; eminently the law of the land, which has been supported by the reports of the decisions of the courts of law and the statutes passed by parliament; see Bastard. The process, practice, and mode of pleading in the superior courts of common law were amended in 1852 and 1854.

COMMON PLEAS, COURT OF, IN ENGLAND, in ancient times followed the king's person, and is distinct from that of the King's Bench; but on the grant of Magna Charta by king John, in 1215, it was fixed at Westminster. In 1833 the mode of procedure in all the superior courts was made uniform. In England, no barrister under the degree of serjeant could plead in the court of common pleas; but in 1846 the privilege was extended to barristers practising in the superior courts at Westminster. Sat last, July, 1875. By an order in council, 16

Dec. 1880, the courts of exchequer and common pleas were abolished and were consolidated into one called the "Queen's bench division," under the lord chief justice of England. By the Act 44 and 45 Vict., sec. 68, passed 27 Aug. 1881, the lord chief justice was endowed with the powers of the chief justice of common pleas and the chief baron of the exchequer.

COMMON PRAYER, BOOK OF, was ordered by parliament to be printed in the English language on 1 April, 1548. It was voted out of doors by parliament, and the Directory (which see) set up in its room in 1644, and a proclamation was issued against it in 1647. With a few changes the English Common Prayer-book is used by the episcopal churches in Scotland, Ireland, and North America.

COMMONS, HOUSE OF, originated with Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, who by the Provisions of Oxford ordered returns to be made of two knights from every shire, and deputies from certain boroughs, to meet such of the barons and clergy as were his friends, with a view thereby to strengthen his own power in opposition to that of his sovereign Henry III., 1258. Stow; see Parliament. In 1859 Mr. Newmarch estimated the constituency of England and Wales at 934,000. It was largely increased by the reform act of 1867:—Registered parliamentary electors, 1872: England and Wales, boroughs, 1,250,019; counties, 801,109. Scotland, burghs, 49,025; counties, 79,919. Ireland, boroughs, 171,912; counties, 175,439. Total, 2,526,423. By the Franchise Act of 1884, the electors of the United Kingdom were increased to about 5,000,000, and many changes were made by the Redistribution Act of 1885 (qualified persons about 7,000,000), 1,911,955 voters in boroughs in England and Wales; and 2,579,403 in counties in 1888. The present house of Commons (counties, boroughs, and universities): England, 465; Wales, 30; Scotland, 72; Ireland, 103 members (1905). See under Reform.

COMMONS. In 1685, of the 37,000,000 acres of land in England, about 18,000,000 were moorland, forest, and fen. In 1727, about 3,000,000 acres more had been brought into cultivation; and from that time to 1844, by means of 4000 private acts of parliament, about 7,000,000 acres more were enclosed. Since the inclosure act of 1845, which established commissioners, another 1,000,000 acres have been enclosed.

* In 1844 Sudbury, and in 1852 St. Albans, were disfranchised for bribery and corruption, each having previously returned two members; the aggregate number of the house then became 654. In 1861, the forfeited seats were thus distributed by act of parliament—two additional to the west riding of York, one additional to South Lancashire, and one to a newly-created borough, Birkenhead.

† Disfranchised and replaced, 1867: Lancaster, Yarmouth, Totnes, and Reigate. — Disfranchised, 1870: Beverley and Bridgwater, each two members; Cashel and Sligo, each one member: 652 members, 1878; 12 members short, through void elections, Aug. 1880.

Act for improvement, protection, and management of commons near the metropolis, passed 11 Aug. 1866. The Commons Preservation Society, established 1865, elected Wm. Cowper, president. Feb. 1867

Metropolitan commons act, to prevent inclosure in the neighbourhood of London, passed, 1866 and 1869. It is stated that there are 900,000 acres of common land capable of cultivation in England and Wales, Aug. 1874

Act for the regulation of commons, passed 11 Aug. 1876. Mr. de Morgan, active opponent of enclosures, imprisoned for contempt of court (The Rolls). Jan. 1878. Metropolitan Board of Works authorised to secure commons, &c., by act passed 16 Aug. 1878

About 14,000 acres of land near London preserved by the agency of the Commons Preservation Society reported at the annual meeting on 10 Dec. 1896

Law of commons amendment act requires consent of the board of agriculture before inclosure 1893

By the Ranges act, passed in 1891, power was given to any lord of the manor to acquire possession of any part of any common over which his rights extend, in order that the secretary of state for war may establish ranges for rifle practice, &c., with regulations.

New Commons act (to preserve open spaces for the public) passed, 1899.

COMMONWEALTH OF ENGLAND, the term applied to the interregnum between the death of Charles I. and the restoration of Charles II. A republic was established at the execution of Charles I., 30 Jan. 1649,—a new oath called the "Engagement" was framed, which all officials were obliged to take.† Salmon. Oliver Cromwell was made protector, 16 Dec. 1653 (see Naseby); succeeded by his son Richard, 3 Sept. 1658. Monarchy was restored 8 May, and Charles II. entered London, 29 May, 1660. COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA constitution act, royal assent, 9 July, 1900; see Australasia.

† By this oath they swore to be true and faithful to the Commonwealth, without king or house of lords. The statues of Charles were next day demolished, particularly that at the Royal Exchange, and one at the west end of St. Paul's; and in their room the following inscription was conspicuously set up:—"Exit Tyrannus Regum ultimus, Anno Libertatis Anglie Restitute Primo, Anno Dom., 1648, Jan. 30."

COMMUNALISTS, or COMMUNISTS, propose to divide France into about a thousand small thoroughly independent states, with councils elected by all the population, Paris to be the ruling head. They declare that capital and its holders must be adapted to nobler uses, or cease to exist. Their creed is stated to be atheism and materialism. They are intimately connected with the International Society of workmen (see Workmen), and with the communists or socialists (1871-3).*

COMMUNES, in France, are territorial divisions under a mayor. In the 11th century the name was given to combinations of citizens, favoured by the crown, against the exactions of the nobles. In 1356 Stephen Marcel, during the English invasion, vainly endeavoured to establish a confederation of sovereign cities, having Paris as the governing head; and for six months it was really governed by a commune in 1588. After the insurrection of July, 1789, the revolutionary committee which replaced the city council took the name of "commune of Paris," Pétion being mayor. It met at the Hôtel de Ville, and was definitively constituted, 21 May, 1791. It had great power under Robespierre, and fell with him 17 July, 1794; being replaced by twelve municipalities. The commune of Paris was proclaimed 28 March, 1871, during the insurrection, which began 18 March, and ended with the capture of the city by the government troops, 28 May following. 2245 communists were pardoned by decree issued 17 Jan. 1879; and many others afterwards. A number re-entered Paris, 4 September following. For the events of the communal rule in Paris, see France, 1871. Louise Michel, "Red Virgin," died 1905. See Socialism.

COMMUNION, a name given to the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, 1 Cor. x. 16. Communicating under the form of bread alone is said to have had its rise in the west, under pope Urban II., 1096. The cup was first denied to the laity by the council of Constance, 1414-18. The fourth Lateran council, 1215, decreed that every believer should receive the communion at least at Easter. The communion service of the church of England was set forth in 1549.

COMPANIES.† The London trade companies were gradually formed out of the trade or craft guilds, mainly by the exertions of Walter Harvey, mayor, in 1272, who is said to have been very active in enlarging and maintaining the

* M. Dufaure, in opposing the amnesty, 17 May, 1876, asserted that the outbreak was organised by about 7000 communists and 1500 foreigners; 40,000 persons were incalculated; 10,000 tried; 25,000 dismissed. See France.

† Bubble companies have been formed, commonly by designing persons. Law's bubble, in 1720-1, was perhaps the most extraordinary of its kind, and the South Sea Bubble, in the same year, was scarcely less memorable for its ruin of thousands of families. Many companies were established in these countries in 1824 and 1825, and turned out to be bubbles. Immense losses were incurred by individuals, and the families of thousands of speculators were totally ruined. Many railway enterprises (1844-5) were termed bubbles. Lord chief justice Russell stated that from 1801-7, over 28 millions sterling had been lost to the community in connection with dishonest company promotions, 9 Nov. 1898. See Law's Bubble; South Sea; Railways; Joint-Stock Companies.

liberties and privileges of the city. The original religious element in the companies gradually disappeared. Among the earliest commercial companies in England may be named the Steel-yard society, established 1232. The second company was the merchants of St. Thomas à Becket, in 1248. Stow. The Merchant Adventurers, incorporated by Elizabeth, 1564. Mr. Edward Arnold's Early Chartered Companies, published July, 1896. The following are the city companies of London; the first twelve are the chief, and are styled "the honourable." Many companies are extinct, and many dates are doubtful. An inquiry into their affairs was partially resisted by them in 1835. In 1869 the gross income of the endowed charities of the city companies was stated to be above 99,000*l*. A motion in the commons for inquiry into the revenues and other affairs of 89 companies, by Mr. W. H. James, withdrawn, 23 May, 1876. A commission of inquiry was appointed (the earl of Derby, duke of Bedford, lords Coleridge and Sherbrooke, sir R. A. Cross, &c.), 14 July, 1880. Five reports issued with recommendations for reform, 1884-5.

In 1884, 7319 liverymen and about 10,000 freemen, estimated annual income about 750,000*l*., expended in maintenance, education, and charities; about 75,000*l*. spent in entertainments.

COMPANIES ACTS: one passed 1862, was amended and continued, 20 Aug. 1867; both amended by acts, 2 July, 1877, 15 Aug. 1879, and Aug. 1898. The important companies winding-up act was passed 18 Aug. 1890; amended 1893.

By the last act, unlimited banking companies were regulated in regard to their issue of notes, audit of accounts, &c. The acts of 1862, 1867, 1877, and 1879 were amended by 43 Vict. c. 19 (1880), in 1883 and 1886.

Committee appointed by the board of trade to inquire into the working of companies acts: lord Davey, Mr. Justice Chitty, and others, Nov. 1894; the report recommends important changes, Aug. 1895.

Legality of a "one man company" affirmed on appeal, by the house of lords, in the case of Salomon (pauper) v. Aron Salomon, 16 Nov.; Times, 17, 18 Nov. 1896.

Companies act (for the regulation of limited companies, limited liability, and the discovery of fraud), passed, 8 Aug. 1900.

Companies registered in the United Kingdom 1862-1902, 83,915; nominal capital 6,305,578,902l. Of these 3933, with nominal capital 156,714,468l., were registered in 1902. By the official return of the Registrar, 33,259 joint-stock companies were believed to be carrying on business, April 1902; paid-up capital, including vendors' shares, 1,805,141,161l.

Board of Trade annual report, issued 31 July, 1905, returns 94 companies, with estimated assets aggregating 1,182,119l., and liabilities totalling 1,324,425l. ordered to be wound up during the year ending 31 Dec. 1904.

Companies consolidation bill, 1908, passed.

COMPASS, MARINER'S, said to have been early known to the Chinese, 1115 B.C., and brought to Europe by Marco Polo, a Venetian, 1260, A.D. Flavio Gioja, of Amalfi, a navigator, of Naples,* is said to have introduced the suspension of the needle, 1302. The compass is also said to have been known to the Swedes in the time of king Jarl Birger, 1250. Its variation was discovered first by Columbus, 1492; afterwards by Sebastian Cabot, 1540. The compass-box and hanging compass used by navigators were invented by William Barlowe, an English divine and natural philosopher, in 1608; see Magnetism. The measuring compass was invented by Jost Bing, of Hesse, in 1602. The compass of sir William Thomson (lord Kelvin), patented in 1876, is considered the best. The Eroy compass, constructed so as to be unaffected by the magnetism inseparable from an iron ship, reported successful, Feb. 1900.

COMPIEGNE, a French city north of Paris, the residence of the Carolingian kings. During the siege, Joan of Arc was captured by the Burgundians, 25 May, 1430, and given up to the English for money. The emperor Napoleon III. and the king of Prussia met here on 6 Oct. 1861. Tsar Nicholas II. and Tsaritsa stayed here on visit to France, Sept. 18-21, 1901.

COMPLUTENSIAN BIBLE, see Polyglot.

COMPOSITE ORDER, a mixture of the Corinthian and Ionic, and also called the Roman order, is of uncertain date.

Composite Portraits. By means of photography in 1877-8, Mr. Francis Galton combined from 2 to 9 separate portraits; the result was generally an improvement on the features of the components.

COMPOUND HOUSEHOLDERS (in regard to the payment of rates) were constituted by the Small Tenements act of 1851. Their position, with regard to the suffrage, caused much discussion during the passing of the Reform act in 1867; and their claims were rejected.

COMPOUND RADICAL, in organic chemistry, is a substance which, although containing two or more elements, in ordinary circumstances performs the part of an element. The Radical or Binary theory was propounded by Berzelius, 1833, and by Liebig, 1838; and modified in the nucleus theory of Aug. Laurent, 1836. The first compound radical isolated was cyanogen (which see), by Gay-Lussac, in 1815; see Amyl, Ethyl, and Methyl.

COMPREHENSION BILL. Passed by the house of lords in 1689, it proposed changes likely to induce nonconformists to join the church of England—it was dropped in the commons, being unsatisfactory to all parties.

COMTE PHILOSOPHY, see Positive Philosophy.

CONCEPTION, IMMACULATE. A festival (on 8 Dec.) appointed in 1389, observed in the Roman Catholic Church in honour of the Virgin Mary's having been conceived and born immaculate, or without original sin. Opposition to this doctrine was forbidden by decree of pope Paul V. in 1617, confirmed by Gregory XV. and Alexander VII. Hénault. On 8 Dec. 1854, pope Pius IX. promulgated a bull, declaring this dogma to be an article of faith, and charging with heresy those who should doubt it or speak against it.—The CONCEPTIONISTS were an order of nuns in Italy, established in 1488; see Santiago.

CONCERT OF EUROPE, termed by lord Salisbury "inchoate federation," 9 Nov. 1897; gradually formed by the ambassadors at Constantinople, with regard to the troubles in Turkey, Candia, and Greece, 1895-7.

CONCERTINA, a musical instrument invented by prof. afterwards sir Charles Wheatstone, about 1825, and improved by Mr. G. Case. The sounds are produced by free vibrating metal springs.

CONCERTS. The Filarmonia gave concerts at Vicenza in the 16th century. The first public subscription concert was performed at Oxford in 1665; the first in London is said to have been in 1672, by John Banister, afterwards by Thomas Britton till his death, 1714. The Academy of Ancient Music, which introduced concerts in London, began in 1710; the Concerts of Ancient Music in 1776; and the present Philharmonic Society in 1813; see others, under Music; Crystal Palace; and Handel. Colossal peace concerts were held at Boston, U.S., 15 June, &c. 1869; 17 June to 4 July, 1872; see Boston.

Concerts Spirituels at Paris, organized by Anne Dannican Philidor, began in Passion week, 18 March, 1725; closed in 1791; re-established, 1805; replaced by the Concerts du Conservatoire, begun 9 March, 1828.

Julien's Popular Concerts, with monster quadrilles, began at Drury Lane Theatre 8 June, 1840; a farewell series, 1859.

Sunday Concerts, popular at Queen's Hall, Albert Hall, and London theatres generally 1910.

CONCHOLOGY, the science of shells, is mentioned by Aristotle and Pliny. It was first reduced to a system by John Daniel Major, of Kiel, who published his classification of the Tes-tacea in 1675. Lister's system was published in 1685; and that of Largius in 1722.

CONCILIATION COUNCILS, see Councils. Conciliation (trade disputes) act passed, 7 Aug. 1896.

* The statement that the fleur-de-lis was made the ornament of the northern point of the compass in compliment to Charles the king of Naples at the time of the discovery, has been contradicted.

CONCLAVE (L. con together, clavis a key). A meeting of persons shut up to consult in privacy. The term is now specially used to signify the assembly of cardinals locked up in apartments of the Vatican till they have elected a pope. The practice is said to have been instituted by Alexander III. in 1179. Clement IV. having died at Viterbo in 1268, the cardinals were unable to agree in the choice of a successor. In 1271 they were on the point of breaking up, when the magistrates, by the advice of St. Bonaventura, shut the gates of their city, and locked up the cardinals, upon which Gregory X. was elected. This pope in 1274, with aid from a council, formulated rules for the seclusion of cardinals during a papal election, which, with slight alterations, are still adhered to. Small cells are erected in a hall of the Vatican, with access to the Sistine chapel, in which the votes (by ballot) are cast. All doors but one are built up, every possible outlet being strictly guarded. The day after the death of a pope the cardinals are locked up in these apartments and do not come out until from amongst their number a pope has been chosen. The latest conclave was on July 31, 1903, when the Sacred college to the number of 62 cardinals entered the conclave; on Aug. 4 Cardinal Sarto (who has taken the name of Pius X.) was elected pope in succession to Leo XIII.

CONCORD (Massachusetts, N. America). Near here was fought the battle of Lexington (which see), 19 April, 1775.

CONCORDANCE. An index or alphabetical catalogue of all the words and also a chronological account of all the transactions in the Bible. The first concordance was made under the direction of Hugo de St. Caro, who employed as many as 500 monks upon it, 1247. Abbé Lenglet. It was based on one compiled by Anthony of Padua. Thomas Gibson's "Concordance of the New Testament" published, 1535. John Marbeck's "Concordance" (for the whole Bible), 1550. Two Concordances (with royal privileges), by Rob. F. Herrey, appeared in 1578. Cruden's Concordance was published in London in 1737. Dr. Robert Young's valuable "Analytical Concordance to the Bible," 1879-80. 7th ed. 1900. The Index to the Bible, published by the King's printers and others, prepared by B. Vincent, 1848, still in use 1905.

Verbal indexes accompany good editions of the ancient classics. An index to Shakspeare, by Ayscough, appeared in 1790; another by Twiss in 1805; and Mrs. Cowden Clarke's (late Mary Novello) concordance to Shakspeare's Plays (on which she spent 16 years' labour) in 1847. J. Bartlett's, 1894, with fuller context. Shakspeare - Lexicon by Dr. A. Schmidt, 2 vols. 1874-5. Mrs. Horace Furness's concordance to Shakspeare's Poems, 1874. Todd's verbal index to Milton, 1809. Cleveland's concordance to Milton, 1867. Other concordances are—to Burns, by Reid, 1889; to Cowper, by Neve, 1887; to Dante's Divina Commedia, by Fay, 1888; to Homer, by Dunbar, 1880; to Pope, by Abbott, 1875; to Shelley, by Ellis, 1892.

CONCORDAT. An instrument of agreement between a prince and the pope, usually concerning benefices. The concordat between the emperor Henry V. of Germany and pope Calixtus II., in 1122, has been regarded as the fundamental law of the church in Germany. The concordat between Napoleon Bonaparte and Pius VII., signed at Paris, 15 July, 1801, re-established the Catholic church and the papal authority in France. Napoleon was made in effect the head of the Gallican church, as bishops were to have their appointments from him, and their investiture from the pope. Another concordat between the same persons was signed at Fontainebleau, 25 Jan. 1813. These were almost nullified by another, 22 Nov. 1817. A concordat, signed 18 Aug. 1855, between Austria and Rome, by which a great deal of the liberty of the Austrian church was given up to the papacy, caused much dissatisfaction. In 1868 it was virtually abolished by the legislatures of Hungary and Austria. See France, 1905 and 1906.

CONDÉ, Louis I. de Bourbon, prince of, brother of Antony of Bourbon, king of Navarre, was born 7 May, 1530; representative of an ancient race, taking their name from the town of Condé, distinguished in the wars of the time, a leader of the Huguenots, taken prisoner at the battle of Jarnac, and killed by the baron de Montesquieu (1569). Louis II. de Bourbon, "the Great Condé," born, 8 Sept. 1621, commander of the French forces in the Thirty Years war, defeated the Spaniards at Rocroi, a brilliant victory (1643), and others, 1644-8. Retired finally to Chantilly, about 1675, and died, 11 Dec. 1686. "Histoire des princes de Condé," by the duc d'Aumale, published 9 vols., 1865-96.

CONDENSATION, see Gas, Beer, Milk.

CONDOTTIERI, conductors or leaders of mercenaries, termed free companies or lances, which became so troublesome in Italy, that the cities formed a league to suppress them in 1342. Many ravaged France after the peace of Bretigny, in 1360.

CONDUITS. Two remarkable conduits, among a number of others in London, existed early in Cheapside. The "great conduit" was the first cistern of lead erected in the city, and was built in 1825. At the procession of Anna Boleyn, on the occasion of her marriage, it ran with white and claret wine all the afternoon, 1 June, 1533. Stow.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF NORTH AMERICA. The efforts of the Southern States for the extension of slavery, and the zeal of the Northern States for its abolition, with the consequent political dissensions, led to the great secession of 1860-1. On 6 Nov. 1860, Abraham Lincoln, the Republican or Abolitionist candidate, was elected president of the United States. Hitherto, a president in the interest of the South had been elected. On 20 Dec., South Carolina seceded from the Union; and soon after Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, Texas, Virginia (except West Virginia), Arkansas, Tennessee, and North Carolina also. Jefferson Davis was inaugurated president of the Southern Confederacy at Montgomery in Alabama, 18 Feb. 1861. For the events of the war which ensued, and the restoration of the Southern States to the Union, see United States, 1861-5.

CONFEDERATION AT PARIS, 14 July, 1790; see Champ de Mars and Bastille.

CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE, the League of the Germanic States, formed by Napoleon Bonaparte, 12 July, 1806, when he abolished the Holy Roman Empire, and the emperor of Germany became emperor of Austria. In Dec. it consisted of France, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Saxony, and Westphalia; seven grand duchies; six duchies; and twenty principalities. The princes collectively engaged to raise 258,000 troops to serve in case of war, and established a diet at Frankfort. This league terminated with the career of Bonaparte in 1814; and in 1815 it was replaced by the Germanic Confederation (which see, and Germany).

CONFERENCES, ECCLESIASTICAL. One was held at Hampton Court palace, between the prelates of the church of England and the puritan ministers, in order to effect a general union, at the instance of the king, James I., 14, 16, 18 Jan. 1604. It led to the new translation of the Bible, now in general use in England; executed in 1607-11. Some alterations in the church liturgy were agreed upon; but these not satisfying the dissenters, nothing more was done.—Another conference of the bishops and presbyterian ministers, with the same view, was held in the Savoy, 15 April to 25 July, 1661. The dissenters' objections were generally disallowed, but some alterations were recommended in the Prayer-book. See Wesleyans and Congresses.

CONFESSIONAL, see Auricular Confession.

CONFESSIONS OF FAITH, or CREEDS; see Apostles', Nicene (325), and Athanasian (about 434) Creeds.

The confession of faith of the Greek church was presented to Mahommed II. in 1453. This gave way in 1643 to one composed by Mogila, metropolitan of Kiev, which is the present standard of the Russo-Greek church.

The creed of Pius IV., composed of the Nicene creed, with additional articles which embody all the peculiar dogmas of the Roman Catholic church, published by the council of Trent. 1564

The church of England retains the 'Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian creeds, with articles—42 in 1552; reduced to 39. 1563

The confession of Augsburg (that of the Lutherans) was drawn up principally by Melancthon, in 1530, and has since undergone modifications, the last of which is called the "Form of Concord" 1579

The Westminster confession was agreed to in 1643; and adopted by the presbyterian church of Scotland; see Westminster 1647

The congregational dissenters published a declaration of faith 1833

CONFIRMATION, or "laying on hands," was practised by the Apostles in 34 and 56 (Acts viii. 17; xix. 6), and was general, according to some church authorities, in 190. In the church of England it is the public profession, with laying on of hands by a bishop, of the Christian religion by an adult person, who has been baptized in infancy. It is made a sacrament by the church of Rome.

CONFLANS (near Paris), TREATY OF, between Louis XI. of France and the dukes of Bourbon, Brittany, and Burgundy, 5 Oct. 1465. By its provisions Normandy was ceded to the duke of Berry, and an end was put to the "War of the Public Good." It was confirmed by the Treaty of Peronne, 1468.

CONFUCIANISM, the doctrines or system of morality taught by Confucius K'ung Fû-tze, or "the Master K'ung" (B.C. 551-479), which has been long adopted in China as the basis of jurisprudence and education. It inculcates no worship of a god, and doubts a future state.

CONGÉ D'ÉLIRE (permission to elect), the licence given by the sovereign as head of the church, to chapters and other bodies, to elect dignitaries, particularly bishops; the right asserted by Henry VIII., 1535. After the interdict of the pope upon England had been removed in 1214, king John made an arrangement with the clergy for the election of bishops.

CONGELATION, the act of freezing. Dr. Cullen produced ice by rapid evaporation of water by an air pump. Ice was produced in summer by means of chemical mixtures, by Mr. Walker, in 1783. In 1810 Leslie used an air-pump in combination with a vessel of sulphuric acid. Numerous freezing mixtures have been discovered since. Intense cold is produced by the aërication of liquefied carbonic acid gas. Ice-making machines invented by Jacob Perkins 1834, John Gorrie 1848, and others. In 1857 Jas. Harrison patented a machine for manufacturing ice for commercial purposes, by means of ether and salt water, and made large blocks. In 1860, M. Carré devised a method of freezing to 60° below zero by making water in a close vessel absorb and give off the gas ammonia. Siebe's ice-making machine, an improvement on Harrison's, exhibited in use 1861-80. R. Reece liquefied ammonia by compression and vaporised it in a closed vessel surrounded with the liquid to be cooled, 1868. Prof. Linde of Munich followed up this principle and produced an ammonia compression machine, 1873. Compression machines, ammonia or carbonic, are now, 1905, in general use CONGESTED DISTRICTS BOARD (Ireland), constituted by the purchase of land act, 5 Aug. 1891, amended 1893, 1894. Land purchased, works undertaken, &c.; reported Nov. 1895. Reports issued, 1896, 1897, 1898. Another act (Ireland) passed, 1 Aug. 1899. Congested districts act (Scotland) passed, 1897.

CONGO. The mouth of the river Congo, S.W. Africa, was discovered by the Portuguese in 1484, and they have ever since claimed territories in the neighbourhood, having founded settlements, and sent missionaries, with temporary success. The river, which is about 3,000 miles long, drains an area of 1,300,000 square miles. It is navigable 110 miles to the rapids at Banana. Other parts navigable by shallow draught vessels, besides 3,000 miles of navigable tributaries. Dr. Livingstone explored the Congo, 1867-71. The natives on its bank and on the creeks having rifled the Geraldine and committed other acts of piracy, were chastised by an expedition under commodore sir Wm. Hewett, 3-11 Sept. 1875. Several villages and chiefs' houses were destroyed. "Sleeping sickness," a terribly fatal disease, for which no remedy has been discovered, has of recent years almost depopulated large districts, particularly on the Lower Congo (which see).

The Independent State of the Congo was founded in 1882 by the king of the Belgians, Leopold II., and was recognised as a State by the European powers at a conference at Berlin in 1885. The annexation of the State to Belgium was settled by treaty November 28, 1907, and has been recognised by all the powers excepting Great Britain and the United States of North America. The area of the colony is estimated 909,654 square miles; population about twenty millions. European population, January, 1910, estimated at 3,000. Principal exports are rubber, ivory, palm-nuts, cocoa, gold and copper ore. Capital, Boma. Revenue, 1908, 1,415,120*l.*; expenditure, 1,569,838*l.* Imports, 1908, 2,354,380*l.*; exports, 4,009,560*l.* Public debt, 8,596,390*l.* The great Congo river and its many navigable tributaries are the leading features of the state.

French Congo extends along the Atlantic coast between the German Kamerun colony and the Congo Free State, with the exception of the Spanish territory on the coast of the Muni river. French acquisition began on the Gabun river, 1841. The area is about 660,000 square miles; population estimated at ten millions.

Angola (Portuguese) has a coast line of about 1,000 miles and is separated from the French Congo, Boma District. Banquets and other entertainments given in honor of the late King of the Congo, 1891.

British government proposes a special commission of inquiry 6 June.

Commission of 3 appointed to inquire fully into the condition of the natives of the Congo. 23 July.

Fifty Swedish sub-officers appointed for service in the Congo State 7 Aug.

Official instructions to commissioners published, stating that formal orders had been issued to all officials and agents in the Free State to give their unreserved aid and co-operation 14 Sept.

Mr. Stansfeld, English politician, sentenced for libelling a major in the state service, sentenced by the court of Coquihaville to pay a fine of 400 and 1 franc damages 29 June

Death of the rev. Grenfell, one of the oldest missionaries on the Congo 1 July.

150 men to restore order, reported 30 Sept.

Mr. Thomas Ryan, American financier, signed a convention with the Congo State, on b-half of an American rubber company, which secures him the right of making certain experiments in a given district adjoining Stanley Falls; no cession of any territory, reported 22 Oct.

Convention concluded between the Congo State and a Belgian company for the construction of a railway from Leopoldville to Katanga 15 Nov.

The Brussels Independence Belge, in an article on sir K. Grey's reply to the deputation which requested him to resign the Congo State, says: "The Congo State has been created by the will of the British sovereign, and it is not the duty of the British sovereign to surrender it to the hands of a foreign power." 6 Dec. 1907

CONGREGATION OF THE LORD, a name taken by the Scotch reformers, headed by John Knox, about 1546. Their leaders (the earls of Glencairn, Argyle, Morton, and others), called "lords of the congregation," signed the first bond or covenant which united the protestants under one association, 3 Dec. 1557. Tytler.

CONGREGATIONALISTS, see Independents.

CONGRESS. An assembly of princes or ministers for the settlement of the affairs of nations or of a people. The following are the most remarkable congresses of Europe:—

Münster	1643-8
Nimeguen	1676-8
Ryswick	1697
Utrecht	1713
Soissons	1728
Antwerp	8 April, 1793

See Alliances, Church, Conventions, Peace, &c.

The first general CONGRESS of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA, preparatory to their declaration of independence, when strong resolutions were passed, also a petition to the king, and an address to the people of England, was held, 5 Sept. 1774. The second was held, 10 May, 1775; the third, when the independence was declared, 4 July, 1776, he first federal American congress, under the constitution, was held at New York; George Washington, president. March, 1789

The first congress of the seceding southern states was held at Montgomery, Alabama, 4 Feb.; it elected Jefferson Davis president of the confederate states on 9 Feb. For political reasons it adjourned on 21 May, to meet at Richmond, in Virginia, on 20 July, 1861

In 1863, the emperor Napoleon invited the sovereigns of Europe to a congress; which was declined by England 25 Nov., and only conditionally acceded to by other powers. He proposed a congress on the affairs of Italy and Rome in Nov. 1867, without effect.

CONIC SECTIONS. Their properties were probably known to the Greeks, four or five centuries before the Christian era, and their study was cultivated in the time of Plato, 390 B.C. The earliest treatise on them was written by Aristæus, about 330 B.C. Apollonius's eight books were written about 240 B.C. The parabola was applied to projectiles by Galileo, the ellipse to the orbit of planets by Kepler, and to comets by Newton.

CONJURATION, see Witchcraft.

CONJURERS, see under Wizard.

CONNAISSANCE DES TEMPS, the French nautical almanack, continuing Hecker's Ephemerides, was first published by Picard, 1679.

CONNAUGHT, W. Ireland; long a nominal kingdom, divided into counties, 1590. Prince Arthur, third son of queen Victoria, born 1 May, 1850, was created duke of Connaught, 23 May, 1874; being the first royal prince whose leading title was Irish.

The Duke of Connaught's Establishment Act, passed 8 Aug., 1878, made the same provision for the duke as for his brother Alfred; see Edinburgh. The duke was married to the princess Louise Margaret of Prussia, 13 March, 1879. See England (Royal Family).

CONNECTICUT, a New England state of N. America. The settlements of 1635 and 1638 were united by charter in 1665. Capital Hartford. Population 1900, 908,420, 1910 (est.) 1,000,000.

Trestle bridge accident, car overturned, 36 deaths, reported 7 Aug. 1899
Great fire at Waterbury, buildings destroyed, over 3,000,000 doles. damage 2 Feb. 1902

CONNOR, Ireland. The bishopric was united to that of Down, 1442. The first prelate, Angus Macnisius, died 507. The united sees were added to Dromore on the death of its last bishop, 1842, in accordance with the Irish church temporalities act, 1833.

CONQUEST, the era in British history, when William duke of Normandy overcame Harold II. at the battle of Hastings, 14 Oct. 1066, and obtained the crown which he asserted had been bequeathed to him by Edward the Confessor (Edgar being the rightful heir). William has been erroneously styled the Conqueror, for he succeeded to the crown of England by compact. He defeated Harold, who was himself a usurper, but a large portion of the kingdom afterwards held out against him; and he, unlike a conqueror, took an oath to observe the laws and customs of the realm, in order to induce the submission of the people. Formerly our judges were accustomed to reprehend any gentleman at the bar who said casually William the Conqueror, instead of William I. Selden. Maclise exhibited forty-two drawings on the events of the Norman conquest, in May, 1857.

CONSCIENCE CLAUSE, see Education, 1863, 1902-3, and Vaccination, 1898.

CONSCIENCE, COURTS OF, or OF REQUESTS for recovery of small debts, constituted by a stat. of Hen. VII. 1493, and re-organised by stat. 9 Hen. VIII. 1517. These courts were improved and amended by various acts; their jurisdiction in London reached to 5*l*. and (until superseded by county-courts) to 40*s*. in other towns. The practice was by summons, and if the party did not appear, the commissioners had power to apprehend and commit; see County Courts.

CONSCIENCE, LIBERTY OF, a principle of genuine Christianity (1 Cor. x. 29); repudiated by Romanism, proclaimed by James II. for political purposes, 1687.

CONSCRIPT FATHERS (patres conscripti), the designation given to the Roman senators, because their names were written in the registers of the senate.

CONSCRIPTION, a mode (derived from the Romans) adopted for recruiting armies on the continent. On 5 Sept. 1798, a military conscription was ordained in France, comprehending all the young men from 20 to 25 years of age, from whom selections were made. A conscription for 350,000 men took place in Jan. 1813, after the disastrous Russian campaign, and in Dec. same year, another for 300,000 after the battle of Leipsic. Estimated conscription, 1793-1813, 4,103,000. The law of 1818 (modified in 1824, 1832, and 1868) required a certain annual contingent for each department. The conscription was enlarged and modified by the army bill which was enacted in Feb. 1868. The reorganisation of the army began in 1871, after the fatal war with Germany. Substitutes allowed under certain conditions. Conscription for Great Britain advocated and strongly opposed in 1875, and since. Lord Roberts and others strongly favour compulsory service, 1909.

CONSECRATION. Aaron and his sons were consecrated priests, 1490 B.C. (Lev. viii.) The Jewish tabernacle was dedicated, 1490 B.C., and Solomon's temple, 1004 B.C. (1 Kings viii.) The consecration of churches began in the 2nd century. Anciently the consecration of popes was deferred until the emperor had given his assent to their election. Gregory IV. desired to have his election confirmed by the emperor Louis, in 828. Hénault. The consecration of churches, places of burial, &c., is admitted in the reformed religion. An act relating to the consecration of churchyards, passed 20 Aug. 1867, was amended in 1868. A form of consecration was adopted by convocation, but not sanctioned by the crown, April, 1712. It is generally used but is not compulsory.—Burn. The form of consecrating bishops in the church of England is set forth in the prayer-book of 1549.—Stow.

CONSERVATION OF FORCE. The doctrine that no physical force can be created or destroyed, but may be transferred, maintained by Faraday, Grove, Helmholtz, Tyndall, and other scientists; see Correlation.

CONSERVATIVES, a name said to have been invented by John Wilson Croker,* an earnest Tory, in 1830, assumed by a party whose leading principle is the preservation of our national institutions. It was termed a new cant word by T. B. Macaulay in Edinburgh Review, July, 1832. Sir Robert Peel acknowledged himself a conservative when reproached by the Irish party in parliament with being an Orangeman; but the party that afterwards separated from him called their principles conservative in contradistinction to his—his policy and measures being changed.—The Conservative Club was founded in 1840; see Protectionists and Clubs. The party in the north of the United States which supported the president in his conciliatory efforts to re-establish the Union, Jan. 1866, were termed "Conservatives." See Derby and Disraeli, Fourth Party, Liberals (1886), National Union, Salisbury administrations, Balfour administration, etc.

Meeting of the unionist party held at Lansdowne house on the opening of the new parliament; about 650 persons were present, Mr. Balfour presiding . . . 15 April, 1906

CONSERVATOIRES, a name given to establishments for the cultivation of music and the arts on the continent. One was established at Naples in 1537. The singing school at Paris, founded in 1784, and closed in 1789, was re-opened in 1793 as the "Institut National de Musique," and after being reorganised, was re-named "Conservatoire de Musique" in 1795, and flourished under Cherubini (1822-42). "The Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers" was established in 1784. It includes a museum and library, and lectures are given to workmen there.

CONSERVATORS OF THE PUBLIC LIBERTIES. Officers chosen in England to inspect the treasury and correct abuses in administration, 28 Hen. III. 1244.—Rapin. Conservators were appointed to see the king's peace kept.—Pardon. Conservators were formerly appointed in every sea-port to take cognisance of all offences committed against the peace upon the main sea out of the liberty of the Cinque Ports.—Bailey.

CONSISTORIES for regulating ecclesiastical discipline and divine worship in the Lutheran church in Germany, were established at the reformation—the first at Wittenberg in 1542; other consistories were established after the peace of Augsburg in 1555.

CONSISTORY COURT, anciently joined with the hundred court; and its original, as divided therefrom, is found in a law of William I., 1079, quoted by lord justice Coko. The chief and most ancient consistory court of the kingdom belongs to the see of Canterbury, and is called the Court of Arches (which see).

CONSOLIDATED FUND was formed by combining the "aggregate," "general," and "South Sea funds," 1786. On 5 Jan. 1816, the exchequers of Great Britain and Ireland, previously separate, were amalgamated, forming "the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom." Acts are passed annually for the appropriation of the fund.

CONSPIRACY AND PROTECTION TO PROPERTY ACT, passed 13 Aug. 1875; relates to trade disputes, breaches of contract, &c.

CONSTABLE OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH. The seventh great officer of the crown, and, with the earl marshal, formerly a judge of the court of chivalry, called, in the time of Henry IV., curia militaris, and subsequently the court of honour. The power of this officer was so great that in 1389 a statute was passed for abridging it, and also the power of the earl marshal (which see). The office existed before the conquest, after which it went by inheritance to the earls of Hereford and Essex, and next in the line of Stafford. In 1521 it was forfeited by Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, attainted for high treason, and has never since been granted to any person, otherwise than pro hac vice (for this occasion), to attend at a coronation or trial by combat. The only instance of a trial by combat being ordered since this office fell into the hands of the crown, was that commanded between lord Reay and Mr. David Ramsey, in Nov. 1631; but the king prevented it.

LORD HIGH CONSTABLES AT CORONATIONS.

Queen Anne, Wriothesly, duke of Bedford . . .	1702
George I., John, Duke of Montague . . .	1714
George II., Charles, duke of Richmond . . .	1727
George III., John, duke of Bedford . . .	1761
George IV. . .	1821
William IV. } Arthur, duke of Wellington . . .	1831
Victoria . . .	1838
Edward VII., Alexander, duke of Fife . . .	1902

CONSTABLE OF SCOTLAND, LORD HIGH. The office was instituted by David I. about 1147. The holder had the keeping of the king's sword, which the king, at his promotion, delivered to him naked (and hence the badge of the lord high constable is a naked sword); and the absolute command of the king's armies while in the field, in the absence of the king. The office was conferred heritably in 1314 on sir Gilbert Hay by Robert Bruce. One of Hay's descendants was made Earl of Erroll, and with his family the office still remains, being expressly reserved by the treaty of union in 1707. The present earl of Erroll is the twenty-third lord high constable (1892).

CONSTABLES of Hundreds and Franchises, instituted in the reign of Edward I., 1285, are now called high constables. There are three kinds of constables, high, petty, and special; the high constable's jurisdiction extends to the whole hundred; the petty constable's to the parish or liberty for which he is chosen; and the special constable is appointed for particular emergencies (as in April, 1848, on account of the Chartists). The general appointment of parish constables was made unnecessary by an act passed Aug. 1872. See Special Constables and Tower.

CONSTABULARY FORCE. For that of London, see Police. The constabulary of Ireland act passed in 1823, when this species of force was embodied throughout the country. Several subsequent acts were consolidated in 1836, when the Royal Irish Constabulary was formed. Strength of force, 1908-9, 10,136.

CONSTANCE, a city in Baden (S. Germany). Here was held the seventeenth general council, 1414-18, which condemned John Huss; and here he was burnt, 6 July, 1415; see Hussites.

CONSTANTINA, the ancient capital of Numidia, was taken by the French, 13 Oct. 1837.

During the assault on 12 Oct. the French general Damremont was killed. Achmet Bey retired with 12,000 men, as the victors entered Constantina.

CONSTANTINOPLE (formerly Byzantium) (which see), now Stamboul, derives its name from Constantine the Great, who removed the seat of the Eastern Empire here, dedicating it 11 May, 330. See Eastern Empire. Population, 1910 (est.), 1,300,000.

General ecclesiastical councils against heresy were held here in 381, 553, 680, and 869.

of CONSTANTINOPLE has the creation placed 5508 years B.C. It was used by the Russians until the time of Peter the Great, and is still used in the Greek church. The civil year begins 1 Sept., and the ecclesiastical year in March; the day is not exactly determined. To reduce it to our era, subtract 5508 years from January to August, and 5509 from Sept. to the end. Nicolas.

CONSTELLATIONS. Arcturus, Orion, the Hyades, and Mazzaroth are mentioned in Job ix. and xxxviii. 31, about 1520 B.C. Homer and Hesiod notice constellations; but our first direct knowledge was derived from Claudius Ptolemæus, about A.D. 140. Hipparchus (about 147 B.C.) made a catalogue of forty-eight constellations, and others were added by Tycho Brahe, Hevelius, Halley, and others. The number at present acknowledged is 29 northern, 45 southern, and 12 zodiacal.

CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND. It comprehends the whole body of laws by which the British people are governed, and to which it is presumptively held that every individual has assented. Lord Somers. This assemblage of laws is distinguished from the term government in this respect—that at the constitution is the rule by which the sovereign ought to govern at all times; and government that by which he does govern at any particular time. Lord Bolingbroke. The king of England is seated on a solitary eminence of power: on the contrary, he sees his equals in the co-existing branches of the legislature, and he recognises his superior in the law. Sheridan.

CONSTITUTIONALIST PARTY, a name assumed by a combination of Conservatives and Reformed Whigs, Aug. 1867, and used during the severely contested elections, Nov. 1868. The Constitutional Union held its first anniversary 20 June, 1881. Constitutional Club established 1883.

CONSULS (meaning colleagues), ROMAN: at the expulsion of the Tarquins, a republic was established, to be ruled by two prætors or consuls elected annually: the first being Lucius Junius Brutus and Lucius Tarquinius Collatinus, husband of the injured Lucretia, 509 B.C. The consular power was in emergencies superseded by dictators and tribunes.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT for naval and military stations first passed in 1864; followed others in 1866, 1868, and 1869. They gave rise to great opposition and much agitation in the country. Their operation was suspended in consequence of a resolution of the house of commons, 20 April, 1883, and they were repealed, 16 April, 1886; see India, 22 July, 1897. For contagious diseases of animals, see Cattle.

CONTEMPORARY REVIEW, founded by Mr. A. Strahan; first appeared Jan. 1866; editor Dean Alford.

CONTINENTAL SYSTEM, the name given to Napoleon's plan to exclude the British merchandise from the entire continent. It began publicly with his Berlin decree, 20 Nov. 1806, confirmed by the Milan decree, 17 Dec. 1807. This led to the Orders in Council (which see).

CONTINUITY. Mr. (after sir) W. R. Grove, in his address as president of the British Association, on 22 Aug. 1866, at Nottingham, expounded the opinion held by many philosophers, that all the past changes in the world have been produced by the continuous action of the causes now in operation—that “continuity is a law of nature, the true expression of the action of Almighty Power.”

Those who hold this opinion are termed Uniformitarians; their opponents are termed Cataclysmists, who attribute the changes to the violent action of fire and water.

CONTRABAND OF WAR, a term said to have been first employed in the treaty of Southampton between England and Spain in 1625. During the struggle between Spain and Holland, both powers acted with much rigour towards ships of neutrals conveying goods to the belligerents. This provoked the resistance of England. A milder policy was adopted by the treaty of Pyrenees, 1659; and by the declaration of Paris, 26 April, 1856. The subject was much discussed during the North American conflict, 1861–4, in April, 1898, and in 1904–5, during the Russo-Japanese war.

CONTRACTORS with Government, disqualified from sitting in parliament, 1782.

CONTRE-DANSE (English, country-dance), a dance, so called from the dancers being opposite each other, was introduced into France (probably from England) about 1715 et seq.

CONTRIBUTIONS, VOLUNTARY, to a vast amount have been several times made by the British people in aid of the government. One, in 1798, to support the war against France, amounted to two millions and a half sterling. Several men of wealth, among others sir Robert Peel, of Bury, Lancashire, subscribed each 10,000*l.*: and 200,000*l.* were transmitted from India in 1799; see Patriotic Fund. For India, &c., see Mansion House.

CONTROL, BOARD OF. Mr. Pitt's bill, establishing this board for the purpose of aiding and controlling the executive government of India, and of superintending the territorial concerns of the company, was passed 18 May, 1784. Act amended and the board remodelled, 1793. The president of the board was a chief minister of the crown and necessarily one of the members of the cabinet. This board was abolished in 1858, when the government of India was transferred from the company to the crown; see India Bills, and India.

CONTROL DEPARTMENT, in the British army, was divided into the commissariat and transport department, and the ordnance store department; the old title was abolished order issued 11 Dec. 1875.

CONVALESCENT INSTITUTION (Metropolitan), at Walton-on-Thames, with children's branches at Hendon and Mitcham, was established in 1840; a branch at Bexhill, Sussex, was founded in 1880. A convalescent hospital for the east of London was founded at Snarebrook in 1866, greatly due to Mr. and Mrs. Charlesworth and Mrs. Gladstone. Homes at Ramsgate, 1866; Waltham, 1867; Margate, 1875, and many others since. See Bartholomew, St., 1881.

CONVENTICLES, private assemblies for religious worship, held by dissenters from the established church; but first applied to the schools of Wickliffe. 35 Elizabeth, c. 1 (1593) passed "to prevent and suppress seditious conventicles," was re-enacted by 16 Charles II. c. 4 (1664) and by 22 Charles II. c. 1 (1670). Persons attending them were liable to severe punishment. The statutes were repealed by the toleration act, 24 May, 1689.

CONVENTION PARLIAMENTS, assembled without the king's writ upon extraordinary occasions. One on 25 April, 1660, voted the restoration of Charles II. A second met 22 Jan. 1689; offered the crown to William and Mary 13 Feb.; and dissolved in Feb. 1690; see National Convention.

CONVENTIONS, see Treaties.

CONVENTS were first founded, according to some authorities, 270. The first in England was erected at Folkestone, by Eadbald, in 630. Camden. The first in Scotland was at Coldingham, where Ethelreda took the veil in 670. They were founded earlier in Ireland. They were suppressed in England in various reigns, particularly in that of Henry VIII. A very great number have been suppressed in Europe in the present century. The king of Prussia secularised all the convents in the duchy of Posen. Dom Pedro put down 300 convents in Portugal in 1834; and Spain abolished 1,800 convents. Many were abolished in Italy and Sicily in 1860, 1861, and 1866, and many in Russia 31 July, 1832, and Nov. 1864.

In 1597 lady Mary Percy founded a convent at Brussels, which flourished there till 1794, when the nuns were compelled to remove to England. They were received by bishop Milner, and placed at Winchester, at which place they remained till their removal to East Bergholt, in Suffolk, June, 1857. This was the first English conventual establishment founded on the continent after the Reformation.

By the Emancipation act of 1829, 10 Geo. IV., the establishment of convents and other religious communities in the United Kingdom was prohibited, but this enactment has been a dead letter. 1829 There were in 1832, 16 convents in England; in 1870, 233; and 70 monasteries in Great Britain.

CONVICTS, see Transportation.

CONVOCAION, the ancient general assembly of the clergy of the nation, convened by the sovereign's writ, to consult on the affairs of the church; the writ is directed to the archbishop of each province requiring him to summon all the bishops, archdeacons, &c. The convocation is divided into two houses, the upper, consisting of bishops; and lower, of deans, prebendaries, archdeacons, and members (termed proctors) elected from the inferior clergy. The clergy were summoned to meet the king by writ, 23 Edw. I. 1294. The power of the convocation was limited by a statute of Henry VIII., in whose reign the convocation was reorganised. The two houses of convocation were deprived of various privileges in 1718, and ceased to meet. The annual meetings of the clergy held during the sitting of parliament were revived in the province of Canterbury 1852, and York 1861, and fruitless attempts have been made to obtain the power of dealing summarily with ecclesiastical affairs; but in Feb. 1872, convocation was authorised to deliberate respecting alterations in the Liturgy; upon which it acted, 5 March; again in 1879. Petition to the queen for reform of convocation, Nov. 1882.

Convocation relieved from the jurisdiction of the secular courts by Richard III., 1484. The Archbishop of York's claim for this in regard to elections (in the case of Canon Tristram) confirmed by the Queen's Bench Division, Nov. 1887. See Laymen, House of, which first met 16 Feb. 1886.

CONVOLVULUS. The Canary Convolvulus (Convolvulus canariensis) came to England from the Canary Isles, 1690. The Many-flowered, 1779.

COOKERY, an art connected with civilised life. Animals granted as food to Noah, 2348 B.C., the eating of blood expressly forbidden (Gen. ix. 3, 4). In 1898 B.C. a calf was cooked by Abraham to entertain his guests (Gen. xviii. 7, 8). "The Forme of Cury" (i.e. cookery) is dated 1390. An English cookery-book was printed 1498. "The art of cookery made plain and easy," by a lady (Hannah Glasse), 1st edition, 1747. "Mrs. Beeton's Book of Household Management," new edit. 1910.

The Cooks' Company, London, chartered 1482, celebrated the anniversary Aug. 1882. Since 1887 the company have given instruction to girls, and prizes for proficiency.

Military Cookery.—Capt. Grant devised a system of cooking for the camp at Aldershot, which has continued in successful operation for the service of between 12,000 and 14,000 men. From April to August, in 1857, the plan was subjected to the severe test of cooking for 92,000 men, who marched in and out of the encampment during that period. The consumption of fuel requisite for this system of cooking was one half-pound of coal per man per day, and the official report states the cost to be one halfpenny per man per week for the three daily meals.

Self-supporting Cooking Dépôts for the working classes were set up at Glasgow (by Mr. Thomas Corbett), 21 Sept. 1860; and proved successful in Manchester, London, and other places soon after.

Three medals were awarded to the Norwegian self-acting cooking apparatus (Sorenson's patent) at the Paris Exhibition, 1867. Cooking is effected by boiling water, the heat of which is maintained by enclosing it in a non-conducting substance.

A School of Cookery was opened at the international exhibition, South Kensington, 14 April, 1873.

A National Training School for Cookery, proposed 17 July, 1873, was established in 1874.

COOK ISLANDS, a group of seven islands in the S. Pacific, subject to New Zealand since 1888; formally annexed by Lord Ranfurly, governor of New Zealand, 8 Oct. 1900. Population, about 1,000.

COOK'S EXCURSIONS. Mr. Thomas Cook in 1841 began his tourist system by arranging with the Midland railway company for the conveyance of a party of 570 from Leicester to Loughborough and back at 1s. a-head. He gradually extended his scheme through the United Kingdom, and thence to the continent. In 1856 he conducted his first touring party from Harwich to the Rhine, returning home via Paris. Mr. Cook died 18 July, 1892, aged 83.

COOK'S VOYAGES. James Cook, accompanied by Mr. (afterwards Sir) Joseph Banks, sailed from England in the Endeavour on his first voyage, 26 July, 1768; and returned home after having circumnavigated the globe, arriving at Deal 12 June, 1771. The chief object of the expedition, at the request of the Royal Society, was the observation of the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, which was effected, 3 June, 1769. Captain Cook sailed to explore the southern hemisphere, 13 July, 1772, and returned 30 July, 1775. In his last expedition (begun 12 July, 1776) he was killed by the savages of Owhyhee, 14 Feb. 1779. His ships, the Resolution and Discovery, arrived at Sheerness, 4 Oct. 1780.

COOLIES, the hill tribes of India (term also applied to Chinese), much employed as labourers in Australia and California, especially since 1861; and about 30,000 of them were conveyed by M. Kootmanschap, to assist in making the great Pacific railway. His proposal in 1869 to replace the negroes in the Southern States of North America for the cultivation of cotton, was not accepted. "The Coolie, his Rights and Wrongs," by E. Jenkins, was published 1871. Coolie emigration has been the subject of negotiation between the British and Chinese governments since 1855. Chinese imported into Transvaal to work in the old-mines; importation ordered to cease Dec. 1905.

COOPERAGE, an ancient art, probably suggested for preserving wine. The coopers of London were incorporated in 1501.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES are composed of working men, having for their object the sale of articles of daily consumption to the members at low prices. The Rochdale Equitable Pioneers Society began in 1844, with a capital of 28*l*. In 1860, the business done amounted to 152,063*l*., the profits being 15,906*l*.. These societies (332 in 1862) are registered pursuant to 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115 (1849). On 31 Dec. 1866, 749 industrial, provident, and co-operative societies were registered; 1,273, 1885; 1,843, 1899; 1,560, 1908; in United Kingdom. By an act passed in 1867 they are bound to make a return. Congress of delegates from the Co-operative Societies of Great Britain and Ireland meets yearly. A national trade society in opposition to co-operation was formed in 1872.

CO-OPERATIVE COTTON-MILLS in south Lancashire were reported successful in 1875.

COUSEBURN CO-OPERATIVE ENGINEERING WORKS, established 1871, failed through want of capital: wound up 1875.

Women's co-operative guild started 1883.

Establishment of a Co-operative Dwellings Association in London, proposed, 1887.

Co-operative union reports 1,428 retail distributing societies with 2,404,595 members, 34,595,373*l*. share capital; 69,783,278*l*. sales and 10,733,005*l*. profit in 1908. Death of Mr. G. J. Holyoake, a pioneer and leader of the co-operative movement, 22 Jan. 1906.

Annual congress opens at Plymouth, 16 May, 1910.

COORG, a province, S. India. War broke out between the rajah and the East India Company 1832, which ended by Col. Lindsay defeating and deposing the rajah, 10 April, 1834, and his territories were soon after annexed by the British. In 1853 the rajah brought his daughter to be educated in England, where she was baptized. She married a Col. Campbell, and died a few years after. Chief commissioner, Col. P. D. Henderson, 1892.

COPENHAGEN (Denmark), built by Valdemar I., 1157, made the capital, 1443; the university founded 1479. In 1728, more than seventy of its streets and 3,785 houses were burnt. Its palace, valued at four millions sterling, was wholly burnt, Feb. 1794. In a fire which lasted forty-eight hours, the admiralty and fifty streets were destroyed, June, 1795. A new national theatre was founded by the king, 18 Oct. 1874. A naval engagement took place off Copenhagen between England (under Lord Nelson and Admiral Parker) and Denmark, and of the Danish fleet of twenty-three ships of the line, eighteen were taken or destroyed by the British, 2 April, 1801. Again, after a bombardment of three days, the city and Danish fleet surrendered to Admiral Gambier and Lord Cathcart, 7 Sept. 1807. The capture consisted of eighteen sail of the line, fifteen frigates, six brigs, and twenty-five gunboats, and immense naval stores. Population, with suburbs, 1880, 273,727; 1901, 378,235; 1906, 514,134. See Denmark.

COPENHAGEN FIELDS (N. London). Here the Corresponding Society met on 26 Oct. 1796; and the Trades' Union, 21 April, 1834. The fields are now chiefly occupied by the Metropolitan Cattle-market, opened 13 June, 1855.

COPERNICAN SYSTEM, so called from its author Nicolas Copernicus, born at Thorn, 19 Feb. 1473, died 24 May, 1543. A few days before his death the printing of his book on the "Revolution of the Celestial Bodies" was completed. The system, which resembles that attributed to Pythagoras, was condemned by a decree of pope Paul V. in 1616; not revoked till 1818 by Pius VII.

COPLEY MEDAL, see Royal Society.

COPOPHONE, a musical instrument, consisting of a series of glass tumblers, connected with a sounding board. The sounds are produced by moving wet fingers along the edge of the glasses. It was played on at parties in London in June, 1875, by Chevalier Furtado Coelho, the inventor.

COPPER. One of the six primitive metals, said to have been first discovered in Cyprus. Pliny. We read in the Scriptures of two vessels of fine copper (or brass), "precious as gold," 457 B.C. (Exra viii. 27). The mines of Fahlun, in Sweden, are most surprising excavations. In England, copper-mines were discovered in 1561, and there are upwards of fifty mines in Cornwall, where mining has been increasing since the reign of William III. In 1857, 75,832 tons of copper ore were imported, and 25,241 tons extracted. In 1865, 198,298 tons of copper ore were extracted from British mines, and 11,888 tons smelted: 82,562 tons were imported. In 1856, 24,257 tons of pure copper (worth 2,983,611*l.*); in 1875, 45,993 tons (worth 413,284*l.*); in 1876, 46,694 tons (worth 391,130*l.*); 1887, 889 tons (worth 42,850*l.*); 1898, 640 (35,523*l.* value); in 1905, 716 value (53,393*l.*); in 1906, 749 value (69,385*l.*); in 1907, 666 value (62,673*l.*), were produced in the United Kingdom. The Burra-Burra copper-mines, in S. Australia, discovered 1842, brought great prosperity.

COPPER MONEY. The Romans, prior to the reign of Servius Tullius, used rude pieces of copper for money; see Coin.

COPPER-PLATE PRINTING was first invented in Germany about 1450; and rolling-presses for working the plates, about 1545

In Ireland, copper was coined as early as 1339; in Scotland in 1406; in France in 1580

In England copper money was made at the instance of sir Robert Cotton, in 1609; but was first really coined (when Miss Stewart sat for the figure of Britannia) 1665

Its regular coinage began in 1672, and it was largely issued in 1689

Wood's coinage (which see) in Ireland commenced in 1723

COPPER SHEATHING first applied to the bottom of H.M.S. Alarm, at Woolwich, 1761; all the navy copper-bottomed by 1780

The copper coinage was largely manufactured at Birmingham, by Boulton and Watt, in 1792

Penny and two-penny pieces were extensively issued 1797

Messrs. Perkins, of Philadelphia, invented a mode of engraving on soft steel, which, when hardened, will multiply copper-plates and fine impressions indefinitely (see Engraving) 1819

The half-farthing was coined, but disused (see Farthing) 1843

Electrotyping with copper printing types and casts from woodcuts, began about 1850

10,000, voted towards replacing the copper coinage, July, 1855

Bronze coinage (which see) issued Dec. 1860

A French syndicate formed to raise the price of copper by a monopoly. Price of copper recently very low Feb. 1888; continued March, 1889

Collapse and financial panic (see France) March, 1890

COPPER-ZINC COUPLE, a Voltaic arrangement made by Dr. J. H. Gladstone and Mr. A. Tribe in 1872, in which a mixture of the two metals is finely subdivided, with the points of junction exposed, so as to promote the decomposition of any binary liquid into which small pieces are immersed; the resistance of the liquid being greatly reduced. The couple is formed by immersing zinc foil in a solution of sulphate of copper; the copper being deposited on the zinc in minute particles. By this couple impurities in water are readily detected, many peculiar analyses have been made, and new organic bodies formed.

COPPERAS, a mineral composed of copper or iron combined with sulphuric acid (vitriol), found in copper-mines, commonly of a green or blue colour; said to have been first produced in England by Cornelius de Vos, a merchant, in 1587.

COPPERHEADS, a name given about 1863 to such members of the Democrat party in the United States as were in favour of peace with the South on any terms.—Copperhead is a poisonous serpent, also named dumb rattle-snake, red viper, &c.

COPTIC CALENDAR, see Diocletian.

COPTS, in Egypt, the Christian descendants of the ancient Egyptians, mingled with Greeks and Persians. They number about 350,000, or one-eighteenth of the population of the country. The Catholic branch number about 4,000, and belong chiefly to the Jacobite or monophysite sect. The Latin patriarchate of Alexandria for the Copts established by the pope; bp. Kyrillos Macarius appointed vicar-apostolic, Dec. 1895; enthroned as Cyril the second, 21 July, 1899. Two Coptic bishops for Upper and Lower Egypt consecrated at Cairo, 29 March, 1896.

COPYHOLDERS, who hold an estate by a copy of the rolls of a manor made by a steward of the lord's court. They were enfranchised by 5 Vict. c. 35, 1841. By the Reform act in 1832, copyholders to the amount of 10*l.* became entitled to a vote for the county. The copyhold acts were amended by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94 (1858) and 1887, consolidated, 1894.

COPYING-MACHINES (for letters, &c.) were invented by James Watt in 1778; patented in May, 1780; and 150 machines were sold before the end of the year. Wedgwood's "manifold writer" was patented in 1806; and in 1855 Terry patented a copying machine to be combined with the cover of a book. Other inventions patented since.

CORBIESDALE, Caithness (N. Scotland).

Here, on 27 April, 1650, the gallant marquis of Montrose was defeated by the covenanters. He was taken soon after, treated with great contumely, and hanged at Edinburgh, on 21 May.

CORCYRA (now Corfu, chief of the Ionian Isles), a colony founded by the Corinthians about 734 B.C. It had frequent wars with the mother country; one about the possession of Epidamnus (431 B.C.) led to the Peloponnesian war. It was subdued by the Romans, 230. At the decline of the eastern empire it fell into the hands of the Venetians about A.D. 1386. The Turks attacked Corfu in 1716, but were gallantly repulsed, and retired, 18 Aug. 1717. It was taken from the French by the allied Russian and Turkish fleets 3 March, 1799, and formed (with the other isles) into the Ionian republic; see Ionian Isles.

CORDELIERS, friars of the order of St. Francis d'Assisi (the Minorites), instituted about 1223. They are clothed in coarse grey cloth, having a girdle of cord, hence the name, first given to them by St. Louis of France, about 1227. Several members of the French revolutionary party, termed "Cordeliers," established at Paris Dec. 1790 (Herbert, Cloots, &c.), were executed 24 March, 1794.

CORDITE, so named from its resemblance to cords; a smokeless explosive, invented 1889 by sir F. A. Abel (died 6 Sept. 1902) and prof. James Dewar, patented and assigned by them to the secretary of war, 1890. Several inventions were submitted to the explosives committee. Cordite was chosen and reported successful in 1892. Sir F. Abel and Prof. Dewar exonerated from charges brought forward in the commons, 11 Sept. 1893.

An action was brought by the Nobel's explosives company against the government (represented by Dr. Wm. Anderson, head of the works at Woolwich Arsenal) for infringement of Mr. Nobel's patent relating to ballistite (1888). The trial in the Chancery division before Mr. Justice Romer began 30 Jan., verdict for the defendant, 14 Feb. 1894.
 Appeal to the lords dismissed 28 Feb. 1895
 Maxim-Nordenfolt guns and ammunition company and Hiram Stevens Maxim v. sir Wm. Anderson (died 11 Dec. 1895), for an alleged infringement of a smokeless powder patent (1889) in making cordite; long trial; judgment virtually for the defendant, 5 March, 1897; and again 9 July, 1897

CORN. The origin of its cultivation is attributed to Ceres, who, having taught the art to the Egyptians, was deified by them, 2409 B.C. Arun-delian Marbles. The art of husbandry, and the method of making bread from wheat, and wine from rice, is attributed by the Chinese to Ching Nong, the successor of Fohi, and second monarch of China, 1908 B.C. Univ. Hist. Corn provided a common article of food from the earliest ages of the world, and baking bread was known in the patriarchal ages; see Exodus xii. 15. The first importation of corn, of which we have a note, was in 1347. A law restricting it was made in 1361, and similar legislation followed. Bounties were granted on its importation into England in 1689. See Wheat.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY, Ithaca, New York: for the study of the applied sciences, agriculture, engineering, &c.; (courses for journalism and forestry instituted in 1898), partially on a self-supporting system; founded by Ezra Cornell in 1868, that "any person may find instruction in any study." He had risen from poverty to wealth by patenting his inventions. The university includes Sage college for women. See Fires, 7 Dec. 1906.

CORNER, a term applied in America to the paralysis of trade and manufactures, produced by speculators purchasing in anticipation grain, petroleum, cotton, &c. (termed futures). The cotton corner at Liverpool in Sept. 1881 led to the stopping of looms in Lancashire, &c., by way of counteraction. The corner ended 30 Sept. 1881.

Another "cotton corner" proposed in June 1887 was resisted by the joint action of the manufacturers and operatives. A "cotton corner" in Liverpool was resisted and closed, 30 Sept. 1889. See Trusts. A "wheat corner" in Chicago since 1895, collapsed, June, 1898. "Cotton corner," New York, 1903. "Wheat corner" in Chicago, April, 1909.

CORNHILL. An important street between the Bank of England and Leadenhall-street, "so called of a corn market out of mind there holden." Stow. A general market held here 14th century. A prison, pillory, and stocks stood formerly on Cornhill. Gray, the author of the "Elegy" (1716-1771), was born at Cornhill. The Cornhill Magazine founded 1860.

CORNWALL, S. W. extremity of England. On the retreat of the ancient Britons after the Saxon conquest, Cornwall is said to have been formed into a kingdom, and to have existed many years under different princes, among whom were Ambrosius Aurelius, and the celebrated Arthur. Cornwall is said to have been made an earldom by Alfred. The eldest son of the British sovereign is born duke of Cornwall. See Stannary Courts. Before the reform of 1832, Cornwall sent 44 members to parliament, in 1886 it sent 7.

CORONATION CHAIR. In the cathedral of Cashel, formerly the metropolis of the kings of Munster, was deposited the Lia Fáil, or Fatal Stone, on which they were crowned. Tradition says, that in 513 Fergus, a prince of the royal line, having obtained the Scottish throne, procured the use of this stone for his coronation at Dunstaffnage, where it continued until the time of Kenneth II., who removed it to Scone; and in 1296 it was removed by Edward I. from Scone to Westminster; the present chair being made to receive it.

A CORONATION OATH was administered by Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, to Ethelred II., in 978. An oath, nearly corresponding with that now in use, was administered in 1377. The oath prescribed by 1 Will. & Mary, c. 6 (1689), was modified in 1706, and again in 1821 on account of the union of the Churches of England and Ireland. See Accession.

CORONEA, BATTLES OF. I. (or Chæroneæ). The Athenians were defeated and their general Tolmides slain in a battle with the Bœotians at Coronea, near Chæronea, 447 B.C. II. The Athenians, Thebans, Argives, and Corinthians having entered into a league, offensive and defensive, against Sparta, Agesilaus, after diffusing the terror of his arms, from his many victories, even unto Upper Asia, engaged the allies at Coronea, a town of Bœotia, and achieved a great victory over them, 394 B.C.

CORONERS, officers of the realm, mentioned in a charter, 925. Coroners for every county in England were first appointed by statute of Westminster, 3 Edw. I. 1275. Stow. They were formerly chosen for life by the freeholders, and their duty is to inquire into the cause of unnatural death, upon view of the body. By an act passed in 1843, coroners are enabled to appoint deputies to act for them in case of illness. The act amended 1887. Laws respecting coroners amended 1860 and 1892—20,315 coroners' inquests were held in England and Wales in 1859:—

CORONETS, caps or inferior crowns of the nobility. The coronets for earls were first allowed by Henry III.; for viscounts by Henry VIII.; and for barons by Charles II. Baker. But authorities conflict. Sir Robert Cecil, earl of Salisbury, was the first of the degree of earl who wore a coronet, 1604. It is uncertain when the coronets of dukes and marquises were settled. Beatson.

CORPORATE REUNION. See Order.

CORPORATIONS. Numa, in order to break the force of the two rival factions of Sabines and Romans, is said to have instituted separate societies of manual trades. Plutarch.—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS IN ENGLAND. Bodies politic, authorised by the king's charter to have a common seal, one head officer, or more, and members, who are able, by their common consent, to grant or receive in law any matter within the compass of their charter. Cowell. Charters of rights were granted by the kings of England to various towns; by Edward the Confessor, Henry I., and succeeding monarchs, subject to tests, oaths, and conditions. Blackstone. The Corporation and Test act, passed in 1661, was repealed in May, 1828. The Corporation Reform act, for the regulation of municipal corporations (London not included) in England and Wales, 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76 (1835), was amended in 1869. The Irish Municipal Corporation act, 4 Vict. c. 108, passed in 1840, was amended in 1861. The Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) act was passed 6 Aug. 1872. CORSICA, an island in the Mediterranean Sea called by the Greeks Cyros, held by the French. The ancient inhabitants had the character of robbers, liars, and atheists, according to Seneca. Corsica was colonised by Phœceans 564 B.C., and afterwards held by the Carthaginians, from whom it was taken by the Romans, 238 B.C. It was held by Vandals, A.D. 456; by Saracens 852; by Italians, 1077. It was dependent upon Genoa from 1559 till 1768, when it was ceded to France.

During a revolt erected into a kingdom under Theodore Neuhoff, its first and only king. 1736
He came to England, was imprisoned in the King's Bench prison for debt, and long subsisted on private friends, but released; he gave in his schedule the kingdom of Corsica to his creditors, and died in Soho. 1756
The earl of Orford wrote the following epitaph, for a tablet near his grave in St. Anne's church, Dean-street:—

"The grave, great teacher! to a level brings Heroes and beggars, galley-slaves and kings.
But Theodore this moral learn'd ere dead;
Fate pour'd its lesson on his living head,
Bestow'd a kingdom and denied him bread."

CORTE NUOVA, near Milan, N. Italy. Here the emperor Frederic II. defeated the Milanese after a severe conflict, 27 Nov. 1237.

CORTES, the Spanish parliament, originating in the old Gothic councils. The cortes were assembled after a long interval of years, 24 Sept. 1810; and settled the new constitution, 16 March, 1812, which was set aside by Ferdinand VII., who banished many members of the assembly in May, 1814. The cortes were reopened by him March, 1820, dissolved Oct. 1823; again assembled April, 1834, and have since been regularly convened. The cortes of Portugal assembled by virtue of Dom Pedro's charter, 30 Oct. 1826; they were suppressed by Dom Miguel in 1828, and restored in 1833.

CORUNNA (N. W. Spain). The British army, about 15,000 men, under the command of sir John Moore, had just accomplished their retreat when they were attacked by the French, whose force exceeded 20,000: the enemy were completely repulsed. British loss estimated 800, French, 3,000, 16 Jan. 1809. Sir John was struck by a cannon-ball, which carried away his left shoulder and part of the collar-bone, and he died universally lamented. The remains of the army embarked at Corunna, under sir David Baird, 17 Jan.

Forced labour of the peasantry (fellaheen) abolished in Egypt 17 Dec. 1889.

CORYPHÆUS, the principal person of the chorus in ancient tragedy. The name is said to have been given to Tysias, or Stesichorus, who first instructed the chorus to dance to the lyre, 556 B.C.

COSMOGRAPHY, see Astronomy and Geography.

COSSACKS, warlike people inhabiting the confines of Poland, Russia, Tartary, and Turkey. They at first lived by plundering the Turkish galleys and the people of Anatolia, but were formed into a regular army by Stephen Bathori, about 1576, to defend the frontiers of Russia from the Tartars. They joined the Russians in 1654, and in the great war against France (1813-15) formed a valuable portion of the Russian army; and also in the Russo-Turkish wars of 1853-56; 1877-79. Employed in the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5. During Russian disorders 1905 (which see), Cossacks were employed to restore order. Greatly execrated for their brutality.

COSSOVA, a plain in Servia. Here Amurath I. totally defeated the Christian army (Servians, Hungarians, &c.), 15 June, 1389; but was himself killed by an expiring soldier. Here John Huniades was defeated by a Turkish army four times larger than his own, 17 Oct. 1448.

COSTA RICA, a republic in Central America, part of Guatemala, declared independent 21 Sept. 1821. Area, 23,000 square miles. With the other republics of Central America formed a single state 1 July, 1823; compact dissolved 1840; constitution of 22 Dec. 1871 adopted 26 April, 1882. It was much disturbed by the American filibusters, see Nicaragua and America, Central. Population, 1904, 331,340; estimated 1907, 351,176. Capital, San José; population, 1904, 24,000; 1907, 26,682. Constitution, 27 Dec. 1859. On 14 Aug. 1859, the president Juan Mora was suddenly deposed, and Dr. José Montea-alegre made president; Dr. J. Ximenes president 3 April, 1863, was succeeded by Dr. Joseph Castro, 8 May, 1866, deposed; J. Jimenez, governor, Nov. 1868; Vicente Quadra proclaimed president 12 March, 1871; J. M. Guardia, 1871 for 1872-6; Aniceto Esquivel, 8 May, 1876; Vicente Herrera, 31 July, 1876, resigned; succeeded by Thomas Guardia, Oct. 1877; died July, 1882, succeeded by Prospero Fernandez; died March, 1885, succeeded by Bernardo Soto 12 March, 1885; by J. J. Rodriguez, 8 May, 1890; G. Gonzalez Viquez, 1906; Ricardo Jimenes, 1910.

COSTERMONGERS, itinerant dealers in fruit, vegetables, fish, &c., deriving their name, it is said, from costard, a favourite apple. The London costermongers are useful in relieving the markets when glutted; and it was said in 1860, that 3,000,000*l.* passed through their hands annually. Previous to fasting and thanksgiving days, they at one time sold the appointed forms of prayers in great numbers. On 22 Nov. 1860, they held a meeting in order to represent to the city authorities the hardships they felt by the police restricting their means of livelihood; and the Metropolitan Streets Act was modified, 7 Dec. 1867. Their moral and physical condition was much improved through the instrumentality of the earl of Shaftesbury, who constituted himself a costermonger, and owned a barrow in 1874.

COSTUME, see Dress.

COTTAGE. The term was originally applied to a small house without land, 4 Edw. I. 1275. "No man may build a cottage, except in towns, unless he lay four acres of land thereto," &c., 31 Eliz. 1589. This statute was repealed, 15 Geo. III. 1775. By returns to the tax office, in 1786, the number of cottages was 284,459. The number in 1800 was 428,214; the number in 1840 was about 770,000. In 1860 the public attention was much drawn to the deplorable state of cottages in many parts of the country, and the law of settlement was altered in 1865. Mr. Disraeli (afterwards lord Beaconsfield) said that "every cottage should have a tank, an oven, and a porch."

See Garden Cities.

COTTAGE HOSPITALS: much advocated by Dr. Horace Swete in 1870. Many since then have been established: including one by the baroness Burdett-Coutts, 1878; one at Wood Green, erected by Mr. J. Passmore Edwards, opened 15 June, 1895; one at Caterham, Queen Victoria memorial, 2 June, 1903; others since.

COTTON, a vegetable wool, the produce of the Gossypium, a shrub indigenous to the tropical regions of India and America. Indian cotton cloth is mentioned by Herodotus, was known in Arabia in the time of Mahomet, 627, and was brought into Europe by his followers. It does not appear to have been in use among the Chinese till the 13th century; to them we are indebted for the cotton fabric termed nankeen. Cotton was the material of the principal articles of clothing among the Americans when visited by Columbus. It was grown and manufactured in Spain in the 10th century; and in the 14th century was introduced into Italy. Indian muslins, chintzes, and cottons were so largely imported into England in the 17th century, that in 1700 an act of parliament was passed, prohibiting their introduction. Cotton became the staple commodity of England in the present century. About 1841 the "cotton" or "Manchester" interest began to obtain political influence, which led to the repeal of the corn laws in 1846. Cotton manufacture, introduced into Bombay about 1868, gradually becomes very successful, reported Dec. 1889. See Calico, Muslin, Corn, Strikes.

Calico sheeting, &c. The fly-shuttle was invented by John Kay, of Bury, 1738; the drop-box by Robert Kay, 1760; spinning by rollers (also attributed to John Wyatt) patented by Louis Paul, 1738; the spinning-jenny, by Hargreaves, 1767; the water-frame, by Arkwright, 1769; the power-loom, by Rev. Dr. Edmund Cartwright, 1785; the dressing machine, by Johnson and Radcliffe, 1802-4; another power-loom, by Horrocks, 1803-13. A combing machine was patented by Joshua Heilmann, in 1845.

British muslin (totally superseding that of India) is due mainly to the invention of the MULE (which see) by Samuel Crompton, 1774-9; and to the self-acting mule of Mr. Roberts, 1825.

Calico Printing commenced 1764.

The Steam-Engine first applied to the cotton manufacture (by Boulton and Watt), 1785.

Bleaching by means of chloride of lime introduced by Mr. Tennant, of Glasgow, 1798.

Stockings. The stocking-frame was invented by William Lee, in 1589. Cotton stockings were first made by hand about 1730; Jedediah Strutt obtained a patent for Derby ribbed stockings in 1759; and Horton patented his knotted frame in 1776; Crompton's mule was employed in making thread for the stocking manufacture about 1770.

Cotton-Lace—Bobbin-net. The stocking-frame of Lee was applied to lace-making by Hammond, about 1768; the process perfected by John Heathcoat, 1809.

American Cotton. Previous to 1795, our cotton fibre came from the East and West Indies, the Levant, and a little from the United States. About 1786, the growth of cotton began in Georgia. In 1793, Eli Whitney, an American, invented the saw-gin, a machine by which cotton wool is separated from the pod and cleaned with great ease and expedition. This led to such increased cultivation that the United States soon exported 1,500,000 lb. of cotton:—

COTTON FAMINE.

The supply of cotton from North America nearly ceased, in consequence of the secession of the southern states from the union in 1860-61. In 1852, Mr. T. Bazley warned the country on the danger of trusting to this source. In May, 1862, he stated that through its failure the loss of the labouring classes was 12,000,000l. sterling a year, and estimated the loss, including the employing classes, at nearly 40,000,000l. a year.

At a meeting connected with the cotton manufacturing districts, at Bridgewater-house, St. James's, on 19 July, 1862, the earl of Derby in the chair, 10,000l. were subscribed to the Cotton District Relief Fund. Queen Victoria gave 2,000l. on 24 July.

In July, 1863, about the value of 700,000l. remained of the donations which had been received in money and goods, amounting to about 1,900,000l.

On 9 Feb., 1863, the "George Griswold" arrived, containing contributions of provisions, &c., from North America, for the relief of the sufferers in Lancashire. The Union Relief Act (passed Aug. 1862, and continued in 1863) gave much relief by enabling overseers to borrow money to be expended in public works to be executed by the unemployed workmen.

In Oct. 1864, much distress still existed, and fears were entertained for the approaching winter—90,000 more paupers than ordinary in cotton districts.

In June, 1865, Mr. Farnall, the special commissioner, was recalled by the poor-law board and the famine was declared to be ended. 1,000,000l. had been expended in two years. Last meeting, 4 Dec. 1865.

The account of the fund was made up in 1873. The balance, above 130,000l., was proposed to be appropriated to the foundation of a convalescent hospital for Lancashire.

A memorial window (the gift of the cotton operatives of Lancashire, who subscribed to commemorate the munificence of the metropolis to them during the cotton famine, 1861-4) unveiled in Guildhall, 15 July, 1868.

COTTON FACTORIES regulated by acts of parliament passed in 1825, 1831, 1833, 1844, and 1889. In 1862, the persons employed were stated to be 451,000; 523,030 census 1904. Excitement through 5 per cent. reduction of wages in Lancashire, &c., Sept. 1883; strike; dispute settled, 27 Sept. 1883. Great strike of about 4,400 cotton spinners in Lancashire against 5 per cent. reduction of pay, 7 Nov. 1892; settlement; reduction of wages 7d. in the pound; arrangement to avoid strikes and lock-outs, 24 March, 1893.

Great meeting in Manchester against the re-imposition of the Indian cotton duties, 8 Jan. 1895; 5 per cent. duties on Lancashire goods imported into India, 8 Jan. 1895; another in London, 14 Feb. 1895.

The masters' demand for a 5 per cent. reduction in wages referred to arbitration, 11 Nov. 1897; arbitration refused by the men in Bolton district at meetings, 23, 29 Nov.; reduction of wages resisted by the men, 6 Dec.; abandoned by the masters, 7 Dec. 1897.

COTTONIAN LIBRARY, formed by sir Robert Bruce Cotton, 1600 et seq. He died 6 May, 1631. It was rescued from the republicans during the protectorate, 1649-60, and was secured to the public by a statute in 1700. It was removed to Essex-house in 1712; in 1730 to Dean's-yard, Westminster (where on 23 Oct. 1731, a part of the books sustained damage by fire); to the British Museum in 1757.

COTTON OIL, largely manufactured from the seeds in the south of the United States. Cotton oil seeds imported to the United Kingdom 1900, 406,478 tons, value 2,624,450l.; 1904, 463,653 tons, value 2,537,499l.; 1908, 616,923 tons, value 4,150,459l.

COTTON-WOOL, see Respiration. Dr. Percy, in 1874, applied cotton-wool to filter the air for ventilating the houses of parliament.

COULMIERS, a village ten miles west of Orleans, central France. Here the Bavarians, under general Von der Tann, were defeated by the French army of the Loire, under general d'Aurelle de Paladines, who took about 2000 prisoners, 9 Nov. 1870, and regained Orleans.

COUNANI, a territory between Brazil and French Guiana. The ridiculous attempt to found an independent Republic failed here (M. Jules Gros, president), Aug.-Sept. 1887. An arrangement respecting this territory was made between France and Brazil in 1862, for police purposes.

COUNCIL OF OFFICERS of the army, constituted by Cromwell and termed "New Model" 1642, abolished by Charles II. 1660.

COUNCILS. King Alfred, in about 886, is said to have so arranged the business of the nation, that all resolutions passed through three councils. The first was a select council which considered all affairs to be laid before the second council, bishops and nobles appointed by the king, like the present privy council. The third was a general assembly of the nation, called, in Saxon, Wittenagemot, in which rank and offices gave a right to sit. These three councils were the germ of the cabinet, privy councils, and parliaments; see Cabinet, Common and Privy Councils, &c.

COUNCILS, FRENCH. The Council of ANCIENTS, consisting of 250 members, together with the council of FIVE HUNDRED, instituted at Paris, 1 Nov. 1795: the executive was a Directory of FIVE. Bonaparte dispersed the council of Five hundred at St. Cloud, 9 Nov. 1799, declaring himself, Roger Ducos, and Siéyès, consuls provisaires; see France.

COUNCILS OF THE CHURCH. The following are among the most memorable. Those numbered are the Ecumenical or General Councils. Sir Harris Nicolas in his "Chronology of History," enumerates 1604 councils, and gives an alphabetical list.

- Of the church at Jerusalem (Acts xv.) 50
- Of the western bishops at Arles, in France, to suppress the Donatists; three fathers of the English church attended 314
- I. First Ecumenical or General, at Nice (Constantine the Great presided), decreed the constancy of the Son of God, condemned Arianism, and composed the Nicene creed 325
- At Tyre, against Athanasius 335
- The first at Constantinople, when the Arian heresy gained ground 337
- At Rome, in favour of Athanasius 342
- At Sardis: 370 bishops attended; Arians condemned 347
- At Rimini: 400 bishops attended; Constantine obliged them to sign a new confession 359
- II. Constantinople: oriental council; 150 orthodox bishops present when it met; presided over 1st by Meletius, 2nd by Gregory Nazianzen, 3rd by Nectarius; added to the Nicene creed; declared the bishop of Constantinople next in rank to Rome; Constantinople being New Rome 381
- III. Ephesus: Cyril of Alexandria presided; anathematised and deposed Nestorius; protested against any addition to the original Nicene creed 431
- IV. Chalcedon: 520 bishops present; declared the two natures of Christ, Divine and Human, as defined by Leo of Rome; accepted and decreed the Constantinopolitan addition to the Nicene creed 451
- V. Constantinople: Eutyches, patriarch of Constantinople, presided; condemned the three

- chapters (written by Theodore of Mopsuestia, Theodoret, and others); Vigilius, bishop of Rome, protested, but afterwards assented 553
- VI. Constantinople: pope Agatho presided; against Monothelites 7 Nov. 680, to 16 Sept. 681
- Authority of the six general councils re-established by Theodosius 715
- VII. Second Nicene: 350 bishops attended; against Iconoclasts 24 Sept. to 23 Oct. 787
- VIII. Constantinople: the emperor Basil attended; against Iconoclasts and heresies 5 Oct. 869, to 28 Feb. 870
- At Clermont, convened by Urban II. to authorise the crusades: 310 bishops attended 1095
- IX. First Lateran: right of investiture settled by treaty between pope Calixtus II. and the emperor Henry V. 18 March to 5 April, 1123
- X. Second Lateran: Innocent II. presided; preservation of temporalities of ecclesiastics, the principal subject; 1000 fathers of the church attended 20 April, 1139
- XI. Third Lateran, against schismatics 5 to 19 March, 1179
- XII. Fourth Lateran: 400 bishops and 1000 abbots attended; Innocent III. presided; against Albigenses, &c. 11 to 30 Nov. 1215
- XIII. Lyons: under pope Innocent IV.: emperor Frederick II. deposed 28 June to 17 July, 1245
- XIV. Lyons: under Gregory X.: temporary union of Greek and Latin churches 7 May to 17 June, 1274

- XVI. Pisa: Gregory XII. and Benedict XIII. deposed; Alexander elected 5 March to 7 Aug. 1409
- XVII. Constance: Martin V. elected pope; and John Huss and Jerome of Prague condemned to be burnt 1414-1418
- XVIII. Basel 1431-1443
- XIX. Fifth Lateran: begun by Julius II. 1512
- Continued under Leo X. for the suppression of the pragmatic sanction of France, against the council of Pisa, &c., till 1517
- XX. Trent: held to condemn the doctrines of the reformers, Luther, Zuinglius, and Calvin. (See Trent). 13 Dec. 1545, to 3 Dec. 1563
- XXI. Rome: summoned by an encyclical letter, 8 Sept. 1868; met 8 Dec. 1869
- Present: 6 archbishop-princes, 49 cardinals, 11 patriarchs, 680 archbishops and bishops, 28 abbots, 20 generals of orders—803 in all "
- There were held four public sessions, and between 90 and 100 congregations. New canons were issued 24 April, 1870, and after much discussion and opposition, the infallibility of the pope as head of the Church was affirmed by 547 placets against 2 non-placets, and promulgated, 18 July, 1870
- Many bishops withdrew from the discussion. The council then adjourned to 11 Nov. (see Rome.)
- See under Church of England, 1903.
- COUNCILS OF CONCILIATION, to adjust differences between masters and workmen, established by licence of the secretary of state, by virtue of an act passed 15 Aug. 1867; and by the Arbitration (Masters and Workmen) act passed 1872. Both these acts were repealed by the "Conciliation act" passed 7 Aug. 1896; in pursuance of which conciliation and arbitration boards may be constituted and registered as such, by intervention of the board of trade.
- The labour conciliation board of the London chamber of commerce, constituted to promote amicable methods of settling labour disputes, &c. 6 Feb. 1890
- London conciliation board with separate committees of delegates about 6 March, "
- Successful conciliation conferences in Yorkshire mining districts Oct. "

COUNSEL are supposed to be coëval with the curia regis. Advocates are referred to the time of Edward I., but are mentioned earlier. Counsel who were guilty of deceit or collusion were punishable by the statute of Westminster, 13 Edw. I. 1285. Counsel were allowed to persons charged with treason by act 8 Will. III. 1696. An act to enable persons indicted for felony to make their defence by counsel, passed Aug. 1836; see Barristers and King's Counsel.

COUNTERPOINT (in music), the art of combining melodies in harmony. The earliest known specimen of contrapuntal writing is by Adam de la Halle in the 12th century.

COUNTESS OF HUNTINGDON'S CON-
NEXION; see Whitefieldites.

COUNTIES or SHIRES. The division of this kingdom into counties began, it is said, with king Alfred; but some counties bore their present names above a century before. The division of Ireland into counties took place in 1562. Lord-lieutenants were appointed in 1549 in England, and in 1831 in Ireland. Counties first sent members to parliament, before which period knights met in their own counties, 1285. CHANDOS CLAUSE, Sect. 20 of the Reform act, 2 Will. IV. c. 45 (1832), inserted by the motion of the marquis of Chandos. By it occupiers as tenants of land not situated in a borough, paying an annual rent of 50*l.*, became entitled to a vote for the knight of the shire. It increased the number of tory voters, and in consequence several attempts were made to repeal it. It was superseded by the Reform act of 15 Aug. 1867.

By the Winter Assizes Act, 1876, certain counties were united (by order in council, first time, 23 Oct. 1876) to facilitate more speedy trials of prisoners.

COUNTY COUNCILS, see Local Government Act. At the first elections in Jan. 1889, a large number of the nobility, gentry, and justices, were elected.

The Councils assumed their powers 1 April, 1889; see London County Councils. The time of election was changed from Jan. to March, by act passed 5 Aug. 1891

COUNTY-COURTS or schyremotes, in the time of the Saxons, were important tribunals. Alfred is said to have divided England into counties, and counties into hundreds; but county-courts seem to have existed much earlier.

County-Courts, for the recovery of debts under 20*l.*, superseding courts of requests, instituted by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95 26 Aug. 1846

The counties of England and Wales are divided into sixty districts, each district having a county-court, with a barrister as judge, and juries when necessary. Their jurisdiction extended by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, to sums not exceeding 50*l.* 1850

In 1850 plaintiffs entered at the courts of the sixty circuits were 306,793. In 1906, 1,265,908 plaintiffs under 20*l.*; 12,578 over 20*l.* to 50*l.*; 2,365 above 50*l.* to 100*l.*; 595 for sums exceeding 100*l.*. In 1907, 1,256,415 plaintiffs under 20*l.*; 13,083 over 20*l.* to 50*l.*; 2,400 above 50*l.* to 100*l.*, and 573 for sums exceeding 100*l.*; for 3,759,970*l.* In 1908, 1,218,872 plaintiffs under 20*l.*; 13,207 over 20*l.* to 50*l.*; 2,560 above 50*l.* to 100*l.*; 536 for sums exceeding 100*l.*; for 3,878,220*l.* In the city of London court, 1908, the figures are respectively 41,674; 764; 248; 149; for 243,611*l.*

Equity powers, like those of the court of chancery, in cases relating to sums under 500*l.*, conferred on these courts, to begin 1 Oct. 1865
Their jurisdiction still further enlarged 20 Aug. 1867
Admiralty jurisdiction conferred on them by act passed July, 1868, amended Aug. 1869
County Court Acts amended by acts passed 2 Aug. 1875 and 1887
A County Boards Bill, withdrawn July, 1879
New regulations, respecting procedure, &c., came into operation 28 April, 1886
Amendment Act passed 13 Aug. 1888

COUNTY FRANCHISE, a bill for giving votes to labourers and others, annually brought in by Mr. (afterwards sir) G. O. Trevelyan. The object was effected by the reform acts of 1884-5. See Household Suffrage.

COUNTY OFFICERS AND COURTS, Ireland: an act to amend the law respecting them passed 14 Aug. 1877.

COUP D'ÉTAT, in France (see France, 2 Dec. 1851); Pronunciamento in Spain; changes in the government effected by force, either by the ruler, the army, or the populace. COURIERS. Xenophon attributes the first to Cyrus; and Herodotus says that they were common among the Persians; see Escher iii. 15, about 510 B.C. The Greeks and Romans had no regular couriers till the time of Augustus, when they travelled in cars, about 24 B.C. Couriers or posts are said to have been instituted in France by Charlemagne about A.D. 800. Couriers for letters were employed by Louis XI. of France, 1463. Henault. See Post-office.

COURLAND, a duchy of Livonia, conquered by Danes, 1218; by Teutonic knights, 1239; subjected to Poland in 1561, conquered by Charles XII. of Sweden in 1701; Ernest Biren, duke, 1737; his son, Peter, 1769; annexed to Russia, March, 1795. Population, 1910 (est.), 900,000. Libau, on the Baltic, was constituted a military and commercial port; the first stone was laid by the czar, 24 Aug. 1893.

COURSING, see Dogs.

COURT BARON, an ancient court which every lord of a manor may hold by prescription. In it duties, heriots, and customs are received, and estates and surrenders are passed. Its jurisdiction was restricted in 1747 and 1833. By the Small Debts Act, 1856, lords of the manor may give up holding these courts.

COURT JOURNAL, established 1829.

COURT LEET, an ancient court of record, belonging to a hundred, instituted for punishing encroachments, nuisances, fraudulent weights and measures, &c. The steward is judge, and all residing within the hundred (peers, clergymen, &c., excepted) are obliged to do suit within this court.

COURT OF HONOUR. In England the court of chivalry, of which the lord high constable was a judge, was called Curia Militaris, in the time of Henry IV., and subsequently the Court of Honour. In Bavaria, to prevent duelling, a court of honour was instituted in April, 1819.

COURT OF JUSTICIARY, HIGH, in Scotland, constituted by a commission under the great seal, 1671, ratified 1672. The procedure in this court was amended by an act passed in 1868. See Court of Session.

COURT OF REQUESTS, see Conscience.

COURT OF REVIEW, see Bankruptcy.

COURT OF SESSION, the highest civil tribunal in Scotland, was instituted by James V. by statute, 17 May, 1532, its origin being ascribed to the regent, duke of Albany. It consisted of 14 judges and a president, and replaced a committee of parliament. In 1830 the number of judges was reduced; and the court now consists of the lord president (termed lord justice general), the lord justice-clerk, and 11 ordinary judges. In 1867 the necessity of renovating this court was asserted by high legal authority; and an act to amend its procedure was passed 31 July, 1868. The lord president, the right hon. John Inglis, appointed, Feb. 1867; died 20 Aug., succeeded by James P. B. Robertson, Sept. 1891; by John Blair Balfour (baron Kinross), 1899 (died 1905); and by Andrew Graham Murray (lord Dunedin), 1905.

COURT PARTY—COUNTRY PARTY, politicians in the parliaments of England, beginning about 1620. At the end of the 17th century the latter embodied toryism and high church principles, maintained the rights of "the land," as opposed to whiggism and the trading interests. Its most distinguished statesman was sir Thomas Hanmer (the Montalto of Pope's Satires), who died in 1746. Ashe.

COURTRAI (Belgium). Here Robert, count of Artois, who had defeated the Flemings in 1297, was defeated and slain by them, 11 July, 1302. The conflict was named the "Battle of Spurs," from the number of gilt spurs collected.

COURTS MARTIAL are regulated by the Mutiny act, first passed in 1690. The powers of these courts were much discussed in 1867, in consequence of the measures used to suppress the negro insurrection in Jamaica, Oct. 1866. There are three grades of Courts Martial. 1. Regimental. 2. District. 3. General. The first is composed of the officers of one regiment, and try minor offences in their own regiment; the second is composed of officers of various regiments in the district and deal with more serious offences; the third is the highest military tribunal, and has the power to commit an offender to penal servitude. See Army and Navy.

COURTS OF JUSTICE were instituted at Athens, 1507 B.C. (see Areiopagus); by Moses, 1491 B.C. (Exod. xviii. 25), and in Rome. For these realms, see Chancery, Common Pleas, Exchequer, King's Bench, &c. The citizens of London were privileged to plead their own cause in the courts of judicature, without employing lawyers, except in pleas of the crown, 41 Hen. III. 1257. Stow. The rights of the Irish courts were established by the British parliament in April, 1783. See Supreme Court.

COURTS OF LAW FEES ACT, passed 20 Aug. 1867, directs the application of surplus fees towards providing new courts of justice. Acts for building these courts were passed in 1865 and 1866. See Law Courts.

COURTS OF SURVEY, consisting of a judge and two assistants, for appeals respecting unseaworthy ships, were directed to be appointed in certain ports and districts by the Merchant Shipping Act, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 80 (15 Aug. 1876). They sat in 1877.

COURT THEATRE, Chelsea, opened 25 Jan. 1871.

COUTRAS (S. W. France). Here Henry of Navarre totally defeated the duc de Joyeuse and the royalists, 20 Oct. 1587.

COVENANTERS, those persons who in the reign of Charles I. having signed the solemn league and covenant, engaged to stand by each other in opposition to the projects of the king in 1638. The COVENANT or league between England and Scotland (the preceding one modified), solemnly adopted by the parliament, 25 Sept. 1643; was accepted by Charles II. 16 Aug. 1650, but repudiated by him on his restoration in 1661, when it was declared to be illegal by parliament, and copies of it ordered to be burnt. See Cameronians and Bothwell Bridge.

The covenant consisted of six articles:

1. The preservation of the reformed church in Scotland and the reformation of religion in England and Ireland.
2. The extirpation of popery, prelacy, schism, &c.
3. The preservation of the liberties of parliament and the king's person and authority.
4. The discovery and punishment of all malignants, &c.
5. The preservation of "a blessed peace between these kingdoms."
6. The assisting all who enter into the covenant: "This will we do as in the sight of God."

COVENT GARDEN (London), corrupted from "Convent Garden," having been the garden of St. Peter's convent. The square was built about 1633, and the piazza on the north side and the church were designed by Inigo Jones. The fruit and vegetable markets were rebuilt in 1829-30, from designs by Mr. Fowler (the ground belonging to the duke of Bedford). In the 17th century, Covent Garden was a very fashionable quarter of London. Frequent allusions are made to it by the playwrights of the time of Charles II.; and Dryden lays a scene of one of his plays here. It is depicted also by Hogarth.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE sprang out of one in Lincoln's-inn-fields, through a patent granted 14 Chas. II. 1662, to sir William Davenant, whose company was denominated the "duke's servants," as a compliment to the duke of York, afterwards James II.; see under Theatres.

COVENTRY (Warwickshire). Leofric, earl of Mercia, lord of Coventry, is said to have relieved it from heavy taxes, at the intercession of his wife Godiva, on condition of her riding naked through the streets, about 1057. Processions in her memory took place in 1851; 23 June, 1862; 4 June, 1866; 20 June, 1870; 4 June, 1877; 6 Aug. 1883; and 2 Aug. 1892; La Milo, revived, 7 Aug. 1907. The legend is probably fabulous. A parliament was held here in the reign of Henry IV. called parliamentum indoctum, or the unlearned parliament, because lawyers were excluded, 1404; and in the reign of Henry VI. another met, called parliamentum diabolicum, from the acts of attainder passed against the duke of York and others, 20 Nov. 1459. The town was surrounded with strong walls, three miles in circumference, and twenty-six towers, which were demolished by order of Charles II. in 1662. The ribbon-makers here suffered much from want of work in the winter of 1809-10. Its chief manufactures are ribbons, watches and bicycles, of which industry it is now the chief centre; cotton, worsted, and woollen goods, silk dyeing and art metalwork. The Биспопик was founded by Oswy, king of Mercia, 656, and had the double name of Coventry and Lichfield, which was reversed by later bishops. It was so wealthy, that king Offa, by the favour of pope Adrian, made it archiepiscopal; but this title was laid aside on the death of that king. In 1075 the see was removed to Chester; in 1102 to Coventry; and afterwards to its original foundation, Lichfield, but with great opposition from the monks of Coventry. Coventry merged into the bishopric of Lichfield (which see). In 1888, under the Local Government act, Coventry was reconstituted a county, a privilege it possessed from 1451 to 1842. Population, 1901, 70,296; 1910 (est.) 82,000. New park, gift of Mr. D. Spencer, opened 11 Oct. 1883. Messrs. Humber's cycle manufactory burnt and adjoining houses damaged; estimated loss, 100,000*l.* 17 July, 1896. Premises of Mr. Hills, builder, and Messrs. Phillips and Marriott, brewers, burnt, estimated damage, 40,000*l.* 15 Dec. 1899. Coventry pagant 7 Aug. 1907

COVENTRY ACT passed, to prevent malicious maiming and wounding, 6 March, 1671, in consequence of sir John Coventry, K.B., M.P., being maimed in the streets of London, by sir Thomas Sandys and others, adherents of the duke of Monmouth, 21 Dec. 1670. Repealed 1828.

COW-POCK INOCULATION; see Small Pox and Vaccination.

CRABS. The size at which they are to be sold is determined by the Fisheries Act, 1877.

CRACOW, a city in Austrian Poland. The Poles elected Cracus for their duke, who built Cracow with the spoils taken from the Franks about 700. It was their capital, 1320-1609. Cracow was taken by Charles XII. in 1702, and taken and retaken several times by the Russians and other confederates. The sovereign was crowned at Cracow until 1764. The Russians, who had taken it 1768, were expelled by Kosciusko, 24 March, 1794; but it surrendered to the Prussians, 15 June same year, and in 1795 was awarded to Austria. Cracow was formed into a republic, June, 1815. Occupied by 10,000 Russians, who followed here the defeated Poles, Sept. 1831. Its independence was extinguished; and it was seized by the emperor of Austria, and incorporated with his empire, 16 Nov. 1846, which was protested against by England, France, Sweden, and Turkey; see Poland. A dreadful fire laid the greater part of the city in ashes, 18 July, 1850. The discovery on 22 July, 1869, of Barbare Ábyrk, a nun, secluded for 21 years in a convent cell, led to violent rioting. Population, 1900, 73,168; 1908, 106,961. New university (includes the Polish academy, founded 1872), a fine gothic building 1881-7. The Catholic Bishop raised to the rank of prince of the Empire, and primate of Poland Jan. 1889

The body of Adam Mickiewicz, the Polish poet, brought from France, re-interred here . . . 4 July, 1890. See Austria, 1904.

CRANES are of very early date, for the engines of Archimedes may be so called. In 1857 a crane had been erected at Glasgow capable of lifting 50 tons. One in Woolwich arsenal in 1881 lifted 400 tons. See Derricks.

CRANIOLOGY (or PHRENOLOGY), the study of the external form of the human skull, as indicative of mental powers and moral qualities. Dr. Gall, the propounder, was a German physician, born March, 1758, and his first observations were among his schoolfellows. Afterwards he studied the heads of criminals and others, and eventually reduced his ideas to a system, marking out the skull like a map. His first lecture was given at Vienna in 1796; but in 1802 the Austrian government prohibited his teaching. In 1800 he was joined by Dr. Spurzheim, who divided "the mental and moral faculties" of Gall into two orders, "feelings and intellect," and in 1810-12 they published at Paris their work on the "Anatomy and Physiology of the Nervous System, and of the Brain in particular." Gall died in 1828. The researches of Gall and Spurzheim led to increased study of the brain. Combe's "Phrenology" was first published in 1819. Phrenological societies were formed early in London and Edinburgh; and in 1832, there were in existence some 30 phrenological societies, and several journals devoted to the subject. Various modifications in the localisation of the faculties were made by pupils of Gall, among them the American phrenologists, the Fowlers, and S. R. Wells.

Phrenology was refuted by Lord Jeffrey in the Edinburgh Review, in 1826, and later by Dr. W. B. Carpenter. Professor David Ferrier reported the results of researches tending to prove localisation of certain faculties in the brain to the British Association, Sept. 1873.

"Brain," a quarterly journal, began in 1878.

The British Phrenological Society was founded in 1886, and incorporated in 1899 as a scientific society. Its objects are the investigation and promulgation of phrenology, &c., &c. There are on the list of officers of the society the names of thirteen past-presidents.

CRANMER, LATIMER, AND RIDLEY, martyrdom of, see Protestants, note.

CRANNON or CRANON, Thessaly, N. Greece. Near here the Macedonians under Antipater and Craterus defeated the confederated Greeks, twice by sea and once by land, 322 B.C. The Athenians demanded peace, and Antipater put their orators to death, among whom was Hyperides, who, that he might not betray the secrets of his country when under torture, cut out his tongue, and Demosthenes is said to have taken poison shortly after.

CRANWORTH'S ACT, LORD, to simplify the practice of conveyancers, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145 (1860).

CRAPONNE (N. France). Here Victor and Ney defeated the Prussians under Blücher after a severe contest, 7 March, 1814.

CRAPE. It is said some crape was made by Ste. Badour, when queen of France, about 680. It is said to have been first made at Bologna.

CRAYFORD (Kent). Hengist the Saxon is said to have defeated the Britons here, 457.

CRAYONS, coloured substances made into paste, and dried into pencils, were known in France about 1422; and improved by L'Oriot, 1748.

CREASOTE, or KREASOTE (discovered by Reichenbach about 1833), a powerful antiseptic and coagulator of albuminous tissue, is obtained by the destructive distillation of wood and other organic matters. It has been used for the preservation of meat, timber, &c.

CREATINE (from the Greek kreas, flesh), the chemical principle of flesh, was discovered in 1835 by E. Chevreul, and has been investigated by Liebig, Gregory, and others.

CREATION OF THE WORLD. The date given by the English bible, and by Usher, Blair, and some others, is 4004 B.C. There are about 140 different dates assigned to the Creation, varying from 3616 to 6984 B.C. Dr. Hales gives 5411; see Eras.

Haydn's Creation (oratorio), composed 1796–8; first performed (in London, at Covent Garden Theatre), 28 March, 1800; in Paris, 24 Dec. same year.

CRÈCHES, establishments for temporarily receiving the young children of working mothers begun at Paris, about 1844; in London (in Rathbone-place, &c.) about 1863; others since.

CRECY, or CRESSY (N. France), where Edward III. and his son, Edward the Black Prince, and an army of about 70,800, obtained a great victory over Philip, king of France, with about 130,000, 26 Aug. 1346. John, king of Bohemia (nearly blind); James, king of Majorca; Ralph, duke of Lorraine (sovereign prince); and a number of French nobles, together with 30,000 private men, were slain, while the loss of the English was very small. The crest of the king of Bohemia (three ostrich feathers, with the motto Ich dien—in English, "I serve") has since been adopted by princes of Wales.

CREDIT FONCIER, &c. A plan of providing loans to landowners was introduced by Frederick the Great of Prussia, in 1763, in some of the Prussian provinces, as the best method of alleviating the distresses of the landed interest caused by his wars. The system consists of lending money to landowners on the security of their estates, and providing the loan capital by the issue of debentures charged upon the aggregate mortgaged estates. There are two modes of carrying out this scheme: (1) by means of an association of landowners; (2) by means of a proprietary public company. The former obtains in Eastern Prussia, but the latter is exclusively found in Western Europe.

Crédit Foncier companies have been founded in Hamburg (1782), Western Prussia (1787), Belgium (1841), France (1852), England (1863). Similar companies were formed in all the states of Europe, in India, and in our colonies and dependencies. A. G. Henriques. See France, May, 1890.

CRÉDIT MOBILIER: a joint-stock company with this name was established at Paris by Isaac and Emile Péreire, and others, 18 Nov. 1852.

It took up or originated trading enterprises of all kinds, applying to them the principle of commandite, or limited liabilities; and was authorised to supersede or buy in any other companies (replacing their shares or bonds with its own scrip), and also to carry on the ordinary business of banking. The funds were to be obtained by a paid-up capital of 2½ millions sterling, the issue of obligations at not less than 45 days' date or sight, and the receipt of money on deposit or current account. The society apparently prospered; but was considered by experienced persons a near approach to Law's bank of 1776.

Several of the directors failed, Sept. 1857, no dividend paid May, 1858
Many similar companies estbd. in London 1863
Emile and Isaac Péreire withdrew from the management; the company failed, and the capital was said to have disappeared Oct. 1867

The high court of appeal decided that MM. Péreire and other directors were responsible for their acts, and that damages should be given to the shareholders 1 Aug. 1868

CREEDS, see Confessions of Faith.

CREMERA, BATTLE OF, see Fabii.

CREMONA (N. Italy), a city founded by the Romans, 221 B.C. It became an independent republic in 1107, but was frequently subjugated by its neighbours, Milan and Venice, and partook of their fortunes. In Nov. 1859 it became part of the kingdom of Italy. Cremona was eminent for violin makers from about 1550 to 1750.

CREOSOTE, see Creasote.

CRESCENT, a symbol of sovereignty among the Greeks and Romans, and the device of Byzantium, now Constantinople, whence the Turks adopted it. The Crescent has given name to three orders of knighthood; founded by Charles I. of Naples, 1268; by René of Anjou, in 1448; by the sultan Selim, in 1801.

CRESPY (N. France). Here was signed a treaty between Charles V. of Germany and Francis I. of France, 18 Sept. 1544. The former renounced Burgundy, and the latter Italy.

CRESTS are ascribed to the Carians. Richard I. (1189) had a crest on the helmet resembling a plume of feathers. The English kings had generally crowns above their helmets; that of Richard II. 1377, was surmounted by a lion on a cap of dignity; see Crecey. Alexander III. of Scotland, 1249, had a plume of feathers; and the helmet of Robert I. was surmounted by a crown, 1306; and that of James I. by a lion, 1424. In the 15th and 16th centuries, the crest was described to be a figure placed upon a wreath, coronet, or cap of maintenance. Gwiltim. The badge of the Red Dragon added to the prince of Wales's crest, Dec. 1901.

CRETAN DISTRESS FUND, founded in London, Times, 8 Feb. 1897.

CRETE, see Candia.

CREVANT-SUR-YONNE (N. France), was besieged by John Stuart, earl of Buchan, with a French army, June 11, 1423, and relieved by the earl of Salisbury with an army of English and Burgundians. After a severe contest, the French were totally defeated.

CREVELDT, near Cleves (W. Prussia). Here, on 23 June, 1758, prince Ferdinand of Brunswick defeated the French under the count of Clermont.

CREWE, Cheshire, the site of a great junction and works of the London and North-Western railway since 1840. The company presented a beautiful park to the town in 1887–88. Crewe was incorporated in 1877. Population, 1901, 53,058.

CRICKET, an ancient English game, said to be identical with the "club ball" of the 14th century; mentioned in 1598. Rules were laid down in 1774 by a committee of noblemen and gentlemen, including the duke of Dorset and sir Horace Mann. The first club founded in England was the Hambledon (Hampshire) club, which lasted from 1750 to 1791. Its playing fields were at Broad Halfpenny and Windmill Downs, and the club frequently met and defeated teams representing All-England. The game rapidly grew in favour, until at the end of the 18th century it was well established. The leading club in England and the authority on the game is the Marylebone club, which was founded under its present title in 1787. It sprang out of the Artillery Ground club, which played at Finsbury till 1750, and then moved to White Conduit Fields, becoming the White Conduit club. The Marylebone club's first head-quarters were at old Lord's ground, now Dorset Square, then (1824) at Middle Lord's ground, and finally, in 1827, to the present Lord's ground, which became the club's freehold property in 1864. The Marylebone club frames and revises the laws of the game, and arbitrates on all disputes.

ENGLAND AND AUSTRALIA.

An English eleven visited Australia in 1862; one, captained by George Parr, in 1864; one, by Dr. W. G. Grace, in 1873, and another, of professionals, by James Lillywhite, in 1876, in this tour the Australians first played on level terms, and were victorious in one of the two "test matches" played. The first Australian team to visit England arrived in 1878. Since then English teams and Australian teams have on many occasions exchanged visits. Summary of results of test matches between England and Australia:—In Australia.—Played 47, England won 19, Australia 26, drawn 2. In England.—Played 39, England won 16, Australia 8, drawn 15. Total.—Played 86, England won 35, Australia 34, drawn 17.

RECORDS AT TEST MATCHES:—Highest innings.—In Australia, Australia 586, at Sydney, 1894; England 577, at Sydney, 1903; in England, Australia 551, at the Oval, 1884; England 576, at the Oval, 1899. Lowest innings.—In Australia, Australia 42, at Sydney, 1888; England 45, at Sydney, 1887; in England, Australia 36, at Birmingham, 1902; England 53, at Lords, 1888. New South Wales made 918 in one innings against South Australia at Sydney in Jan. 1901, this being the highest total ever obtained in a first-class match. In the innings of New South Wales five players exceeded the century, S. E. Gregory making 168, M. A. Noble 153, L. O. S. Poldevin 140 not out, R. A. Duff 119, and F. A. Iredale 118. There were five partnerships of over 100 runs during the innings.

Yorkshire against Warwickshire, at Birmingham on May 7, 8, 9, 1896, scored 887—the second highest total on record in a first-class match. In this innings of Yorkshire, four separate hundreds were scored, Mr. F. S. Jackson 117, Wainwright 126, Peel 210 not out, and Lord Hawke 166. The feat of four separate hundreds being scored in one innings in a first-class match was repeated at Derby in August, 1898. Playing against Hampshire for Derbyshire, Mr. L. G. Wright made 134, Storer, 100, Chatterton 142, and George Davidson 108. For Lancashire against Somerset at Manchester in June, 1904, Mr. A. C. MacLaren scored 151, Tyldesley 103, Mr. A. H. Hornby 114, and Cuttell 101.

Surrey scored 811 against Somerset at the Oval in May, 1899, the second highest total ever obtained in a county match.

Highest Aggregates.

In a match between New South Wales and Victoria, played at Sydney in Jan. 1900, 1,912 runs were scored for the loss of 34 wickets—the highest aggregate in first-class cricket.

At Sydney in Feb. 1898, in a match between Mr. Stoddart's England Eleven and New South Wales, 1,739 runs were scored.

The largest aggregate in a first-class match in England is 1,492 for 33 wickets, scored in the match between Worcestershire and Oxford University, at Worcester, in July, 1904.

The second highest aggregate in first-class cricket in England is 1,427 for the loss of 21 wickets, obtained in the match between Surrey and Sussex at Hastings, in July, 1902.

The following is a list of the highest aggregates on record:—1,912 for 34 wickets, N. S. Wales v. Victoria, 1900; 1,739 for 40 wickets, N. S. Wales v. Mr. A. E. NOTE—Less than a dozen completed innings not taken into consideration.

ENGLAND AND SOUTH AFRICA.

Cricket has made extraordinary progress in South Africa, and a team representing that colony visited England in 1907. In addition to the matches with the leading county teams, three test matches were played. At Lord's the match was drawn, England won by 53 runs at Leeds, and the third match at the Oval was drawn. All England teams have also visited South Africa, the last occasion being in 1909-10. A South African team also visited England in 1904, and won 10 out of 22 first-class matches.

Other Records.

Mr. W. G. Grace has three times during his career performed the feat of making two separate hundreds in a first-class match. So also have Mr. R. E. Foster and Mr. C. B. Fry.

Highest Wicket Stands.

J. T. Brown and J. Tunncliffe scored 554 runs together for the first wicket for Yorkshire against Derbyshire at Chesterfield, in Aug. 1898—a record partnership in first-class cricket for any wicket. Brown made 300 and Tunncliffe 243.

Mr. A. C. MacLaren and T. Hayward scored 314 together for the first wicket for Mr. MacLaren's England XI. v. New South Wales, at Sydney, in Jan. and Feb. 1902, this being a record partnership for any wicket in a first-match in Australia.

Shrewsbury and Gunn scored 398 runs together for the second wicket for Notts. against Sussex at Nottingham in May, 1890.

Abel and Hayward scored 448 runs together for the fourth wicket for Surrey against Yorkshire at the Oval, in Aug. 1899, this being the second best partnership for any wicket in a first-class match.

M. A. Noble and W. W. Armstrong scored 428 runs together for the sixth wicket of the Australians against Sussex at Brighton, in July and Aug. 1902.

K. S. Ranjitsinhji and Mr. W. Newham added 344 runs together for the seventh wicket of Sussex v. Essex, at Leyton, in June and July, 1902.

F. E. Woolley and A. Fielder, for Kent v. Worcestershire, at Stourbridge, in July, 1909, added 235 runs for the last wicket.

NOTABLE EVENTS.

Dr. W. G. Grace, aged 46, completed his hundredth "hundred" score at Bristol, in a match between Gloucester and Somerset, mid-May, 1895; national testimonial subscribed for, June et seq., 1895.

George Hirst scores 2,501 runs and takes 132 wickets in 1904; scores 2,191 runs and takes 102 wickets in 1905, constituting a record in scoring over 2,000 runs and taking over 100 wickets two seasons running. W. G. Grace scored 2,622 runs and took 124 wickets in 1876. In 1906 George Hirst (Yorkshire) established another record by scoring 2,385 runs and taking 208 wickets.

T. Richardson (Surrey) took 290 wickets in first-class matches in England in 1895—a record.

Albert Trott (Middlesex) accomplished the "hat trick" twice when bowling against Somerset at Lord's on 22 May, 1896—a record.

Arthur Mold (Lancs.) sent the ball 63 yds. 6 ins. when bowling against Surrey at the Oval, 20 Aug., 1896—a record.

The record benefit accorded a professional was that of George Hirst (Yorkshire). He received £3,703 2s. as the result of the match v. Lancashire at Leeds, Aug. 1904.

By scoring 3,518 runs in first-class matches in one season, T. Hayward (Surrey) established a record in 1906 for the highest individual aggregate.

Playing for Australia v. England in a test match at the Oval in Aug. 1909, Warren Bardsley (New South Wales) established a record for test matches by scoring two separate hundreds in one match, viz., 136 and 130.

CRIME. About 1856 it was computed that a fifteenth part of the population of the United Kingdom lived by crime. The increase in education and manufactures is gradually reducing this proportion. From 1848 to 1865 there had been no commitment for political offences, such as treason or sedition. The returns of thirty-two years showed that crime absolutely and relatively diminished (Sept. 1866). "Judicial Statistics" for England and Wales, with abundant details, published by the government annually, began with the year 1856; the new series (in two parts, civil and criminal, published separately) began in 1893; comparative tables, 1857-96. CRIMEA, or CRIM TARTARY, a peninsula in the Euxine or Black Sea, the ancient Taurica Chersonesus, colonised by the Greeks about 550 B.C.

The Milesians founded the kingdom of Bosphorus, now Kertch, which about 108 B.C. formed part of the dominion of Mithridates, king of Pontus, whose descendants continued to rule the country under Roman protection till the irruption of the Goths, Huns, &c. about A.D. 258. About 1237 it fell into the hands of the Mongols under Genghis Khan; soon after the Venetians established commercial stations, with a lucrative trade, but were supplanted by the Genoese, who were permitted to rebuild and fortify Kaffa, about 1261. In 1475 Mahomet II. expelled the Genoese, and subjected the peninsula to the Ottoman yoke; permitting the government to remain in the hands of the native khans, but closing the Black Sea to Western Europe. In 1774, by the intervention of the empress Catherine II., the Crimea recovered its independence: but on the abdication of the khan in 1783, the Russians took possession of the country, after a war with Turkey, and retained it by the treaty of Jassy, 9 Jan. 1792. The Crimea (now Taurida) was divided into eight governments in 1802. War having been declared against Russia by England and France, 28 March, 1854, large masses of troops were sent to the East, which, after remaining some time at Gallipoli, and other places, sailed for Varna, where they disembarked 29 May. An expedition against the Crimea having been determined on, the allied British, French, and Turkish forces, amounting to 58,000 men (26,000 British), commanded by Lord Raglan and marshal St. Arnaud, sailed from Varna, 3 Sept. and landed on the 14th, 15th, and 16th, without opposition, at Old Fort, near Eupatoria, about 30 miles from Sebastopol. On the 20th they attacked the Russians, between 40,000 and 50,000 strong (under prince Menschikoff), entrenched on the heights of Alma, supposed to be unassailable. After a sharp contest the Russians were totally routed. See Alma and Russo-Turkish War. Peace was proclaimed in April, 1856, and the allies quitted the Crimea 12 July following.

CRIMES ACTS, see Prevention.

CRIMINAL LAW PROCEDURE (IRELAND) ACT, (see Ireland) 50 & 51 Vict. c. 20, passed 19 July, 1887, provides for summary jurisdiction by magistrates, special juries, change of place of trial, proclamation of districts, prohibition of dangerous associations, and continuance of 44 & 45 Vict. c. 5, and 49 & 50 Vict. c. 24. Mr. Dillon's motion for 2nd reading of repeal bill rejected, 220-141, 19 April, 1899. Act for Scotland passed 16 Sept. 1887 to simplify and amend the Criminal Law of Scotland.

CRIMINAL LAWS OF ENGLAND. Their great severity, pointed out by sir Samuel Romilly, sir James Mackintosh, and others, about 1818, was considerably mitigated by sir R. Peel's acts, passed 1826-8. The criminal law acts were consolidated by 24 and 25 Vict. cc. 94-100, 1861. Some defects were amended by an act passed in 1867. The punishment of death is now virtually restricted to treason and wilful murder. See Evidence.

CRIMINOLOGY, as a branch of anthropology which treats of crime and criminals, is based on the researches of Dr. Lombroso, of Turin, the author of "L'Uomo Delinquente," published 1875 (several editions since). In this work he expounds his theory of criminology, and indicates the physical and mental defects by which the habitual criminal is characterised. The treatment of criminals at Elmira, with the view to their reclamation, is based upon criminal anthropology.

Prof. Lombroso, b. 1835; died . . . 19 Oct. 1909

CRIMISUS, a river in Sicily, near which Timoleon defeated the Carthaginians, 339 B.C.

CRIMPING-HOUSES were used to entrap persons into the army—hence the name of "crimp sergeant," and later into the mercantile marine. Some of them in London were destroyed by the populace, in consequence of a young man who had been enticed into one being killed in endeavouring to escape, 16 Sept. 1794. Crimping now severely punished by penalty of a heavy fine, by sects. 110-112 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894.

CRINAN CANAL, Argyleshire, cut through Kintyre peninsula, 1793-1801: 15 locks; saves about 115 miles.

CRINOLINE (a French word, meaning stuff made of erin, hair) is the modern name of the "fardingale" of the time of queen Elizabeth, hoop-like petticoats made of whalebone, &c., revived in France and England since 1855. They have frequently occasioned loss of life, by coming in contact with fire and machinery. In No. 116 of the Tatler, published 5 Jan. 1710, is an amusing trial of the hoop-petticoat then in fashion. An attempt to revive the crinoline was made in the autumn of 1904, when steels, etc., were placed in dress skirts and a great revival of Victorian fashions reached its height. It soon died down. In the early spring of 1909 there was a much-boomed "coming revival" of the crinoline which, however, hardly got beyond the stage of prophetic illustrations in the more popular newspapers.

CRIPPLEGATE (London) was so-called from the lame beggars who sat there, so early as the year 1010. The gate was rebuilt by the brewers of London in 1244; and was pulled down and sold for 91*l.* in July, 1760. The poet Milton was buried in the church near it, 12 Nov. 1674. Cripple-gate institute (founded by the duke of York, July, 1894) opened by the lord mayor, 4 Nov. 1896. See London and Fires, Nov. 1897.

CRISPIN and CRISPIANUS are said to have been two saints, born at Rome, from whence they travelled to Soissons, in France, to propagate the Christian religion. They worked as shoemakers; but the governor of the town discovering them to be Christians, ordered them to be beheaded, about 288. Their day is 25 Oct.

CRITH (from the Greek krithē, a barleycorn or small weight), a term suggested by Dr. A. W. Hofmann (about 1864) to express the volume-weight of gases; a cube containing 1 litre of hydrogen (0.0896 gramme) to be the unit. Hydrogen being 1 crith, oxygen will be 16, nitrogen 14 criths.

CRITICAL TEMPERATURE, or the temperature below which a substance may, and above which it cannot, be liquefied by pressure alone. Its discovery by Dr. Andrews of Belfast, 1869, first gave the means of distinguishing between a true gas (a substance above) and a true vapour (a substance below its critical temperature).

CRITICS. The first society of them was formed 276 B.C. Blair. Varro, Cicero, Apollonius, and Aristarchus were ancient critics. In modern times the Journal des Savans was the earliest periodical critical work. It was originated by Denis de Sallo, ecclesiastical councillor in the parliament of France, and was first published at Paris, 30 May, 1655, and is still continued. Jean Le Clerc's "Ars Critica," published 1696, is said to be the earliest systematic treatise. The first work of this kind in England was the Review of Daniel Defoe (the term being invented by himself), published in Feb. 1703. The Works of the Learned began 1710, and the Waies of Literature in 1714; discontinued in 1722. See Reviews.

The legality of fair criticism was established in the English courts, in Feb. 1794, when an action that excited great attention, brought by an author against a reviewer for a severe critique upon his work, was determined in favour of the defendant on the principle that criticism is allowable, however sharp, if just, and not malicious. See Trials.

CROIX, ST., a W. India Island, purchased from the French by Christian VI. king of Denmark, in 1733; taken by sir Alexander Cochrane, 22 Dec. 1807; restored in 1814.

CROMLECHS, ancient monuments, formerly considered to be Druidical altars, but now believed to be connected with burials. One still exists in Anglesey: similar structures have been found in Ireland, India, Arabia, and other countries.

CRONIN CASE. See United States, 1889.

CRONSTADT (or Kronstadt), Russia, founded by Peter the Great, 1710, and received its name (Crown-town) in 1721. Connected with St. Petersburg since 1884 by the Cronstadt ship canal. Murder of the governor, rear-admiral Ragvozzoff, and suicide of Peninsky, the murderer, a discharged official, 17 Aug. 1894. See Russia.

CROOK, a bishop's pastoral staff or crook, distinct from the crosier. Many pastoral staffs have been presented to English bishops from 1872-1905.

CROPREDY BRIDGE, near Banbury, Oxfordshire. Here the royalists defeated sir William Waller and the army of the parliament, 29 June, 1644.

CROQUET. This game, which became common in Britain about 1850, is said to be a revival of the old Pall Mall (which see). The hoops used in the game as at present (1910) are much narrower than those formerly in use, and the game generally has been made more scientific. Popular since 1900 in the United States, under the name of Rogue. United All England Croquet Association founded 1895.

CRORE, one hundred lakhs, or 10,000,000, chiefly in the use of rupees. A crore of rupees, written officially, Rx 1,000,000, is worth about 666,666*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

CROSIER, a staff surmounted by a cross, borne before an archbishop, was in use in the 4th century. The bearing a crosier before ecclesiastics is mentioned in the life of St. Cæsareus of Arles about 500. The term "crozier" is sometimes erroneously applied to the pastoral staff of a bishop, which terminates in an ornamental curve or crook.

CROSS. That on which the Redeemer suffered on Mount Calvary, was said to have been found at Jerusalem, with two others, deep in the ground, by the empress Helena, mother of Constantine I., 3 May, 326 (termed the Invention of the Cross); commemorated annually on that day. It was carried away by Chosroes, king of Persia, on the plundering of Jerusalem; but was recovered by the emperor Heraclius (who defeated him in battle), 14 Sept. 615, and that day has since been commemorated as "the festival of the Exaltation of the Cross," established in 642.

It is asserted by church writers that a great shining cross was seen in the heavens by Constantine, and that it led him to adopt it on his standard, with the inscription "In hoc signo vinces." "Under this sign thou shalt conquer." With this (Labarum) he advanced to Rome, where he vanquished Maxentius, 27 Oct. 312. Leuglet.

Signing with the Cross was first practised by Christians to distinguish themselves from the Pagans, about 110
 In the time of Tertullian, it was deemed efficacious against poison, witchcraft, &c. 260

Crosses in churches and chambers were introduced about 431; and set up on steeples about 568

Maid of the Cross were a community of young women who made vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, instituted in 1265

12 crosses in honour of queen Eleanor were set up in the places where her hearse rested, between 1290 (when she died) and 1307; repaired crosses remain at Tottenham, Waltham, and Northampton 1892

Crosses and idolatrous pictures were removed from churches, and crosses in the streets demolished by order of parliament 1641

The order of Ladies of the Star of the Cross was instituted by the empress Eleonora di Gonzaga, wife of Leopold I., in 1668

CROTONA (S. Italy), a city founded by the Achaean Greeks about 710 B.C. Here Pythagoras taught about 520. The Crotons destroyed Sybaris, 510.

CROWN. An Amalekite brought Saul's crown to David, 1056 B.C. (2 Sam. i.) The first Roman who wore a crown was Tarquin the Elder, 616 B.C. The crown was first a fillet tied round the head; afterwards it was formed of leaves and flowers, and also of stuffs adorned with jewels. See Tiara.

The crown of Alfred had two little bells attached (872); it is said to have been long preserved at Westminster, and may have been that described in the parliamentary inventory taken in 1649.

Athelstan's crown resembled an earl's coronet, 929.
 William I. wore his crown on a cap, adorned with points, 1066.

Richard III. introduced the crosses, 1483.

Henry VII. introduced the arches, 1485.

The crown and regalia of England were pledged to the city of London by Richard II. for 2000*l.* in 1386; see the king's receipt on redeeming them. Kymer.

The crown of Charles II., made in 1660, is the oldest existing in England; see Blood's Conspiracy.

The Imperial State Crown of England was made in 1838, principally with jewels taken from old crowns. It contains one large ruby, 1 large sapphire, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 1363 brilliants, 1273 rose diamonds, 147 table diamonds, 4 drop-shaped pearls, and 273 pearls.

Queen Alexandra's coronation crown of diamonds (3,688), 22 oz. 15 dwt. in weight.

CROWN OF INDIA, Imperial Order of, instituted by Queen Victoria (to commemorate the assumption of the title of empress, 1 Jan. 1877), for princesses of the royal family, distinguished Indian and British ladies, and wives of viceroys and governors and secretaries of state for India; 31 Dec. 1877. Twelve ladies (the late marchioness of Salisbury and others) invested, 29 April, 1878.

CROWN LANDS. The revenue arising from those in England is now nearly all subject to parliament, which annually provides for the support of the sovereign and government about 375,000*l.* The revenue of the duchy of Cornwall belongs to the prince of Wales even during his minority. Henry VII. (1485) resumed those lands which had been given to their followers by the sovereigns of the house of York. The hereditary estates of the crown were largely bestowed on their courtiers by the sovereigns — especially by the Stuarts. The income of the crown, formerly derived from lands, royalties, &c., now belongs to the state exchequer, see Civil List. The crown lands act passed, 1894. For year ended 31 March, 1905, receipts were 665,155*l.*, expenditure, 154,063*l.*; 1906, receipts, 767,790*l.*, expenditure, 151,395*l.*; 1907, receipts, 868,303*l.*, expenditure, 142,250*l.*; 1908, receipts, 802,144*l.*, expenditure, 183,304*l.*

CROWNS in gold were coined by Henry VIII., 1522. Crowns and half-crowns of silver were coined in England by Edward VI. in 1553. None were coined in 1861, and they were gradually withdrawn from circulation. The coinage of half-crowns was resumed in 1874, after an inquiry as to their utility. The coinage of silver crowns recommenced in 1887.

CROWS. An act passed for their destruction in England, 24 Hen. VIII. 1532. Crows were anciently employed as letter-bearers.

CROYDON, Surrey, granted to Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, about 1070. Archbishop Whitgift's hospital was founded in 1596; endowment also endows the grammar school, reconstituted 1881, and middle schools; abp. Tenison, in 1714, endowed schools for boys and girls. The fine old parish church was burnt, 5, 6 Jan. 1867, rebuilt 1870. Croydon incorporated by charter, 15 Feb. 1883. Polytechnic institution opened by the archbishop of Canterbury, 22 Dec. 1891. New Grand theatre opened by Mr. Beerbohm Tree and company, 6 April, 1896. Visit of the prince and princess of Wales; town hall, courts of justice, and free library opened, 19 May, 1896. Electric tramway opened, 26 Sept. 1901. See Fires. Dr. Pereira consec. suff. bp. of Croydon, 25 Jan. 1904. Pop. 1901, 133,885.

CROYLAND or CROWLAND, Lincolnshire. The foundation of an abbey here was ascribed to king Ethelbald, 716. Its history, by Ingulph, printed by Peter of Blois, 1684, of which a translation by H. T. Riley was published by Mr. Bohn, 1854, is generally considered fabulous.

CROZIER, see Crosier.

CRUCIFIX, the cross with the figure of Christ attached to it, first known in the fourth, came into general use in the eighth century.

CRUCIFIXION. A mode of execution common among the Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, Carthaginians, Greeks, and Romans. Ariarathes, of Cappadocia, aged 80, vanquished by Perdiccas, and discovered among the prisoners, was flayed alive, and nailed to a cross, with his principal officers, 322 B.C. Jesus Christ was crucified 3 April, A.D. 33. Usher. (15 April, A.D. 29, Clinton; 28 March, A.D. 31, Hales; probably 7 April, A.D. 30, Lynn). Crucifixion was ordered to be discontinued by Constantine, 330. Lenglet.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS, see Animals, Children, and Vivisection.

CRUSADES (French Croisades), wars undertaken to drive the infidels from Jerusalem and the "Holy Land." Peter Gautier, the Hermit, an officer of Amiens, on his return from pilgrimage, incited pope Urban II. to expel infidels from the city where Christ had taught. Urban convened a council of 310 bishops at Clermont in France, at which the ambassadors of the chief Christian potentates assisted, and gave Peter the commission to summon Europe to a general war, 1094. The first crusade was published; an army of 300,000 men was raised, of which Peter had the direction, and Godfrey de Bouillon the command, 1095. The warriors wore a red cross upon the right shoulder; and their motto was Volonté de Dieu, "God's will."—The French government have published some of the Historians of the Crusades (1844-36).

- I. Crusade (1095) ended by Jerusalem being taken by assault, 15 July, 1099, and Godfrey de Bouillon made king.
- II. Preached by St. Bernard in 1146, headed by emperor Conrad II., and Louis VII. of France. Crusaders defeated; Jerusalem lost in 1187.
- III. Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, &c., in 1188, joined by Philip II. of France and Richard I. of England, in 1190. Glorious, but fruitless.
- IV. 1195, by emperor Henry VI.: successful till his death in 1197.
- V. Proclaimed by Innocent III., 1198. Baldwin, count of Flanders, attacked the Greeks, and took Constantinople in 1203. His companions returned.
- VI. In 1216. In 1229, emperor Frederick II. obtained possession of Jerusalem on a truce for ten years. In 1240, Richard, earl of Cornwall, arrived at Palestine, but soon departed.
- VII. By Louis IX. (St. Louis), 1248, who was defeated and taken prisoner at Mansourah, 5 April, 1250; released by ransom; truce of ten years.
- VIII. and last, in 1270, by the same prince, who died of a contagious disease, at Carthage, in Africa, 2 Aug. Prince Edward, afterwards Edward I. of England, was at Acre, 1271. In 1291, the sultan took Acre, and the Christians were driven out of Syria.

CRUTCHED FRIARS, who bore the figure of the cross on their back and breast; from which circumstance they derived their name, a corruption of croisiers, "cross bearers," an order founded at Bologna about 1169. They are also called Trinitarians. They had a monastery in London in a district still called Crutched Friars.

CRUZ, see Santa Cruz.

CRWTH, a stringed musical instrument, rudely resembling a violin, and played with a bow. Mention is made of the crwth in the 17th century, used in Wales, Ireland, and Brittany until the 19th century, but now obsolete.

CRYOLITE, a Greenland mineral, a fluoride of aluminium and sodium, employed in procuring metallic aluminium in 1855.

CRYOPHORUS, an instrument (invented by Dr. Wollaston about 1812) to demonstrate the relation between evaporation at low temperatures and the production of cold.

CRYPTOGRAPH, an apparatus for writing in cipher, invented by sir Charles Wheatstone, and made known in 1868, in which different key-words may be employed, and it is said, absolute secrecy ensured. See Cipher.

CRYPTON, a new gas discovered by prof. Ramsay by means of the spectroscope, reported, 6 June, 1898.

CRYSTALLOGRAPHY is the science relating to the symmetrical forms assumed by substances passing from the liquid to the solid state. Romé de Lisle published his "Essai de Cristallographie," in 1772; but René-Just Haüy is regarded as the founder of the modern school of crystallography (1801). Whewell, Dana, Dufresnoy, and Miller, are eminent modern writers on this subject.

- CUCUMBERS, noticed by Virgil and other ancient poets, were brought to England from the Netherlands about 1538.
- CUDDALORE (India), on the coast of the Carnatic, was acquired by the English in 1681. It was reduced by the French in 1758, but recaptured in 1760 by sir Eyre Coote. Again lost in 1781, it underwent a destructive siege by the British under general Stuart, in 1783, which was continued until peace was signed, when it reverted to them, 1784.

CUENCA, New Castile, Spain, 80 miles from Madrid, attacked by the Carlists 13 July, and captured 14 July, 1874. The garrison and the inhabitants were barbarously used. General Lopez Pinto rescued the prisoners, 19 July.

CUIRASS, a part of Greek and Roman armour. The skins of beasts, and afterwards tanned leather, formed the cuirass of the Britons until the Anglo-Saxon era. It was afterwards made of iron and brass. The cuirass was worn by cavalry in the reign of Henry III. 1216 et seq. Napoleon had several regiments of cavalry wearing cuirasses; and most European armies have picked corps of such. For bullet-proof cuirasses, see Bullets, 1894.

CULDEES, said to derive their name from cultores Dei, worshippers of God, monks in Scotland and Ireland, who had their principal seat at St. Andrews. It is said that in 1185 at Tipperary there was a Culdean abbey whose monks were "attached to simple truth and pure Christian worship, and had not yet conformed to the reigning superstition." They were eventually subjected to the papal yoke.

CULLEN'S-WOOD (Ireland). An English colony from Bristol inhabiting Dublin, went to divert themselves at Cullen's-wood, when the O'Byrnes and O'Tooles fell upon them, and destroyed 500 men, besides women and children, 30 March, 1209 (on Easter, afterwards called Black Monday).

CULLINAN DIAMOND. See under Diamond, 1907 and 1910.

CULLODEN, near Inverness, where the English, under William, duke of Cumberland, defeated the Scottish headed by Charles Edward Stuart, the young Pretender, 16 April, 1746. The Scots lost 2500 men killed upon the field, or in the slaughter which occurred in the cruel pursuit, while the loss of the English did not far exceed 200. Prince Charles, who wandered among the wilds of Scotland for six months, while 30,000*l.* were offered for taking him, at length escaped from Uist to Morlaix, and died at Rome, 3 March, 1788.

CULTURE, according to Mr. Matthew Arnold ("The Apostle of Culture, 'sweetness and light,' and the opponent of Philistinism"); is the knowledge of "the best that has been thought and said in the world" (1880). The writings of John Ruskin and Matthew Arnold are said to have greatly promoted culture, and refinement in literature and art among all classes in Great Britain.

CULVERIN, cannon so called from the French coulverine, said to have been introduced into England from a French model in 1534. It was originally five inches and a quarter diameter in the bore, and carried a ball of eighteen pounds. Barley.

CUMÆ (S. Italy), a Greek colony, said to have been founded 1050 B.C., probably too early, and to have been the residence of the ancient Sibyl. It was taken by the Samnites 420 B.C., and was annexed by the Romans 338 B.C.

CUMBERLAND, a N.W. county of England, was granted to Malcolm I. of Scotland in 945, by king Edmund, "on condition that he should be his fellow-worker." It was seized by William I., but restored to Malcolm III., "who became his man," 1072. William the Lion, after his defeat at Alnwick, resigned Cumberland to Henry II., and it was finally annexed to England in 1237. Brandelhow park, Keswick, opened 16 Oct. 1902.

DUKES.

1726. William Augustus, second son of George II., died 13 Oct. 1765.

1766. Henry Frederic, son of Frederic, prince of Wales, died 18 Sept. 1790.

1799. Ernest Augustus, fifth son of George III.; became king of Hanover, 20 June, 1837; died 18 Nov. 1851.

1851. George V., the ex-king of Hanover; died 12 June, 1878.

1878. Ernest Augustus, son; born 21 Sept. 1845, married princess Thyra of Denmark, 21 Dec., 1878. Issue, George William, born 28 Oct. 1880, and five other children. Prince Christian, born 4 July, 1885, died 3 Sept. 1901.

A rescript from the emperor William II. was issued 12 March, 1892, restoring the Guelph fund (the accumulated property of king George V.), which had been sequestrated in 2 March, 1866, to his son, the duke of Cumberland, on certain conditions, the duke having stated in a letter to the emperor, dated 10 March, "that he had no intention of engaging in any undertaking which would threaten the peace of the German Empire." The Guelph Fund bill for making the necessary arrangements was passed by the Prussian diet, 31 March-6 April, 1892.

The duke settled; the duke retains the Guelph museum, library, and gardens for the benefit of the public, March, 1893.

CUMULATIVE VOTE, in parliamentary elections, proposed by Mr. Robert Lowe,* 4 July, during the debates on the reform bill; and rejected, 5 July, 1867, by 314 to 173. By the act passed 15 Aug. 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), it was enacted that at a contested election for any county or borough represented by three members, no person shall vote for more than two candidates. The cumulative vote was used in the election of the London school board, 29 Nov. 1870.

CUNAXA, in Mesopotamia, near the Euphrates, where Cyrus the younger was defeated and slain by his brother Artaxerxes II., against whom he had conspired (401 B.C.), narrated in Xenophon's Anabasis. His Greek auxiliaries were successful; see Retreat of the Greeks.

CUNEIFORM INSCRIPTIONS (from cuneus, Latin for a wedge), in characters resembling arrow-heads, inscribed on bricks or clay-tablets, found at Babylon, Behistun, &c., have been deciphered by English and foreign scholars, who date some of them as far back as 2000 B.C. The cuneiform characters are considered by most Assyriologists to have been originally hieroglyphs, and to have been first employed by the Akkadians of ancient Babylonia. See Assyria, Babylon, Behistun.

CUNNERSDORF (in Prussia). On 12 Aug. 1759, Frederick II. king of Prussia, with 50,000 men, attacked the Austrian and Russian army of

* "At any contested election for a county or borough represented by more than two members, and having more than one seat vacant, every voter shall be entitled to a number of votes equal to the number of vacant seats, and may give all such votes to one candidate, or may distribute them among the candidates as he thinks fit."

90,000 in their camp near this place, and at first gained considerable advantages; but pursuing them too far, the Austrians and Russians rallied, and gained a complete victory. The Prussians lost 200 pieces of cannon and 30,000 men in killed and wounded.

CUPOLA SHIPS, see Navy of England, 1861.

CUPPING, a mode of blood-letting. The skin is scarified by lancets, and a glass cup in which the air has been rarefied by heat, is immediately applied to it, when the blood usually flows into the cup. This operation was well known to the ancients, and is described by Hippocrates (413 B.C.) and Celsus (20 B.C.). It was common in England about 1820.

CURACOA (correctly, Curaçao), an island in the Caribbean sea, settled by the Spaniards about 1527, was seized by the Dutch in 1634. In 1800 the French, settled on part of this island, quarrelled with the Dutch, who surrendered it to a British frigate. It was restored to the Dutch in 1802; taken from them by the British in 1807, and again restored in 1814. The name of a well-known and esteemed liqueur manufactured chiefly in Holland from the dried peel of the curaçao orange, by a process of maceration and distillation with spirit and water. A cheap imitation is made from whisky and the peel of bitter oranges.

CURATES were of early appointment as coadjutors in the Romish church, and are mentioned in England in the 7th century. Among the acts passed for the relief of this laborious class of the clergy are the 12th Anne, 1713, and 36th, 53d, and 58th Geo. III., and especially the beneficent act, 2 Will. IV. Oct. 1831. It appeared by parliamentary reports on ecclesiastical revenues, that there were in 1831, 5230 curates in England and Wales, whose stipends amounted to 424,695*l*. The greatest number of curates in one diocese was Lincoln, 629; and the smallest that of St. Asaph, 43. The Pastoral Aid Society was established in 1836; the Society for promoting the Employment of Additional Curates, in 1837; the Curates' Augmentation Fund, 1866.

CURFEW BELL (from the French couvre feu), was revived or introduced in England by Will. I. 1068. On the ringing of the curfew at eight o'clock in the evening all fires and candles were to be extinguished under a severe penalty. Rapin. The curfew was modified 1 Hen. I. 1100. The curfew bell is still rung in some places.

CURIATIL, see Rome, 649 B.C.

CURLING, a Scotch national game with stones on the ice, said to have been introduced from the Low Countries in the 16th century. The Duddingstone curling club was instituted 1795. The royal Caledonian curling club, founded in 1838, owns a large artificial pond at Strathallan, Perthshire. A party of Scottish curlers visited Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Canada, and played a number of matches with colonial teams, Dec. 1902–Feb. 1903.

Results of curling—internationals between England and Scotland: played 5; Scotland won 4, England won 1.

CURRENTS, from Corinth, whence, probably, the tree was first brought to us about 1533. The name is also given to a small kind of dried grape, brought from the Levant and Zante. The duty on these currants (4*s*. 4*d*. per cwt. in 1834) has been reduced to 7*s*.; reduced to 2*s*. 17 April, 1890. The hawthorn currant (Ribes Oxycanthoides) came from Canada in 1705, see Greece 1903.

CURRENCY ACTS. See under Bank of England, 1797–1823, and Gold. 1816. Those of sir Robert Peel were passed in 1819 and in 1844.

Royal commission appointed to inquire into the depreciation of silver, relative values of the precious metals, &c., about 7 Sept. 1886. In their final report, issued 6 Nov. 1888, the commissioners were found to be greatly divided in opinion respecting bi-metallicism, a paper currency, etc. Mr. H. Chaplin advocates his "thirty shilling" theory Jan. 1889.

CURSITOR BARON. This office, formerly attached to the court of exchequer, was abolished in 1856, on the death of the right hon. George Banks.

CURTATONE, near Mantua, N. Italy. Here the Austrians, under Radetzky, crossed the Mincio, and defeated the Italians after a severe conflict, 29 May, 1848.

CUSHEE PIECES, invented by Richard Leake, the master-gunner of the Royal Prince man-of-war, renowned for bravery shown in the engagement with the Dutch admiral Van Tromp, in 1673.

CUSTOM is a law not written (lex non scripta), established by long usage and consent, and is distinguished from lex scripta, or the written law. It is the rule of law when it is derived from 1189 downwards. Sixty years' custom is binding in the civil law, and forty years' in ecclesiastical cases.

CUSTOMS were collected upon merchandise in England, under Ethelred II. in 979. The king's claim to them by grant of parliament was established 3 Edw. I. 1274. The customs were farmed to sir Thomas Smith for annual sums varying from 14,000*l*. to 50,000*l*. in the reign of Elizabeth. Stow. They were farmed by Charles II. for 390,000*l*. in 1666. Davenant. In 1671 commissioners were appointed. The customs were consolidated by Mr. Pitt in 1787. Between 1820 and 1830 so many reductions and consolidations were made in the customs department, that above a quarter of a million was saved in salaries, though the work had enormously increased.—Acts consolidating the customs duties were passed in 1853, 1854, and 1860, whereby the number of articles in the tariff and the amount of the customs were greatly reduced. Many changes have been made since; by the Customs Act of 1890, the laws were amended and the duties modified; see Revenue. The disqualification of custom-house officers and officers of excise from voting for the election of members of parliament in 1782, was removed in 1867–8.

The laws respecting the customs were amended by an act passed 21 Aug. 1871, and consolidated by acts passed, 24 July, 1876; amended, 1889 and 1898.

CUSTOS ROTULORUM, keeper of the rolls or records of the sessions of the peace, previously nominated by the lord chancellor, was in 1545 directed to be appointed by a bill signed by the king. The act was confirmed in 1680.

CUSTOZZA, near Verona, N. Italy. Here the Italians were defeated by marshal Radetzky, 23 July, 1848; and here they were again defeated, 24 June, 1866, after a series of desperate attacks on the Austrian army. The Italians were commanded by their king, Victor Emmanuel, and the Austrians by the archduke Albrecht. The Italian loss was computed to be 720 killed, 3112 wounded, and 4315 missing; the Austrian loss, 960 killed, 3690 wounded, and nearly a thousand prisoners. The Italians soon recrossed the Mincio.

CUTCH (Kachh), W. India, a principality under the government of Bombay. In consequence of the depredations of the natives, the East India government resorted to hostile measures, which resulted in a stringent treaty with the rao in Jan. 1816. In 1819 he was deposed for misgovernment, and replaced by his infant son, supported by a British contingent. The traffic in children, detected in Dec. 1835, was suppressed by the British. Many persons perished by an earthquake in July, 1819.

CUTLERY, see Steel, Cutlers' Feast, see Sheffield, 1889.

CUTTACK (Katak), E. India, a British province ceded to the E. I. company in 1803. Cuttack, the capital, was taken by col. Harcourt, 14 Oct. same year. The Mahrattas conquered it in 1750. Thornton.

CUTTING-OUT MACHINES. Wearing apparel was first cut out by machinery in England by Messrs. Hyams in 1853. The machine, invented by Mr. Frederick Osbourn, consists of a reciprocating vertical knife working through a slot in the table that supports the pile of cloth to be cut. The cloth being pressed up to the edge of the knife by the attendant, the knife will sever it in the direction of the lines marked on the upper layer.

CUZCO, capital of Peru, was entered by Pizarro in Nov. 1533, and taken by him in Aug. 1536, after five months' siege.

CYANOGEN, a colourless gas (composed of nitrogen and carbon), irritating to the nose and eyes, derived from Prussian blue, was first obtained in the free state by Gay Lussac in 1815, being the first instance of the isolation of a compound radical.

CYCLE of the sun, a period of twenty-eight years, which having elapsed, the dominical or Sunday letters return to their former place, and proceed in the former order according to the Julian Calendar; that of the moon is nineteen lunar years and seven intercalary months, or nineteen solar years. The cycle of Jupiter is sixty years. The Paschal cycle, or the time of keeping Easter, was first calculated for the period of 532 years by Victorius, 463. Blair. See Metonic Cycle, Calippic Period.

CYCLE AND CYCLING. The origin of the cycle is unknown. Velocipedes or manumotive machines with three or more wheels were occasionally in use, one of the earliest being the invention of Richard Lovell Edgeworth, circa 1767. A machine of this kind was invented by Blanchard, the aeronaut, and is described in the Journal de Paris, 27 July, 1779; and one was invented by Nicéphore Niepce in 1818. The "dandy-horse," or "Draisena," a kind of bicycle, was patented for the Baron von Drais in Paris and London in 1818, and is described in "Ackermann's Repository," Feb., 1819. It consisted of two wheels, about 30 in. in diameter, running one in the wake of the other, and connected by a beam of wood, upon which, half way from each end, was a saddle or perch; an arm rest at the fore end of the beam completed the apparatus. It was propelled by kicking the ground with the right and left foot alternately. It fell into disuse in consequence of the satire of Cruikshank, and contemporary humorists. The first practical bicycle, furnished with cranks and levers, is said to have been invented by Kirkpatrick Macmillan, a blacksmith of Keir, Dumfriesshire, circa 1840; another is stated to have been made by Garvin Dalzell, who called it "wooden horse," circa 1846. M. Michaux, of Paris, invented pedals to propel the front wheel, and introduced the bicycle proper in 1866; from France it was imported into England about 1868. James Starley, a mechanic, of Albourne, Sussex, transformed the old-fashioned "bone-shaker" into the modern bicycle and tricycle. The "Otto" bicycle was patented in 1881; many other machines with various improvements since that date. A great impetus was given to the use of the bicycle by the invention of the safety bicycle, by J. Kemp Starley (died 29 Oct., 1901), now in universal use, and the invention of the pneumatic tyre and the "free" wheel. The motor cycle was introduced about 1900.

CYCLISTS' TOURING CLUB, founded 1878, to encourage and promote touring. Publishes a monthly Gazette, and an official handbook.

NATIONAL CYCLISTS' UNION, founded 1878, to protect the legislative interests of cycling; it frames and upholds the amateur definition of "cyclist"; holds amateur championships.

CYR, ST., near Versailles. Here a college for ladies was founded by madame De Maintenon in 1686, and here she died, 15 April, 1719. It was made a military college in 1803; suppressed in 1886.

CYRENAIC SECT, founded by Aristippus the Elder, 365 B.C. They taught that the supreme good of man is pleasure, particularly that of the senses; and that even virtue ought to be commended only because it gave pleasure.

CYRENE (N. W. Africa), a Greek colony, founded by Battus about 630 B.C. Aristæus, who was chief of the colonists here, gave the city his mother's name. It was also called Pentapolis, on account of its five towns; namely, Cyrene, Ptolemais, Berenice, Apollonia, and Arsinoë. It was conquered by Ptolemy Soter I., who placed many Jews here (286 B.C.). Cyrene was left by Ptolemy Apion to the Romans, 96 B.C. It is now a desert. Some Cyrenaic sculptures were placed in the British Museum in July, 1861.

CYROPEDIUM, see Cortus.

CYZICUS (Asia Minor). In the Peloponnesian war, the Lacedæmonian fleet under the command of Mindarus, assisted by Pharnabazus, the Persian, was encountered by the Athenians under Alcibiades, and defeated with great slaughter, near Cyzicus; Mindarus being slain: 410 B.C. Plutarch.

CZAR, more properly tsar or tzar, the title of the emperor of Russia, probably derived from Cæsar, a title said to have been assumed by Ivan Basilowitz after defeating the Tartars, about 1482. The empress is termed czarina or tsarina, and the eldest son cesarevitch or tsarevitch; the spelling still varies.

CZECHS, the most westerly branch of the Slavic family of nations, which about 480 migrated to Bohemia and Moravia (which see). The antagonism between the Germans and Czechs is milder in Moravia than in Bohemia. Their representatives entered the reichsrath at Vienna, 8 Oct., 1879, see Hungary 1903.

DACIA, a Roman province (included Temeswar and parts of Hungary, Transylvania, Wallachia, Moldavia, and Galicia), after many contests, was subdued by Trajan, 106, when Decebalus, the Dacian leader, was killed. Dacia was abandoned to the Goths by Aurelian, in 270; subdued by the Huns, 376; by Scythians, 566; by Charlemagne, and by the Magyars, in the 9th century.

DACOITS, hereditary robbers of North India, formerly employed in war by native sovereigns.

It is stated that between 1818 and 1834, one tribe alone, in 118 "dacoitees," or expeditions, killed 172 persons, and obtained plunder valued at 115,000*l*. In 1838 Lord Auckland did much to suppress the dacoits, and many settlements were broken up, but they are not quite extinct in Bengal and Burmah. Several dacoitees were suppressed in 1879. See Burmah.

DAGHESTAN (a mountain country S. W. Asia), was conquered by the czar Peter, 1723; restored to Persia, 1735; re-annexed to Russia by Alexander I., 1813.

DAGUERREOTYPE PROCESS, invented by Daguerre, and published 1838; see Photography.

DAHLIA, a flower discovered in Mexico by Vincent Cervantes in 1784, and brought to Europe about 1787, and cultivated by the Swedish botanist, Dahl. About 1814 it was introduced into France and England; André Thouine suggested improvements in its culture, and it soon became a favourite. George introduced it at St. Petersburg; hence it is known in Germany as the Georgina.

DAHOMEY, a negro kingdom, West Africa, became known to Europeans early in the last century, when Trudo Andati or Guadjor Trudo, a man of energy and talent, was king. He died in 1732, and was succeeded by a series of cruel tyrants, a large part of whose revenue was derived from the slave-trade. Abbeokuta, a robbers' haunt in 1825, was, subsequent to 1829, a strong-walled town, inhabited by free blacks; and was consequently opposed by the king of Dahomey. His army was severely defeated in its attacks on this place, and in one on 16 March, 1864, a great number of his Amazons (female celibates) were slain. Dahomey has been visited by captain Burton and other travellers, who have described the royal sanguinary customs. A French colony since 1892; administered by a lieutenant-governor with an administrative council. Capital of Dahomey, Porto Novo, pop. about 20,000; former capital, Abomey. Chief port, Kotonou, from which a railway to the interior is being constructed, portion to Toffo, 55 miles, opened in 1905. Pop. 1,000,000 (estimated); imports, 1908, 429,495*l*., exports, 487,181*l*.

DAHRA (Algeria). On 18 June, 1845, above
 500 Kabyles at war with the French were suffocated in a cave, a fire having been kindled by order of general Pellissier, afterwards duke of Malakoff.
 They had fired on a messenger bearing an offer of a truce. The massacre was condemned by marshal
 Soult, but justified by marshal Bugeaud.

DALECARLIANS (Sweden), revolted against Christian of Denmark, 1521, and placed Gustavus
 Vasa on the throne of Sweden.

DALMATIA, an Austrian province, N. E. of the Adriatic Sea, conquered and made a province by the Romans, 34 B.C. The emperor Diocletian erected his palace at Spalato (erroneously written Spalatro), and retired there, A.D. 305. Dalmatia was held in turns by the Goths, Hungarians, and Turks, till its cession to Venice in 1699. By the treaty of Campo Formio in 1797 it was given to Austria, but in 1805 it was incorporated with Italy, and gave the title of duke to marshal Soult. In 1814 it reverted to Austria. An insurrection opposed to the new military law broke out at Bocche di Cattaro, and a conflict with the troops at Dragali took place, 10 Oct.
 1869. Several regiments were sent there, but the insurgents obtained several successes during the month. A deputation offered submission, 2 Nov., and the operations against them were suspended about the end of the month. Pop., 1900, 591,597.

 rich in minerals and pasture, occupied by German settlers and missionaries since 1840. The native population is estimated at 80,000.

During a German expedition Mr. Luderitz acquired lands at Angra Pequena from the chiefs; Dr.
 Goring, who also had obtained land, transferred his rights to Mr. Robert Lewis, a British subject, long known in the country, whose claims were set aside by the German colonial company of S.W. Africa, and he and his party were expelled.

DAMIENS' ATTEMPT. Louis XV. of France was stabbed with a knife in the right side by Damiens, a native of Arras, 5 Jan. 1757. The culprit endured the most excruciating tortures, and was then broken on the wheel, 28 March.

DAMIETTA (Lower Egypt) was taken by the crusaders, 5 Nov. 1219; lost 1221; retaken by Louis IX., 5 June, 1249; surrendered as his ransom when a prisoner, 6 May, 1250. The present town was built soon after. See Egypt, Sep. 1882. Population, city 1907, 30,000.

DAMON AND PYTHIAS (or Phintias), Pythagorean philosophers. Damon was condemned to death by the tyrant Dionysius of Syracuse, about 387 B.C. He obtained leave to go and settle some domestic affairs, promising to return at the appointed time of execution, and Pythias became his surety. When Damon did not appear, Pythias surrendered, and was led to execution; but at this critical moment Damon returned. Dionysius remitted the sentence, and desired to share their friendship.

DANAI: an ancient name of the Greeks derived from Danaus, king of Argos, 1474 B.C.

DANCE OF DEATH. The triumph of death over all ranks of men was a favourite subject with the artists of the middle ages, and appears in rude carvings and pictures in various countries. In 1462 the Dance of Death was played before René, king of Provence, in a ballet, Lou Gou, which he himself designed, and, as an allegorical drama, The Shaking of the Sheets, or the Dance of Death, survived for a long time in England. The earliest known pictorial representation of this subject is that of Orcagna, 14th cent., whose Triumph of Death is painted on the walls of the Campo Santo at Pisa.

The Chorea Machabæorum or Danse Macabre, the first printed representation, published by Guyot Marchand, a bookseller of Paris . . . 1485
 Holbein's Dance of Death (concerning the authorship of which there has been much controversy), printed at Lyons in 1538, and at Basil . . . 1594
 Rowlandson's English Dance of Death, a modern adaptation of the mediæval idea . . . 1815-16
 Many editions of the Dance of Death have since appeared; one with an introduction and notes published by Mr. Russell Smith . . . 1849
 The term Dance of Death was also applied to the frenzied movements of the Flagellants, who had sometimes skeletons depicted on their clothing, about the end of the 14th century.
Dancing mania, accompanied by aberration of mind and distortions of the body, was very prevalent in Germany in 1374, and in the 16th century in Italy, where it was termed Tarantism, and erroneously supposed to be caused by the bite of the Tarantula spider. The music and songs employed for its cure are still preserved.

DANCING was practised by the Curetes, 1534 B.C. Eusebius. The Greeks combined the dance with their dramas, and pantomimic dances were introduced on the Roman stage, 22 B.C. Usher. Dancing by cinque paces was introduced into England from Italy, A.D. 1541. In modern times the French introduced ballets analogues in their musical dramas. The country dance (contre-danse) is of French origin, but its date is not precisely known. Spelman. See Morice Dance, Quadrille, and Waltz.

DANEBOG, a Danish order of knighthood, instituted in 1671 by Christian V., remodelled in 1693 and 1808.

DANE-GELD, or DANEGELT, a tribute paid to the Danes to stop their ravages in England; first raised by Ethelred II. in 991, and again in 1003; and levied after the expulsion of the Danes to pay fees for clearing the seas of them. The tax was suppressed by Edward the Confessor in 1051; revived by William I. 1068; and formed part of the revenue of the crown, until abolished by Stephen, 1136. Every hide of land, i.e. as much as one plough could plough, or as Bede says, as much as could maintain a family, was taxed at first 1s., afterwards as much as 7s. Camden says that once 24,360*l.* was raised.

DANES, or NORTHMEN; see Denmark. During their attacks upon Britain and Ireland they made a descent on France, where, in 895, under Rollo, they received presents under the walls of Paris. They returned and ravaged the French territories as far as Ostend in 896. They attacked Italy in 903. Neustria was granted by the king of France to Rollo and his Normans (North-men), hence Normandy, in 911. The invasions of England and Ireland were as follows:—

DANGEROUS PERFORMANCES, see Children.

DANNEWERKE, or DANNAWIRKE, a series of earthworks, considered almost impregnable, stretching across the long narrow peninsula of Schleswig, Holstein, and Jutland—said to have been constructed during the "stone age," long before the art of metal-working. It was rebuilt in 937 by Thyra, queen of Gormo the Old, for which she was named "Dannabod," the pride of the Danes. It was repaired by Olaf Tryggveson between 995 and 1000. Near here the Prussians, helping the duchies, defeated the Danes, 23 April, 1848. The retreat of the Danes from it, 5 Feb. 1864, occasioned much dissatisfaction at Copenhagen.

DANTE'S DIVINA COMMEDIA was first printed in 1472. He was born 14 May, 1265, died at Ravenna, 14 Sept. 1321. A festival in his honour, at Florence, was opened by the king, 14 May, 1865, when a large statue of Dante by Pazzi of Ravenna was uncovered. An exhibition of objects relating to Dante and his works collected by Mr. P. H. Wicksteed in Dr. Williams' library, Gordon-square, London, April, 1893. Dante society founded, annual meetings, sir Theodore Martin, pres., 1899.

DANTZIC (N. Germany), a commercial city in 997; according to some authorities, built by Waldemar I. in 1165. Poland obtained the sovereignty of it in 1454. It was seized by the king of Prussia, and annexed in 1793. It surrendered to the French, May, 1807; and by the treaty of Tilsit was restored to independence, under the protection of Prussia and Saxony, July, 1807. Dantzic was besieged by the allies in 1812; and surrendered 1 Jan. 1814. By the treaty of Paris it reverted to the king of Prussia. By the Vistula breaking through its dykes, 10,000 head of cattle and 4000 houses were destroyed, and many lives lost, 9 April, 1829. Pop., 1910 (est.) 170,000.

DANUBE (German, Donau; anciently Ister and Danuvius), the largest river in Europe, except the Volga, rises in the Black Forest and falls into the Black Sea. Trajan's bridge at Gladova was destroyed by Adrian, to prevent the barbarians entering Dacia. Steam navigation was projected on this river by count Szechenyi, in 1830, and in that year the first steam-boat was launched at Vienna, and the Austrian company was formed shortly after. The Bavarian company was formed 1836. A canal between the Danube and the Maine was completed by Louis I. of Bavaria. Charlemagne, in the 8th century, contemplated uniting the Danube and Rhine by a canal. At the peace of 30 March, 1856, the free navigation of the Danube was secured, and an independent European commission appointed to make it navigable from Isakchi to the sea, which has worked with good effect. The British government, in 1868, lent 135,000*l.* to complete the works. The treaty respecting the navigation of the Danube renewed for twelve years, 13 March, 1871. The river suddenly took possession of a new bed near Vienna, 17 April, which was formally opened 30 May, 1875.

DARDANELLES, the classic Hellespont, derives its name from Dardanus, an ancient city in the Troad, and called after the ancient Dardani. Two castles (Sestos, in Roumania, and Abydos, in Anatolia), built by the sultan Mahomet VI. in 1659, command the entrance of the strait of Gallipoli, and recall the story of Hero and Leander (see Hellespont).—The passage of the strait was achieved by the British squadron under sir John Duckworth, 19 Feb. 1807; but he repassed them with great loss, 3 March, the castles of Sestos and Abydos hurling down stone-shot upon the British ships. The allied English and French fleets passed the Dardanelles at the sultan's request, Oct. 1853; see Hellespont and Xerxes, and Russo-Japanese War, 1904-5.

DARIC, a Persian gold coin, issued by Darius, hence its name, about 538 B.C. About 556 cents. Knobles. It weighed two grains more than the English guinea. Dr. Bernard.

DARIEN, ISTHMUS OF, central America, discovered by Columbus, 1494. In 1694, William Paterson, founder of the Bank of England, published his plan for colonising Darien. A company was formed in 1695, and in 1698-9, three expeditions sailed thither from Scotland, where 400,000*l.* had been raised. The first consisted of 1200 young men of all classes, besides women and children. The enterprise not having been recognised by the English government, the settlements were threatened by the Spaniards, to whom they were finally surrendered, 30 March, 1700. Paterson and a few survivors from famine and disease, had set off shortly before the arrival of the second expedition. Several years after, 398,087*l.* were voted by parliament to the survivors as "Equivalent money," 18,000*l.* were also voted to Paterson; but the bill was rejected in the house of Lords. See Panamá. The average breadth, 40 miles; least breadth, 30 miles.

DARJEELING, a British district in the Himalayas, ceded about 1824. The capital Darjeeling, is used as a sanitarium. The cultivation of tea is flourishing, and the population rapidly increasing.

DARK AGES, a term applied to the Middle Ages; according to Hallam, comprising about 1000 years—from the invasion of France by Clovis, 486, to that of Naples by Charles VIII., 1495. During this time learning was at a low ebb. Hallam's "View of the State of Europe during the Middle Ages," published 1818. Supplemental Notes, 1848.

DARLINGTON. An ancient town S. Durham, chartered and made a parliamentary borough 1867. The opening of the Stockton and Darlington railway 27 Sept. 1825, the first railway to convey passengers, gave the impulse to the prosperity of the borough. The handsome collegiate church of St. Cuthbert, founded 1160 by bishop Pudsey, and restored in 1869 by sir Gilbert Scott, is a fine specimen of Early English architecture. To the free library, opened 1885, Mr. Edward Pease gave 10,000*l.* Population 1871, 21,730; 1881, 35,102; 1891, 38,060; 1901, 46,145. See under Railways, 1825 and 1875.

DARMSTADT, capital of Hesse-Darmstadt, made a city 1330, became the residence of the landgraves, 1567. The ducal palace built 1568 et seq. Memorial to the grand duchess Alice, unveiled 12 Sept. 1902. Pop., 1905, 83,123; see Hesse, 1894.

D'ARTAGNAN, the hero of Dumas's Les Trois Mousquetaires, 1844, and its sequels. The character was probably taken from a real historical personage, Charles de Baatz de Castlemore, comte d'Artagnan, 1611-73, who commanded the French guards from 1657; killed at the siege of Maestricht, 1673.

DARTFORD (Kent). Here commenced the insurrection of Wat Tyler, 1381. A convent of nuns, of the order of St. Augustin, endowed here by Edward III. 1355, was converted by Henry VIII. into a royal palace. The first paper-mill in England was erected at Dartford by sir John Spielman, a German, in 1590 (Stow), and about the same period was erected here the first mill for splitting iron bars. The powder-mills here were blown up four times between 1730 and 1738. Various explosions have since occurred, in some cases with loss of life to many persons. Population, 1881, 10,163; 1901, 36,175.

DARTMOOR, South Devon, a tract of land, 20 miles long, 9 to 12 miles broad, subject to the duchy of Cornwall. The Dartmoor Preservation Association hold their annual meeting at Plymouth, 26 Oct. 1885. Dartmoor Prison, founded Mar. 1806. DARTMOUTH (Devon). Burnt by the French in the reigns of Richard I. and Henry IV. In a third attempt (1404), the invaders were defeated by the inhabitants, assisted by the valour of the women. The French commander, Du Chastel, three lords, and thirty-two knights, were made prisoners. In the war of the parliament, Dartmouth was taken after a siege of four weeks, by prince Maurice, who garrisoned the place for the king (1643); but it was retaken by general Fairfax in 1646. The duke and duchess of York visited the Britannia training ship (where the duke was a naval cadet), 6 July, 1899. The king, accompanied by the queen and princess Victoria, laid the stone for the new Britannia naval college, 7 March, 1902. Pop. 1901, 7,969; 1910 (est.) 9,000.

DATES were affixed to grants and assignments 18 Edw. I. 1290. Before this time it was usual at least to pass lands without dating the deed of conveyance. Lewis. Numerous instruments of assignment enrolled among our early records establish this fact. The date is determined by the names of the parties, particularly that of the grantor: the possession of land was proof of the title to it. Hardie.

SARACENS by Charles Martel. After forming part of the kingdom of Arles, it was much subdivided among counts. One of these, Humbert II., ceded Dauphiné and the Viennois to Philip VI., in 1343, for his eldest son, on the condition that the prince should be styled dauphin, which took effect in 1349, when Humbert became a monk. Louis Antoine, duke of Angoulême, son of Charles X., the last dauphin who assumed the title at his father's accession, 16 Sept. 1824, died 3 June, 1844.

DAVENTRY, Northamptonshire, an old municipal borough, situated at the sources of the Avon and Nene. Charles I. spent a few days at Daventry just before the battle of Naseby (14 June, 1645). Near here Lambert, having escaped from the Tower, was defeated and retaken, in his attempt to enkindle the war, by Monk, 21 April, 1660. Daneos or Borough hill, near the town, is one of the largest Roman camps in England. The dissenting academy removed here from Northampton in 1752, was transferred to Wymondley in 1789, thence to London as Coward College, and finally united with Homerton and Highbury Colleges as New College, in 1850.

DAVID, the capital of Chiriqui in Panama, on the Rio David, a centre of stockraising and tobacco industries. Population 1910, 12,000 (about).

DAVID'S, ST. (S. W. Wales), the ancient Menapia, now a poor decayed place, but once the metropolitan see of Wales, and archiepiscopal. When Christianity was planted in Britain, three archbishops' seats were appointed, viz. London, York, and Caerleon upon Usk, in Monmouthshire. That at Caerleon being too near the dominions of the Saxons, was removed to Mynyw, and called St. David's, in honour of the archbishop who removed it, 522. St. Sampson was the last archbishop of the Welsh; for he, withdrawing himself on account of a pestilence to Dôl, in Brittany, carried the pall with him. In the reign of Henry I. the archbishops submitted to the see of Canterbury. Beaton. Present income 4500*l*.

BISHOPS.

1800. Lord George Murray, died 3 June, 1803.
 1803. Thomas Burgess, trans. to Salisbury, June, 1825.
 1825. John Banks Jenkinson, died 7 July, 1840.
 1840. Connop Thirlwall; resigned June, 1874; died 27 July, 1875.
 1874. Wm. Basil Jones, consecrated 24 Aug.; died, 14 Jan. 1897.
 1897. John Owen, Feb.; consecrated 1 May.

DAVID'S DAY, ST., 1 March, is annually commemorated by the Welsh, in honour of St. David. Tradition states that on St. David's birthday, 540, a great victory was obtained by the Welsh over their Saxon invaders; and that the Welsh soldiers were distinguished, by order of St. David, by a leek in their caps.

DAVIS'S STRAIT (N. America), discovered by John Davis, 11 Aug. 1585, on his voyage to find a N. W. passage, 1585-87. He made two more voyages for the same purpose, and five voyages to the East Indies. In the last he was killed by Japanese pirates, on the coast of Malacca, 27 or 29 Dec. 1605.

DAVY JONES, a familiar name by which seamen designate an evil spirit. Davy Jones's locker is an equivalent phrase for the ocean. The name has been derived from Jonah the prophet, and from duffy, a W. Indian negro spirit.

DAVY LAMP, &c., see Safety Lamp.

DAVY MEDAL. Funds were furnished by the sale of sir Humphry Davy's plate. It was first awarded by the Royal Society to Professors Bunsen and Kirchhoff in 1877 for their discovery of spectrum analysis (which see). Davy-Faraday Research Laboratory, see Royal Institution.

DAVYUM. It is a metal of the platinum group, discovered by Sergius Kern, 28 June, 1877, in the residuum of platinum ore; hard, infusible, and rather ductile.

DAY. Day began at sunrise among most of the northern nations, at sunset among the Athenians and Jews; and among the Romans at midnight as with us. The Italians in some places, reckon the day from sunset to sunset, making their clocks strike twenty-four hours round. The Chinese divide the day into twelve parts of two hours each. The astronomical day begins at noon, is divided into twenty-four hours (instead of two parts of twelve hours). Thus the astronomical day 8 Dec. begins at noon of 8 Dec. and ends at noon 9 Dec. At Greenwich, from 1 Jan. 1885, the day of 24 hours began at midnight; the reckoning was recommended for railways, &c. A system of universal time for all countries was put forth by Mr. Sandford Fleming, of Canada. The Washington Prime Meridian Conference adopted a resolution declaring the universal day to be the mean solar day, beginning, for all the world, at the moment of mean midnight of the initial meridian, coinciding with the beginning of the civil day, and that meridian to be counted from zero up to 24 hours, 21 Oct. 1884. The scheme for universal time was advocated by Mr. (K.C.B. 9 Nov., 1904) W. H. M. Christie, the Astronomer Royal, at the Royal Institution, 19 March, 1886. A lawful day is a day on which a writ may be executed; Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday are excepted.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL introduced into the house of commons; reached its second reading on 5 March, 1908. It was proposed that local time, from 2 a.m. on the third Sunday in April, until 2 a.m. on the third Sunday in September, should be one hour in advance of Greenwich time, and for the remainder of the year the same as Greenwich time. In Ireland, Dublin time was to be substituted for Greenwich time. Opinion on the matter was divided, and much opposition being shown, the bill was dropped.

DEACONESSSES, or ministering widows, have their qualifications given in 1 Tim. v. 9, 10 (65). Their duties were to visit the poor and sick, assist at the agapæ or love feasts, admonish the young women, &c. The office was discontinued in the Western church after the 6th century, and in the Greek church about the 12th. In 1836 a deaconesses' house was founded by pastor Fliedner at Kaisersworth, near Düsseldorf; many since on the continent. The appointment of deaconesses, subject to the parochial clergy, was advocated by the bishop of Ely about 1853, and some were appointed. The Diocesan Deaconess Institution, London, was established in 1861. The office adopted by the church of Scotland, 1887.

DEACONS (literally servants), an order of Christian ministers, began with the Apostles, about 53. (Acts vi.) Their qualifications are given by St. Paul (65), 1st Timothy iii. 8-14. Mr. John Andrews, master of Shrewsbury High School, was ordained at Lichfield Cathedral a permanent deacon in conformity with a resolution passed in the Upper House of Convocation, Feb. 1884; his duties were to assist the priest in the communion service, &c., 18 Dec. 1887.

DEAD. Prayers for their benefit were probably offered up in the 2nd century, being referred to by Tertullian, who died 220. The practice was protested against by Arius, and defended by Epiphanius, who died 403. It is generally objected to by the church of England, but is not expressly forbidden; so decided by sir Herbert Jenner in the Court of Arches (Phillimore, Eccl. Law, 1873-6).

Book of the Dead, a collection of prayers and exorcisms written in Egyptian hieroglyphic or hieratic characters, composed for the benefit of the pilgrim soul in his journey through Amenti (the Egyptian Hades). Portions of these papyri were placed with the mummy in his tomb. They are said to form fully one half of the thousands which are extant. The "Book of the Dead" is dated from the 4th dynasty 3733-3566 B.C. After much toil a pure text with illustrations was published by M. Edouard Naville, 1886. Translations in several European languages have appeared. A facsimile of the Papyrus of Ani in the British Museum was printed in 1890. Mr. E. A. Wallis Budge's editions, with translations, 1895, 1897, 1899, and 1901.

DEAD WEIGHT LOAN acquired its name from its locking up the capital of the Bank of England, which in 1823 advanced 11,000,000*l.* to the government (to construct new ordnance, &c.). The latter engaged to give an annuity of 585,740*l.* for 44 years, which ceased in June, 1867.

DEAN, FOREST OF, Gloucestershire, anciently wooded quite through, and in the last century, though much curtailed, was twenty miles in length and ten in breadth. It was famous for its oaks, the material of our ships of war. Riots in this district, when more than 3000 persons assembled in the forest, and demolished upwards of fifty miles of wall and fence, throwing open 10,000 acres of plantation, took place on 8 June, 1831. The Dean forest (mines) act passed 16 Aug. 1871.

DEAN (decanus), a name commonly given to the arch-presbyter, or eldest presbyter, in the 12th century; originally a military title, an officer over ten soldiers. In the church of England the dean and chapter of a cathedral nominally elect the bishop and form his council. By 13 & 14 Car. II. (1662), a dean must be in priest's orders; previously the office had occasionally been held by a layman, with special dispensation. The ancient office of "rural dean" revived since 1850. The Deans' and Canons' resignation act passed 13 May, 1872. The Five Deans' memorial, and counter memorial, see Church of England, 1881. See Arches.

DEBATING SOCIETIES; several formed in the last century. The celebrated Oxford Union Society was founded in 1823, and many orators have been trained by it.

DEBTORS have been subjected to imprisonment in almost all countries and times. In the eighteen months subsequent to the panic of Dec. 1825, as many as 101,000 writs for debt were issued in England. In the year ending 5 Jan. 1830, there were 7114 persons sent to the several prisons of London; and on that day, 1547 of the number were yet confined. On the 1st of Jan. 1840, the number of prisoners for debt in England and Wales was 1732; in Ireland the number was under 1000; and in Scotland under 100. The operation of statutes of relief, and other causes, considerably reduced the number of imprisoned debtors. When the new Bankruptcy act (abolishing imprisonment for debt except when fraudulently contracted) came into operation in Nov. 1861, a number of debtors who had been confined were released. Arrest of Absconding Debtors bill, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, 1852. In 1863 nearly 18,000 persons were imprisoned by order of the county courts for contempt: average time, 15 days, amount of debt, 3*l.* 10*s.* Agitation against this imprisonment, Dec. 1892; select committee of lords on the subject met May, 1893. By an act passed 9 Aug. 1869, the imprisonment of fraudulent debtors was abolished, with certain exceptions, and nearly a hundred debtors were released by a judge's order in Jan. 1870. An act to facilitate the arrest of absconding debtors, passed 9 Aug. 1870. Imprisonment for debt in Ireland was abolished by an act passed 6 Aug. 1872, and in Scotland (after 31 Dec.) by Dr. Cameron's Act, passed 7 Sept. 1880. See Arrest, King's Bench, Bankrupts, Insolvents, Fleet, and National Debt.

7978 persons were committed to gaol by the county courts in 1871; 7,808 imprisoned in 1893; 9,141 in 1908.

DEBUSSCOPE, an instrument of French origin, somewhat similar to the kaleidoscope, said to be useful for devising patterns for calico-printers, &c., made its appearance in 1860.

DECALOGUE (Greek deka ten, and logos a word), the ten commandments (Ex. xx., Deut. v.), called by the Jews the "ten words" (Ex. xxxiv. 28). The division of the decalogue varies among the Jews and the Christian churches.

DECCAN (Dekhan or Dakhan), S. India, was invaded by the Mahometans in 1294. The first independent sultan was Alaudin. The natives revolted, and the dynasty of Bahmani was founded by Hasan Ganga in 1347. About 1686-90, Aurungzebe I. recovered the Deccan, but soon lost great part of it to the Mahrattas. The Nizam al Mulk, his viceroy, became independent in 1717. A large part of the Deccan was ceded to the English in 1818.

DECEMBER (from decem, ten), the tenth month of the year of Romulus, commencing in March. In 713 B.C. Numa introduced January and February before March, and thenceforward December became the twelfth of the year. In the reign of Commodus, A.D. 181-192, December was called, by way of flattery, Amazonius, in honour of a courtesan whom that prince had loved, and had had painted like an Amazon. The English commenced their year on the 25th December, until the reign of William I.; see Year. For 2 December revolution see France, 1851.

DECEMVIRI, or Ten Men, appointed to draw up a code of laws, to whom for a year the whole government of Rome was committed, 451 B.C. The laws they drew up were approved by the senate and general assembly of the people, written on ten metallic tables, and set up in the place where the people met (comitium). Two more tables were added by a second decemvirate, 450 B.C. The tyrannical conduct of Appius Claudius, one of the Decemviri, towards Virginia, who was stabbed by her father Virginius to save her from slavery, led to a revolution, and the re-establishment of the consular government, 449 B.C.

DECENNALIA, festivals instituted by Augustus, 17 B.C., celebrated by the Roman emperors every tenth year of their reign, with sacrifices, games, and largessea. Livy. Celebrated by Antoninus Pius, A.D. 148.

DECIMAL SYSTEM OF COINAGE, WEIGHTS, &c., see Metric System.

DECIPIUM, a metal found by M. Delafontaine in the same earth with philippium (which see); announced Nov. 1878.

DECLARATION, see Independence, Rights, and Accession.

DECORATED STYLE, see Gothic.

DECORATIVE ART. A Decorative Art society, founded in 1844, existed for a short time.

DE COURCY'S PRIVILEGE, that of standing covered before the king, granted by king John to John de Courcy, baron of Kingsale, and his successors, in 1203. He was the first Irish nobleman created by an English sovereign, 27 Hen. II. 1181, and was entrusted with the government of Ireland, 1185. The privilege was allowed to the baron of Kingsale by Will. III., Geo. III., and by Geo. IV. at his court held in Dublin, in Aug. 1821. The present baron, Michael Constantine De Courcy, premier baron of Ireland, b. 1855, succeeded 1895, is the 33rd in succession.

DECRETALS. They formed the second part of the canon law, or collection of the pope's edicts and decrees and the decrees of councils. The first acknowledged to be genuine is a letter of Siricius to Himerus, a bishop of Spain, written in the first year of his pontificate, 385. Howel. Certain false decretals were used by Gregory IV. in 837. The decretals of Gratian, a Benedictine (a collection of canons), were compiled in 1150. Hénault. Five books were collected by Gregory IX. 1227; a sixth by Boniface VIII. 1297; the Clementines by Clement V. in 1313; employed by John XXII. in 1317; the Extravagantes range from 1422 to 1483.

DEDICATION of the Jewish tabernacle took place 1490 B.C.; of the temple, 1004 B.C.; of the second temple, 515 B.C. The Christians under Constantine built new churches and dedicated them with great solemnity, in A.D. 331 et seq. The dedication of BOOKS (by authors to solicit patronage or testify respect) existed in the time of Mæcenas, 17 B.C., the friend and counsellor of Augustus, and a patron of Horace (Ode I. 1).

DEED, a written contract or agreement. The formula, "I deliver this as my act and deed," occurs in a charter of 933. Fosbrooke. Deeds in England were formerly written in Latin or French; the earliest known instance in English is the indenture between the abbot of Whitby and Robert Bustard, dated at York in 1343; see English Language.

DEEMSTER, the name given to the two judges who, in the Isle of Man, act as chief justices of the island. One presides over the northern and the other over the southern division. In Scotland, the doemster, dempster, or doomster, was the title of an official attached to the High Court of Justiciary, whose office it was to pronounce the sentence of death on condemned persons. The office was united to that of executioner.

DEEP-SEA SOUNDINGS. Much new and interesting information respecting the animal life and temperature of the deep sea was acquired by the dredgings on the coast of Norway by M. Sars, and by those of Dr. W. B. Carpenter and prof. (aft. sir) Wyville Thomson on our own coasts, near the Faroe isles, in 1868 and 1869, and in the Mediterranean by Dr. Carpenter in 1870. Living animals have been found at a depth of three miles. On 21 Dec. 1872, Dr. Wyville Thomson and a party of scientific men sailed in H.M.S. Challenger (Capt. G. S. Nares), to examine into the physical, chemical, geological, and biological condition of the great ocean basins and the direction of their currents. Deepest sounding then known was taken in the Atlantic, north of St. Thomas's, 3875 fathoms (4 miles, 710 yards), 24 March, 1873. On 10 Dec. 1874, capt. Thompson succeeded capt. Nares, who took the command of the new Arctic expedition. The Challenger returned, with valuable collections, 25 May, 1876, after a voyage of above 80,000 miles. The Challenger expedition was warmly promoted by Mr. Robert Lowe (afterwards lord Sherbrooke), chancellor of the exchequer, 1868-73.

A Norwegian expedition explored the northern seas 16 July—18 Aug. 1877; an Italian expedition in the Mediterranean started 2 Aug. 1881.

Explorations carried on in the eastern Mediterranean for the academy of Vienna; the greatest depth, 2½ miles, is between Molla and Cerigo. March, 1891. The greatest known ocean depth was said to be 4,475 fathoms south of the Ladrone Islands.

Adm. W. J. Wharton stated that the soundings taken by H.M.S. Penguin in the S. Pacific, Feb. 1896, exceeded 5,000 fathoms; Times 29 Feb. 1896

Expedition under Mr. G. Murray in the Oceanic to determine the vertical distribution of oceanic life off W. coast of Ireland. 5 Nov.—2 Dec. 1893

German government deep sea expedition in the Valdivia to the Canaries, Cape of Good Hope, and Antarctic, leaves Aug. 1898, returns. 30 April, "

Sir John Murray states greatest depth to be 5,155 fathoms, E. of Friendly isles, S. Pacific, 14 Sept. 1892

Internat. conferences on sea exploration at Stockholm, 15-23 June, 1899; at Christiania, May, 1901

The Albatross, prof. Agassiz's, explorations in the Pacific, deepest sounding 4,873 fathoms, lat. 16° 38' N. Aug. et seq. 1899

The Siboga, Dutch expedition under Herr Max Weber, in the Indian archipelago, 3,560 fathoms taken. 7 March 1899-27 Feb. 1900

The Nero, U.S. ship, in the N. Pacific, between Midway island and Gaam, made 2 soundings, 5,160 and 5,266 fathoms, in. "

Annual deep sea explorations by the prince of Monaco. 4th cruise in the Princess Alice, W. Mediterranean and Atlantic, 18 July-Sept. 1902, further explorations in 1903, 1904, and 1905

Scottish antarctic expedition under Dr. Bruce in the Scotia accomplished much valuable work, a wide extent of hitherto unexplored ocean carefully examined, many soundings taken. 1903-1904

Pacific cruise of the Albatross completed, much valuable data obtained, wide stretch of sea floor examined. 1905

DEER are mentioned in a will of one Athelstan, dated 1045. Professor Owen thinks that fallow deer are not native, but were introduced here at an early period. There are now in England 334 deer parks, the oldest being probably lord Abergavenny's at Eridge, Sussex. Large numbers of deer are kept at the royal parks of Windsor and Hampton court.

DEERHOUND, an English yacht, while conveying arms to the Carlists, seized by the Spanish government vessel Buenaventura, off Biarritz, and captain and crew imprisoned, 13 Aug.; released about 18 Sept. 1873.

DEFAMATION is punishable by fine and imprisonment by statute of 1843. The jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts on this subject was abolished by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 41 (1855). See Libel.

DEFENCE, see Church Defence, National Defence, and Naval and Military adm. 1895.

DEFENCE ACT, a complete conscription act, authorising a levy en masse, 1803, was unsuccessful; new measures were taken in 1807-8. The Defence of the Realm Act passed 28 Aug. 1860, in consequence of the unsettled state of Europe, and the doubtful policy of the emperor Napoleon; see Fortification, Colonies, and Imperial defence. Other defence acts passed 1865 and 1873; see also Naval Defence Acts.

"DEFENCE GOVERNMENT" in France, formed on 4 Sept. 1870, when the emperor was deposed and a republic proclaimed, gen. Trochu president; it included Gambetta, Simon, &c. It resigned, after Paris had capitulated, 5, 6 Feb. 1871. See France.

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH (Fidei Defensor), a title of the British sovereign, conferred by Leo. X. on Henry VIII. of England, 11 Oct. 1521, for the tract against Luther on behalf of the Church of Rome (then accounted Domicilium fidei Catholicae)

DEFENDERS, a faction in Ireland, which arose out of a quarrel between two residents of Market-hill, 4 July, 1784. Each was soon aided by a large body of friends, and many battles ensued. On Whit-Monday, 1785, an armed assemblage of one of the parties (700 men), called the Nappagh Fleet, prepared to encounter the Bawn Fleet, but the engagement was prevented. They subsequently became religious parties, Catholic and Presbyterian, distinguished as Defenders and Peep-o'-day-boys: the latter were so named because they usually visited the dwellings of the Defenders at daybreak in search of arms; see Diamond.

DEGREES. Eratosthenes attempted to determine the length of a geographical degree about 250 B.C. See Geodesy, Latitude, and Longitude. Collegiate degrees are coeval with universities. Masters and doctors existed, 826. See Lambeth Degrees. Those in law are traced up to 1149; in medicine, to 1384; in music, to 1463. Middle-class examinations for degrees were instituted at Oxford, 18 June, 1857; at Cambridge, 24 Nov. 1857; girls were allowed to compete for degrees, Oct. 1863; other universities since. See Women, 1896-7 et seq.

DEI GRATIA, see Grace of God.

DEIRA, a part of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Northumbria; see under Britain.

DEISM, THEISM, or MONOTHEISM (Latin, deus; Greek, theos, God), the belief in one God, in opposition to polytheism and to the doctrine of the Trinity. About the middle of the 16th century some gentlemen of France and Italy termed themselves deists, to disguise their opposition to Christianity by a more honourable appellation than that of Atheism (which see). The most distinguished deists were Herbert, baron of Cherbury, in 1624; Hobbes, Tindal, Morgan, lord Bolingbroke, Gibbon, Hume, Holcroft, Paine, Godwin, J. S. Mill, and Herbert Spencer.

A high-caste Brahmin, Rammohun Roy, founded a Brahmin monotheistic church in 1830, termed the Brahmo Somaj. He died at Bristol 27 Nov. 1833. His reforming work was received in 1842 by Debendra Nath Tagore. In 1858 Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen joined the society, and became a most energetic propagandist, advocating also social reform; being much opposed, he formed the new Brahmo Somaj of India in 1866. Keshub Chunder Sen was received at a public meeting in London as a reformer, 12 April, and subsequently preached in a Unitarian chapel, Finsbury, London 1870. Schism in his church; new church formed (Society of God) 1880. He died at Calcutta 8 Jan. 1884. Protap Chunder Mozoomdar, a leader of the Brahmo Somaj, visited Chicago, where he attended the world's parliament of religions, in 1893; he died at Calcutta 27 May, 1905. See Unitarians and Voysey.

DEITIES, see Mythology.

DELAGOA BAY, S. E. Africa, claimed by Great Britain and Portugal. Having been referred to arbitration, the southern portion was awarded to Portugal by marshal MacMahon, Aug. 1875.

The importance of the port was greatly increased by the discovery of gold in the Transvaal districts. The South African Republic promoted a railway to be constructed by German and Dutch capitalists. The acquisition of the bay by Great Britain strongly advocated Dec. 1887

The Portuguese government on 14 Dec. 1883, granted a concession to a Portuguese company for the construction of a railway from the bay to the Transvaal territory. The prospectus of the East African railway company (capital 500,000*l.*) was issued 7 March, 1887. As the railway was not completed in the specified time, the works were confiscated by the Portuguese government, 25 June, et seq., who cancelled the concession (see Portugal) 26 June, 1889. The British and United States governments remonstrate with Portugal. April, 1890. The completed railway inaugurated 28 April, " The Portuguese government accepts the principle of arbitration; the governments request the Swiss government to appoint three jurists to form a court of arbitration reported 2 May, " The Portuguese government pays 28,000*l.* to the British government for the railway company provisionally reported July, " The court of arbitration meets at Berne 8 Aug. " A notice of the facts sent to Berne, 12 Nov. 1892; meetings in Feb. 1896; report issued April, 1898. Portuguese routed in the Bileni district; reported 30 July, 1897. Plague epidemic, 49 deaths at Magude, reported, 14 Sept. 1899.

The Delagoa railway award delivered at Berne: Portugal to pay Great Britain and United States governments 612,560*l.* at 5 per cent. simple interest per ann. from 25 June, 1899, to the date of payment total amounting to about 950,000*l.*; costs of arbitration to be paid by the 3 governments 29 March, 1900. The Delagoa bay railway, 57 miles, is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. Portuguese and British agreement in regard thereto signed 1 April, 1909. See Lourenco Marques.

DELAWARE, one of the United States of North America, named after lord de la Warre, governor of Virginia, who entered the bay 1610. It was settled by Swedes, sent there by Gustavus in 1627; acquired by the Dutch, 1655; ceded to the English, 1664. Capital, Dover. Population, 1900, 184,735; 1910 (est.) 210,000.

DELEGATES, COURT OF. Appeals to the pope in ecclesiastical causes having been forbidden (see Appeals), such causes were for the future to be heard in this court, established by Henry VIII. 1533. Stow. This court was abolished in 1832, and appeals now lie to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, according to 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 41 (1833); and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38 (1843). See Archives.

DELEGATIONS, in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, established in 1867, composed of 60 Austrian and 60 Hungarian members.

DELFT (S. Holland), a town founded by Godfrey le Bossu, about 1074; famous for "Delft earthenware;" first manufactured here about 1310. The sale of delft greatly declined after the introduction of potteries into Germany and England. Groetius, jurist, was born here, 10 April, 1583; tercentenary celebrated 10 April, 1883. His statue erected, 17 September, 1886. Here William, the great prince of Orange, was assassinated by Gerard, 10 July, 1584; tercentenary celebrated 10 July, 1884. Population, 1908, 33,957.

DELHI, the once great capital of the Mogul empire, and chief seat of the Mahometan power in India; it was taken by Timour in 1398. It contained a million of inhabitants in 1700. In 1739, when Nadir Shah invaded Hindostan, he entered Delhi; 100,000 of the inhabitants perished by the sword, and plunder to the amount of 32,000,000*l.* sterling is said to have been collected. Similar calamities were endured in 1761, on the invasion of Abdallah, king of Candahar. In 1803, the Mahrattas, aided by the French, took Delhi, but were defeated by general Lake, 11 Sept., and the aged Shah Aulum, emperor of Hindostan, was restored to his throne with a pension; see India, 1803. On 10 May, 1857, a mutiny arose in the sepoy regiments at Meerut. The rebels fled to Delhi on 11 May, and, combined with other troops here, seized the city; proclaimed a descendant of the Mogul king, and committed frightful atrocities. The rebels were anxious to possess the chief magazine, but after a gallant defence it was exploded by order of Lieut. Wilmoughby, who died of his wounds shortly after. The other heroes of this exploit were lieutenants Forrest and Rayner, and conductors Buckley and Scully. Delhi was shortly after besieged by the British, but was not taken till 20 Sept. following. The final struggle began on the 14th; brigadier (aft. sir) Archdale Wilson, the commander, much aided by col. R. Baird Smith. Much heroism was shown; the gallant death of Salkeld at the explosion of the Cashmere gate created much enthusiasm. The old king and his sons were captured soon after: the latter were shot, and the former after a trial was sent for life to Rangoon, where he died 11 Nov. 1862. See India, 1857. A camp formed at Delhi by the earl of Mayo, the viceroy, Dec. 1871, was visited by the king of Siam, Jan. 1872. The prince of Wales visited Delhi, 11 Jan. 1876. Queen Victoria was proclaimed empress of India here with much magnificence, many Indian princes being present, 1 Jan. 1877. Great fire, 2000 houses burnt, 19 April, 1883. Pop. 1901, 208,575; 1910 (est.) 240,000.

"DELICATE INVESTIGATION" into the conduct of the princess of Wales (afterwards queen of England, as consort of George IV.), was commenced by a committee of the privy council, under a warrant of inquiry, dated 29 May, 1806. The members were lord Grenville, lord Erskine, earl Spencer, and lord Ellenborough. The inquiry, of which the countess of Jersey, sir J. and lady Douglas, and other persons of rank, were the prompters, led to the publication called "The Book"; afterwards suppressed. The charges against the princess were disproved in 1807 and in 1813; but not being permitted to appear at court, she went on the continent in 1814; see Queen Caroline.

DELIUM, Boeotia, N. Greece, the site of a celebrated temple of Apollo. Here, in a conflict between the Athenians and the Boeotians, in which the former were defeated, Socrates the philosopher is said to have saved the life of his pupil Xenophon, 424 B.C.

DELLA CRUSCA ACADEMY of Florence merged into the Florentine in 1582.—The DELLA CRUSCA SCHOOL, a term applied to some English residents at Florence, who printed inferior sentimental poetry and prose in 1785. They came to England, where their works, popular for a short time, were severely satirised by Gifford in his "Baviad" and "Mœviad" (1792-5).

DELOS, a Greek isle in the Ægean sea. Here the Greeks, during the Persian war, 477 B.C., established their common treasury, which was removed to Athens, 461. Excavations, resulting in interesting discoveries, were made in the island by the French in 1883.

DELPHI (N. Greece), celebrated for its enigmatical oracles delivered by the Pythia or priestess in the temple of Apollo, which was built, some say, by the council of the Amphictyons, 1263 B.C. The Pythian games were first celebrated here 586 B.C. The temple was burnt by the Pisistratidæ, 548 B.C. A new temple was raised by the Alcæonidæ. The Persians (480 B.C.) and the Gauls (279 B.C.) were deterred from plundering the temple by awful portents. It was, however, robbed and seized by the Phocians 357 B.C., which led to the sacred war, and Nero carried from it 300 costly statues, A.D. 67. The oracle was consulted by Julian, but silenced by Theodosius.

An ancient hymn to Apollo, the words and musical notation, inscribed on two tablets, discovered recently, was sung in the presence of the king and queen, &c., at Athens 29 March, 1894
Excavations by the French school of archaeology; discoveries of the remains of the temple of Apollo, April, 1894; a great statue of Apollo and altar (date about 480 B.C.) May, "

DELPHIN CLASSICS, a collection of thirty-nine Latin authors in sixty volumes, made for the use of the dauphin (in usum Delphini), son of Louis XIV., and published in 1674-91. Ausonius was added in 1730. The duc de Montausier, the young prince's governor, proposed the plan to Huet, bishop of Avranches, the dauphin's preceptor; and he, with other learned persons, including Madame Dacier, * edited all the Latin classics except Lucan. Each author is illustrated by notes and an index of words. An edition of the Delphin classics, with notes, &c., was published by Mr. Valpy of London, 1818 et seq.

DELTA, the island formed by the alluvial deposits between the mouths of the Nile, so named by the Greeks from its resemblance to their letter Δ (our D).

DELUGE, THE, which was predicted by Noah, is described in Genesis vi. vii. viii.; dated by Usher and the English Bible 2348 B.C. The following are the epochs of the deluge, according to Dr. Hales:—

Septuagint	B.C. 3246	Clinton	B.C. 2482
Jackson	3170	Playfair	2352
Hales	3155	Marsham	2344
Josephus	3146	Petavius	2320
Persian	3103	Strauchius	2293
Hindoo	3102	Hebrew	2288
Samaritan	2998	Vulgar Jewish	2104

* This beautiful and gifted woman translated Callimachus at the age of 23; and also Anacreon, Sappho, Plautus, Terence, and Homer. She died in 1720.

DEMISE OF THE CROWN ACT, royal assent, 2 July, 1901, making fresh appointments to offices held under the crown unnecessary after the death of the sovereign.

DEMOCRATIC FEDERALISTS, a political party, proposed by Mr. Joseph Cowen, M.P. for Newcastle, opposed to the policy of the government of Mr. Gladstone, 5 April, 1881.

DEMOCRATS, advocates for government by the people themselves (demos, people, and kratein, to govern), a term adopted by the French republicans in 1790 (who termed their opponents aristocrats, from aristos, bravest or best). The name Democrats was adopted by the pro-slavery party in N. America (the southern states), and the abolitionists were called Republicans. Into these two great parties a number of smaller ones were absorbed at the presidential election in 1856. In 1860, the Republicans formed "Wide-awake" clubs for electioneering purposes, and succeeded in getting their candidate, Abraham Lincoln, elected president, 6 Nov., which led to civil war; see United States, 1860.

In the autumn of 1874, the democrats, free-traders, and opponents of negro-rule, once more obtained the majority in the elections for the next congress; a reaction in their favour against the republicans, protectionists, then powerful; see United States, 1875-7. Governor Grover Cleveland, democrat, elected president, 4 Nov. 1884; not re-elected, being replaced by general Benjamin Harrison, republican . . . 5 Nov. 1888. Mr. Cleveland was re-elected president, 8 Nov. 1892, the democrats having obtained a majority in the new congress and the senate, the first time since 1860. The democrat party was much disorganized by the election of Mr. M'Kinley, republican; see United States, Nov. 1896 et seq.

DEMONOLOGY, see Devil Worship.

DENAIN (N. France). Here marshal Villars defeated the Imperialists, 24 July, 1712.

DENARIUS, the chief silver coin among the Romans, weighing the seventh part of a Roman ounce, and value $\frac{7}{16}$ d. sterling, first coined about 269 B.C., when it exchanged for ten ases (see As). In 216 B.C. it exchanged for sixteen ases. A pound weight of silver was coined into 100 denarii. Digby. A pound weight of gold was coined into twenty denarii aurei in 206 B.C.; and in Nero's time into forty-five denarii aurei. Lempriere.

DENIS, St., an ancient town of France, near Paris, famous for its abbey and church; the former abolished at the revolution, the latter the place of sepulture of the French kings, from its foundation by Dagobert, about 630; the remains of the saint Denis were placed there in 636. On 6, 7, 8 Aug. 1793, the republicans demolished most of the royal tombs, and in Oct. following, the bodies were taken from coffins and cast into a pit; the lead was melted, and the gold and jewels taken to Paris. By a decree of Bonaparte, dated 20 Feb. 1806, the church (which had been turned into a cattle-market) was ordered to be cleansed out and redecored as "the future burial-place of the emperors of France." On the return of the Bourbons, more restorations were effected, and the duc de Berri and Louis XVIII. were buried here. The damage sustained in the war of 1870-1 has been well repaired. Near St. Denis the Catholics defeated the Huguenots, but lost their leader, the constable Montmorency, 10 Nov. 1567.

DENMAN'S ACT, LORD, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85 (1843), related to juries and witnesses, permitting them to affirm instead of taking an oath. It is superseded by the oaths act 1888.

DENMARK (N. Europe). The most ancient inhabitants were Cimbric and Teutones, who were driven out by the Jutes or Goths. The Teutones settled in Germany and Gaul; the Cimbrians invaded Italy, where they were defeated by Marius. The peninsula of Jutland obtained its name from the Jutes; and the name of Denmark is supposed to be derived from Dan, the founder of the Danish monarchy, and mark, a German word signifying country. For their numerous invasions of Britain, &c., see Danes. By the treaty of peace, signed 30 Oct. 1864, the duchies were taken from Denmark; Sleswick and Holstein were to be made independent, and Lauenburg was to be incorporated, by its desire, with Prussia. For the result, see Gastein and Prussia, 1866. Capital, Copenhagen; pop., 1906, 426,540 (with suburbs, 514,134). Sept. 1837; from his second wife, Sept. 1846; married morganatically Louisa, countess of Danner, 7 Aug. 1850; died 15 Nov. 1863.

1863. Christian IX. son of William, duke of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg; 15 Nov. succeeded by virtue of the protocol of London, 8 May, 1852, and of the law of the Danish succession, 31 July, 1853. He was born 8 April, 1818; married princess Louisa of Hesse-Cassel, 26 May, 1842 (born 7 Sept. 1817; died 29 Sept. 1898). (He is descended from Christian III. and she from Frederick V.; both from George II. of England.); died 29 Jan., 1906.

1906. Frederick VIII. (his son), born 3 June, 1843; married princess Louisa of Sweden, 28 July, 1869. Sons: Christian (heir), born 26 Sept., 1870; married princess Alexandrine of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 1898; Charles, born 3 Aug. 1872; married princess Maud of Wales, 1896 (king Haakon VII. of Norway, 1905).

DENNEWITZ (Prussia), here a victory was obtained by marshal Bernadotte (afterwards Charles XIV., king of Sweden), over marshal Ney, 6 Sept. 1813. The loss of the French exceeded 13,000 men, several eagles, and cannon; of the allies, 6,000. The defeat of Napoleon at Leipsic, on the 18th of October following, closed this disastrous campaign.

DENOMINATIONS, THE THREE (presbyterians, congregationalists or independents, and baptists), were organised in 1727 as an association, with the privilege of direct appeal to the reigning sovereign of Great Britain.

DENTISTS, an act for regulating their education and registration, passed, 22 July, 1878. By this act "no one except qualified medical practitioners and those bonâ fide engaged in the practice of dentistry at the time of the act's passing can take or use the title 'dentist' or any title signifying that he is registered, under a penalty of 20*l.*, and in future any person desiring to become a dentist must undergo a course of study, and have taken a degree or licence."

The Odontological Society (of Dentists), established 1856. The Dental Hospital of London, Leicester-square, was established 1858, rebuilt and opened 1902. See Odontology.

DEODAND (Latin, "to be given to God"): formerly anything which had caused the death of a human being became forfeit to the sovereign or lord of the manor, and was to be sold for the benefit of the poor. The forfeiture was abolished by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 62 (1846).

D'EON, CHEVALIER, who had acted in a diplomatic capacity in several countries, and been minister plenipotentiary from France in London, was affirmed to be a female, at a trial at the King's Bench in 1771, in an action to recover wagers as to his sex. He subsequently wore female attire; but at his death he was proved to be a male. His "True story," published by Ernest Vizetelly, 1896.

DEONTOLOGY, the knowledge of what is right, or the science of duty (from the Greek to deon, that which is proper), an element of the Utilitarian philosophy propounded by Jeremy Bentham in his "Deontology," published by Dr. Bowring in 1834.

DEPARTMENTS, see France.

DEPRESSION OF TRADE, see Trade, 1885.

DE PROFUNDIS, the 130th Psalm, as named from the first two words in the Vulgate version. It is one of the seven penitential psalms, and, in accordance with the funeral rites of the R. Catholic church, is sung over the grave at the committal of the body. The title of Oscar Wilde's last work, written in Reading gaol, 1904.

DEPTFORD (near London). The hospital here was incorporated by Henry VIII. about 1512, and called the Trinity-house of Deptford Strand; the brethren of Trinity-house hold their corporate rights by this hospital. The dockyard, founded about 1513, was closed 31 March, 1869, having been purchased by Mr. T. P. Austin for 70,000*l.* He sold part of it to the corporation of London for 94,640*l.*, for a market for foreign cattle, which was opened for use, 28 Dec. 1871. On 4 April, 1581, Queen Elizabeth dined at Deptford on board the Golden Hind, the ship in which Drake had made his voyage round the globe. The Deptford victualling-office was burnt 16 Jan. 1748-9; the store-house, 2 Sept. 1758; the red-house, 26 Feb. 1761; and the king's-mill, 1 Dec. 1755. Peter the Great of Russia lived at Evelyn's house, Say's-court, while learning ship-building, &c., in 1698. By the acts, 1884-5, Deptford returns one member to parliament, John Evelyn the first. Deptford park purchased from Mr. W. J. Evelyn for 36,031*l.* by the London county council; opened 7 June, 1897. Baths and washhouses opened by lord mayor, 20 April, 1898. Constituted a borough under the London Government act, 1899 (6 aldermen, 36 councillors). Town hall opened, 19 July, 1905. See Trials, 27 March, 1905.

DEPUTIES, CHAMBER OF, the title borne by the French legislative assembly, from the restoration of the Bourbons in 1814 till Jan. 1852, when it was named "Corps Législatif."

DERBY was made a royal burgh by Egbert (about 828). Alfred expelled the Danes from it and planted a colony in 880. His heroic daughter, Ethelfleda, again expelled the Danes in 918. William I. gave Derby to his illegitimate son William Peveril. Lombe's silk-throwing machine was set up in 1718; and in 1756, Jedediah Strutt invented the Derby ribbed stocking-frame. The young Pretender reached Derby, 3 Dec. 1745, and retreated thence soon after. The market-hall was opened 29 May, 1866. The midland counties fine art exhibition was held here, and was opened by the duke of Devonshire, 5 May, 1870. Mr. M. T. Bass gives 25,000*l.* for a museum and library, and an endowment of 3,000*l.* for an art gallery announced, Jan. 1882. Art gallery, the gift of Mr. M. Bass and others, opened 4 Nov. 1882. Queen Victoria laid the foundation-stone of the Derbyshire Royal Infirmary, 21 May, 1891. Population, 1901, 105,785; estimated population 1909, 129,411.

DERBY TRIALS. Brandreth, Turner, Ludlam senior, Ludlam junior, Weightman, and others, Ludlites, convicted at a commission of high treason, 15 Oct. 1817; and Brandreth, Turner, and the elder Ludlam executed, 7 Nov. following. 23 others were tried.

21 prisoners indicted at Derby for the murder of several miners in the Red-soil mine; acquitted on the ground that the mischief was not wilful, 23 March, 1834.

DERELICT LAND TRUST, formed by subscription to promote the cultivation of farms in Ireland from which the tenants have been evicted for non-payment of rent. "Plantations" in county Wexford were formed in 1889.

DERMATOLOGY, the science of the skin and its diseases.

The International dermatological congress met at Paris in 1889; at Vienna, 5 Sept. 1892 in London, Aug. 1896.

DERRICKS are lofty, portable crane-like structures, used on land and water for lifting enormous loads, and in some cases depositing them at an elevation. They were introduced into England as floating derricks for raising sunken vessels, by their inventor, A. D. Bishop, in 1857, and are now in universal use.

DERRY (N. Ireland), a bishopric first at Ardfrath; thence translated to Maghera; and in 1158 to Derry. The cathedral, built in 1164, becoming ruinous, was rebuilt by Londoners, who settled here in the reign of James I. The see is valued in the king's books at 250*l.* sterling; but it has been one of the richest sees in Ireland. Beatson. The see was united to Derry, 1834; see Bishops; Londonderry.

DERVISH. (Persian, signifying "poor.") The dervishes of the present time, fanatical enthusiasts, unrecognized by orthodoxy, originated in Persia, whence they spread over the Mahomedan world. The khalifa Abdulla killed at Om Debrikat 24 Nov. 1899. Dervish trophies and relics exhibited at Whitehall, 22 Nov. et seq. 1898. See Soudan.

DESCENT OF MAN, see Development.

DESIGN, SCHOOLS OF, established by government, began at Somerset-house, London, 1 Jan. 1837. In 1852 the head school was removed to Marlborough-house, and became eventually "the department of science and art," transferred to South Kensington in 1857. It is under the direction of the committee of council on education and arts.

DESPARD'S CONSPIRACY. Colonel Edward Marcus Despard, a native of Ireland, Broughton, Francis, Graham, Macnamara, Wood, and Wratten conspired to kill the king, and establish a republic, on the day of opening parliament, 16 Nov. 1802. Above 30 persons including soldiers were taken in custody; of those tried, 20 Jan. 1803, Despard and six others were executed, 21 Feb. He had been a distinguished officer under Nelson.

DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS (to crops), an act passed to prevent their introduction and spreading in Great Britain, 14 Aug. 1877. See Colorado.

DETROIT, Michigan, U.S.A., the oldest city in the west, was built by the French about 1610. It is eminent for large metal works. Population in 1880, 116,340; 1900, 285,704; 1906 (est.), 353,535.

DETTINGEN (Bavaria), BATTLE OF, 16 (or 27 O. S.) June, 1743, between the British, Hanoverian, and Hessian army (52,000), commanded by king George II. of England and the earl of Stair, and the French army (60,000), under marshal Noailles and the duc de Grammont. The French passed a defile, which they should have merely guarded. The duc de Grammont with his cavalry charged the British foot with great fury, but was so received that he was obliged to give way, and to repass the Maine, losing 3000 men. Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum," first performed, 27 Nov. 1743.

DEUTERONOMY. See Pentateuch.

DEVELOPMENT (or Evolution). Wolff put forth a theory of epigenesis in 1759; Lamarck, the naturalist, in 1809, propounded a theory that all animals had been developed from "monads," living minute particles; see Species and Vestiges. Buffon held a similar doctrine. In 1827 Ernst von Baer of Königsberg demonstrated that all mammals are developed from a minute egg not a hundredth of an inch in diameter. Mr. C. Darwin's views are given in his "Origin of Species," 1859; and "Descent of Man," 1871. He supposes that man was gradually evolved from the lowest created form of animal life. Hæckel, his most advanced follower, published in German a "History of Creation," 1873. See Evolution.

The theory of the development of living beings out of the substance of the earth was put forth by Lucretius in his "De Rerum Nature," about 57 B.C.

"The primitive monads were born by spontaneous generation in the sea."—Professor Hæckel, 1878.

The Royal Society's Darwin medal was first awarded to Mr. Alfred Russel Wallace in 1890.

DEVIL WORSHIP. Devil, Greek, diabolos, false accuser; Hebrew, satan, an adversary; abadon, destroyer, &c. The worship of devils is frequently mentioned in the Bible (Lev. xvii. 7; 2 Chron. xi. 15; 1 Cor. x. 20; Rev. ix. 20, &c.) Mr. Layard describes the Yezidees as recognising one supreme being, yet reverencing the devil as a king or mighty angel, to be conciliated (1841).

DEVIZES, a borough, Wiltshire; the castle here was founded by bp. Roger, about 1107; and was for some time royal property until Cromwell besieged and ruined it. The remains were sold by the executors of the last holder, Mr. R. V. Leach, for 8,000*l.* in August, 1888. At Roundway Down, near here, sir William Waller and the parliamentarians were defeated, 13 July, 1643. Population of the town 1901, 6,532; of the borough, 13,070.

Visit of the prince of Wales; centenary of the royal Wiltshire yeomanry 24 May, 1893

DEVOLUTION, a term applied in 1886-8 to the transfer of business of minor importance in the parliament to grand or other committees (see Committees).

DEVONSHIRE, the country of the Damnonii or Dumnonii. Odun, earl of Devon, in 878, defeated the Danes, slew Ubbo or Hubba their chief, and captured his magic standard. A bishopric of Devonshire was founded in 909; see Exeter.

Richard de Redvers, first earl of Devon, son of Baldwin, sheriff of Devonshire, died 1137.

William Cavendish, created first earl of Devonshire, 1618. William Cavendish (his great grandson), created first duke of Devonshire, 1694.

His descendant, William Cavendish, born 27 April, 1808; became earl of Burlington, 1834; and 7th duke of Devonshire, 1858; chancellor of the university of London, 1836; of the university of Cambridge, 1861. See Barrow-in-Furness, Eastbourne, and Owens College. The duke died 21 Dec., 1891. Spencer C. Cavendish, the 8th duke, was born 23rd July, 1833, died 1908; (succeeded by his nephew, Victor Christian William Cavendish, born 1868). See Gladstone. Administrations 1st and 2nd; elected chancellor of the University of Cambridge, 4 Jan., 1892; see also Salisbury and Balfour.

DEVONSHIRE AND PITT ADMINISTRATION, formed 16 Nov. 1756; dismissed 5 April, 1757.

First lord of the treasury, William, duke of Devonshire.

Chancellor of the exchequer, hon. Henry Bilson Legge.

Lord president, earl Granville (Lord Carteret).

Privy seal, earl Gower.

Secretaries of state, earl of Holderness and Wm. Pitt (afterwards earl of Chatham, the virtual premier).

George Grenville, earl of Halifax, dukes of Rutland and Grafton, earl of Rochfort, viscount Barrington, &c.

The great seal in commission.

"DEVOUT LIFE," "Introduction à la Vie dévote," written by St. François de Sales, and published 1608. He was born 21 Aug. 1567; bishop of Geneva, 1602; died, 28 Dec. 1622.

DEW, the modern theory respecting it was put forth by Dr. Wells in his book, 1814.

DEWANGIRI, see India, 1865.

DIADÉM, the band or fillet worn by the ancients instead of the crown, and consecrated to the gods. At first it was made of silk or wool, set with precious stones, and was tied round the temples and forehead, the two ends being knotted behind, and let fall on the neck. Aurelian was the first Roman emperor who wore a diadem, 272. Tillemont.

DIALECTICAL SOCIETY, LONDON, for the philosophical consideration of all subjects, with a view to the discovery and elucidation of truth, was established in 1866. The members at one time included profs. Huxley and many other notable people. The report of their committee on spiritualism was published in Nov. 1871. The Society ended 29 Sept. 1894.

DIALECTS, see English Language and Wales, 1890.

DIALS, "The sun-dial of Ahaz," 713 B.C. (Isa. xxxviii. 8). A dial invented by Anaximander, 550 B.C. Pliny. The first dial of the sun seen at Rome was placed on the temple of Quirinus by L. Papirius Cursor, when time was divided into hours, 293 B.C. Blair. Dials set up in churches about A.D. 613. Lenglet.

DIALYSIS, an important method of chemical analysis, depending on the different degrees of diffusibility of substances in liquids, was made known in 1861, by its discoverer, professor Thomas Graham, then master of the mint.

DIA-MAGNETISM, the property possessed by nearly all bodies of behaving differently to iron, when placed between two magnets. The phenomena, previously little known, were reduced to a law by Faraday in 1845, and confirmed by Tyndall and others.

DIAMOND, a hamlet, Armagh, N. Ireland, where was fought the "battle of the Diamond," 21 Sept. 1795, between the "Peep-o'-day Boys" and the "Defenders," and many of the latter were killed. To commemorate this conflict the first Orange Lodge was formed immediately after. See Defenders.

DIAMOND JUBILEE, see Jubilee, 1897.

DIAMONDS were first brought to Europe from the East, where the mine of Sumbulpoor was the first known. Golconda, in India, now in ruins, was a celebrated diamond mart. The mines of Brazil were discovered in 1729. From these last a diamond, weighing 1680 carats, or fourteen ounces, was sent to the court of Portugal, and was valued by Mr. Romeo de l'Isle at 224 millions; by others at 56 millions, and at $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions; its true value (not being brilliant) was 400,000*l*.

The great RUSSIAN or ORLOFF diamond weighs 193 carats, or 1 oz. 12 dwts. 4 gr. troy. The stone is said to have formed the eye of an idol in a temple at Seringham, Mysore, whence it was stolen by a French soldier. The empress Catherine II. offered for it 104,166*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*., besides an annuity for life to the owner of 104*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*., which was refused; but it was afterwards sold to Catherine's favourite, count Orloff, for the first-mentioned sum, without the annuity, and was by him presented to the empress on her birthday, 1772; it is now in the sceptre of Russia.

The PITT (or Regent) diamond weighed 136 carats, and after cutting, 106 carats: it was sold to the king of France for 135,000*l*. in 1720; since valued at 480,000*l*. The PRECOTT diamond (bought by Mr. Pitt, grandfather of Wm. Pitt) was sold for 9500 guineas, 10 May, 1802. The diamond called the KOHINOOR, KOH-I-NUR, or MOUNTAIN OF LIGHT, has a legendary history, and is said to have belonged in turn to Shah Jehan, Aurungzebe, Nadir Shah, the Afghan rulers, and afterwards to the Sikh chief Runjeet Singh. Upon the abdication of Dhuless Singh, the last ruler of the Punjab, and the annexation of his dominions to the British empire, in 1849, the Kohinoor was surrendered to the queen. It was accordingly brought over and presented to her, 3 July, 1850. It was shown in the Great Exhibition, 1851. Its original weight was nearly 800 carats, but it was reduced by the unskillfulness of the artist, Hortensio Borghese, a Venetian, to 279 carats. Its shape and size resembled the pointed half (rose cut) of a small hen's egg. The value is scarcely computable, though two millions sterling have been mentioned as a justifiable price, if calculated by the scale employed in the trade. This diamond was re-cut in 1852, and now weighs 102½ carats.

The SANCI diamond, which belonged to Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, was bought by sir C. Jejeebhoy from the Demidoff family for 20,000*l*. in Feb. 1865.

The AGRA diamond, a fine rose pink, weighing 30½ carats, derives its name from the fact that it was taken in the battle of Agra in 1526 by the emperor Baker, the founder of the Mogul empire in India. The diamond was taken from the king of Delhi in 1837, and conveyed by some English officers to the coast by concealing it in a horse-ball, which was swallowed by a horse. At the port of embarkation the animal was shot, and the diamond recovered and brought to England. It was subsequently sold to the duke of Brunswick. Since then it has been re-cut from a 46 carat stone to its present weight. Sold at Christies to Mr. Max Meyer, for 5,100*l*., 22 Feb. 1905.

The HOPE diamond, a sapphire blue brilliant, 44½ carats, formerly in the possession of Mr. H. T. Hope, estimated value 30,000*l*. It is supposed to have been cut from the large blue diamond 112½ carats (rough), sold by Tavernier to Louis XIV.

The CULLINAN diamond, the largest known, discovered Jan. 1905, in the mines of the Premier diamond mining company, Transvaal, by T. Wells, an overseer, and named after the chairman of the company. Weight in uncut state 3,025½ carats. Exhibited to the king at Buckingham palace, 29 March, 1905. In Aug. 1907, gen. Botha proposed that the Transvaal government should be authorised to acquire it for the purpose of presenting it to king Edward in token of the loyalty of the people of the Transvaal, and in commemoration of the grant of responsible government to the colony, and on 19 Aug. his motion was carried in the legislative assembly. The diamond was handed to king Edward on 9 Nov. 1907, by sir Rd. Solomon and sir Francis Hopwood. The stone was subsequently cut into two large diamonds, one weighing 516½ carats and the other 309 carats, and they are now among the crown jewels. Several pieces of uncult stone, forming the residue of the original, were cut into six beautiful diamonds. These were bought by the Transvaal government and presented to queen Mary by sir Richard Solomon, high commissioner of the union of South Africa, on behalf of the government and the people of the union, 28 June, 1910.

The PORTER RHODES great diamond (weighing 150 carats; alleged value 60,000*l*.) found at Kimberley 12 Feb. 1880, exhibited by Mr. Streeter, Bond-street, London, Nov. 1881.

Ancient diamond said to have belonged to the Mogul emperors of India, date of engraved characters possibly 1200, shown by Mr. Bryce Wright, Jan. 1882.

A diamond, termed the STAR OF THE SOUTH, was brought from Brazil in 1855, weighing 254½ carats, half of which was lost by cutting.

Diamonds were discovered in Cape Colony, S. Africa, in March, 1867. A fine one, termed the "Star of South Africa," brought to England in 1869, was purchased by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell. After cutting, it weighed 46½ carats, and was valued at 25,000*l*., in June, 1870. Rich diamond fields discovered near the Vaal and Orange rivers, Sept. 1870.

Great influx of diggers, and many fine diamonds found, Nov. Value of 141 diamonds found in 1869, 7405*l*.; of 5661 found in 1870, 124,910*l*.; about 2,000,000*l*. said to be exported in 1877. See Grigua-land, West.

Application of the mechanical or saving process to rough diamonds, by which parts from the rough stone can be cut to any size desired and converted into small brilliants, effects great change in diamond-workers' trade. See Annual report of Amsterdam Chamber of Commerce, issued Jan. 1903.

DIAMOND NECKLACE AFFAIR.—In 1785, Böhmer, the court jeweller of France, offered the queen Marie Antoinette, a diamond necklace, for 56,000*l.* The queen desired the necklace, but feared the expense. The countess de la Motte (of the ancient house of Valois) forged the queen's signature, and by pretending that the queen had an attachment for him, persuaded the cardinal de Rohan, the queen's almoner, to conclude a bargain with the jeweller for the necklace for 56,000*l.* De la Motte thus obtained the necklace and made away with it. For this she was tried in 1786, and sentenced to be branded on the shoulders and imprisoned for life. She accused in vain the celebrated Italian adventurer, Cagliostro, of complicity in the affair, he being then intimate with the cardinal. She made her escape and came to London, where she was killed by falling from a window-sill, in attempting to escape an arrest for debt.—De Rohan was tried and acquitted, 14 April, 1786. The public in France at that time suspected the queen of being a party to the fraud. Talleyrand wrote at the time, that he should not be surprised if this miserable affair overturned the throne.

A collection of 18 diamonds presented to the British museum by the Premier (Transvaal) diamond mining company, Mar. 1910.

INFLAMMABILITY OF DIAMONDS.

Boetius de Boot conjectured that the diamond was inflammable, 1609. When exposed to a high temperature it gave an acrid vapour, in which a part of it was dissipated, 1673. Boyle.

Sir Isaac Newton concluded from its great refracting power, that it must be combustible, 1675.

Avenari demonstrated, by concentrating the rays of the sun upon it, that the diamond was exhaled in vapour, and entirely disappeared, while other precious stones merely grow softer, 1695.

It has been ascertained by Guyton, Davy, and others, that diamonds contain nothing but pure charcoal, or carbon. Diamonds were charred by the intense heat of the voltaic battery—by M. Dumas, in Paris, and by professor Faraday, in London, in 1848.

DIANA, TEMPLE OF (at Ephesus), accounted one of the seven wonders of the world, was built at the common charge of all the Asiatic states, 552 B.C.; the chief architect being Ctesiphon. Pliny says that 220 years were employed in completing it. It was 425 feet long, 225 broad, and was supported by 127 columns (60 feet high, each weighing 150 tons of Parian marble), furnished by 80 many kings. It was set on fire, on the night of the birth of Alexander the Great, by Herostratus or Eratostratus, who confessed that his sole motive was the desire of transmitting his name to future ages, 356 B.C. The temple was rebuilt, but again burnt by the Goths, in their naval invasion, A.D. 256 or 262. In April, 1869, Mr. J. T. Wood discovered the site of the second temple; and since then sculptured marble columns have been removed to the British Museum. Excavations under the auspices of the British Museum authorities began by Mr. D. G. Hogarth, Oct. 1904, complete ground plan of temple of Artemis discovered, with many small dedicated objects in bronze, ivory, glass, terra cotta, &c., including an archaic bronze statuette of the goddess. Diana was the Roman name of the Greek Artemis.

DICE. The invention of dice is mythically ascribed to Palamedes, of Greece, about 1244 B.C. The game of tali and tessera among the Romans was played with dice. Stow mentions two entertainments given by the city of London, at which dice were played. Act to regulate the licences of makers, and the sale of dice, 9 Geo. IV. 1828.

DICTATORS were supreme and absolute magistrates of Rome, appointed to act in critical times. Titus Lartius, the first dictator, was appointed, 501 B.C. Caius Marcius Rutilius was the first plebeian dictator, 356 B.C. This office became odious by the usurpations of Sylla and Julius Cæsar; and after the death of the latter, the Roman senate, on the motion of the consul Antony, passed a law forbidding a dictator to exist in Rome, 44 B.C. The dictator was also called master of the people, and had under him a master of the horse.

DICTIONARY. A standard dictionary of the Chinese language, containing about 40,000 characters, most of them hieroglyphic, or rude representations, somewhat like our signs of the zodiac, was perfected by Pa-ou-she, who lived about 1100 B.C. Morrison; see Encyclopædias, Music, &c.

Mr. James A. H. Murray submitted specimens of the scheme, on behalf of the council of the Philological Society, to the delegates of the Clarendon Press. The delegates consented to bear the expense of preparing the dictionary, which was commenced in 1879 and the first part published April, 1888. Seven volumes, reaching to letter P, were in circulation 1909

DIDACHÉ, THE, see Teaching of the Twelve, under Apostles.

DIDYMIUM, a rare metal, discovered by Mosander in 1841. It is found associated with lanthanum and cerium. Declared to be a compound by Mr. (aft. sir) W. Crookes in 1888.

DIEPPE (N. France). This town was bombarded by an English fleet, under admiral Russell, and laid in ashes, July, 1694. It was again bombarded in 1794; and again, together with the town of Granville, by the British, 14 Sept. 1803.

"DIES IRÆ" ("Day of Wrath"), a Latin mediæval hymn on the day of judgment, is ascribed to various authors, amongst others to pope Gregory the Great (died about 604); St. Bernard (died 1153); but is generally considered to have been composed by Thomas of Celano (died 1255), and to have been used in the Roman service of the mass before 1385.

"DIEU-DONNÉ", the name given in his infancy to Louis le Grand, king of France, the queen, his mother, having been barren for 23 years previously, 1638. Also to the comte de Chambord, son of the duchess of Berri, born 29 Sept. 1820, died 24 Aug. 1883. His father was assassinated, 14 Feb. 1820. One of the popes (672) was named Adedatus or God's gift.

DIEU ET MON DROIT ("God and my right"), the royal motto of England, was the parole of the day, given by Richard I. of England to his army at the battle of Gisors, in France, 20 Sept. 1198, when the French army was signally defeated. "Dieu et mon droit" appears to have been first assumed as a motto by Henry VI. (1422-1461); see Semper Eadem.

DIFFUSION OF GASES. In 1825, Döbereiner observed the transmission of hydrogen gas through a crack in a glass vessel, and professor Thomas Graham discovered the passage of gases through porous porcelain, graphite, and other substances, and established laws in 1832, and to him we are indebted for the discovery of Atmolysis and Dialysis. He died 16 Sept. 1869.

DIFFUSION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE SOCIETY, which published a number of books relating to history, science, and literature, and an atlas, in a cheap form, ridiculed as the "Sixpenny Sciences," was established by Lord Brougham, Mr. William Tooke, Mr. Charles Knight, and others. It published its "Library" 1827-48, and patronised the publication of the Penny Magazine and the Penny Cyclopædia. Its proceedings were suspended in 1846. The Royal Institution of Great Britain was established in 1799, for "the Promotion, Diffusion, and Extension of Science and Useful Knowledge."

DIGEST. The first collection of Roman laws under this title was prepared by Alfenus Varus, the civilian, of Cremona, 66 B.C. Quintil. The "Digest," so called by way of eminence, was the collection made by order of the emperor Justinian, 529: it made the first part of the Roman law and the first volume of the civil law. Quotations from it are marked with a ff. Pardon. The "Digest of Law" commissioners signed their first report 13 May, 1867, recommending the immediate preparation of a digest of the English common law, statute law, and judicial decisions.

DIGITS (digitus, finger), any whole number under 10: 1, 2, &c., are the nine digits; see Arithmetic. In astronomy, the digit is a measure used in the calculation of eclipses, and is the twelfth part of the luminary eclipsed.

DIJON, E. France, the ancient capital of Burgundy, is said to have been founded by Julius Cæsar, fortified by the emperor Marcus Aurelius, and named Divio, about 274. It has been several times captured in war; and a castle was erected here by Louis XI. Dijon became the capital of the dukes of Burgundy about 1180. It was attacked by the Germans, under general Beyer, 31 Oct. 1870. The heights, &c. were taken by prince William of Baden, and the town surrendered on 31 Oct. Memorial to pres. Carnot unveiled by pres. Loubet, 21 May, 1899. Population in 1906, 74,113.

DILETTANTI, SOCIETY OF, established in 1734 by the viscount Harcourt, lord Middlesex, duke of Dorset, and others who had travelled and who were desirous of encouraging a taste for the fine arts in Great Britain. The society published, or aided in publishing, Stuart's Athens (1762-1816), Chandler's Travels (1775-6), and several other finely illustrated works. The members dine together from time to time at the Thatched-house tavern, St. James's. Mr. R. P. Pullan, on behalf of this society, excavated the temple of Bacchus at Teos, of Apollo Smintheus in the Troad, and of Minerva Polias at Priene, between 1861-70. Published "Antiquities of Ionia," 4 parts, 1769-1881.

DIMORPHISM, a term used in biology to designate the occurrence of organisms in two forms, as in the case of some crustaceans and insects, notably in the seasonal dimorphism of certain butterflies (Vanessa). In the mineral kingdom the term denotes the occurrence of any substance in crystalline forms belonging to two distinct systems, e.g. carbon, which occurs as the diamond and as graphite.

DIOCESE. The first division of the Roman empire into dioceses, at that period civil governments, is ascribed to Constantine, 323; but Strabo remarks that the Romans had the departments called dioceses long before. In England the principal dioceses are coeval with the establishment of Christianity; of 37 dioceses, 27 are suffragan to the diocese of Canterbury, and 10 to that of York; see Bishops, and the sees severally. Diocesan conferences of the clergy and laity now frequent.

DIOCLES' CODE, drawn up by him for Syracuse, where he was a popular leader, 412 B.C. It was highly approved, and copied by other nations, and remained in force till superseded by the Roman laws, after the conquest, 212 B.C.

DIOCLETIAN ERA (called also the era of Martyrs, on account of the persecution in his reign) was used by Christian writers until the introduction of the Christian era in the 6th century, and is still employed by the Abyssinians and Copts. It dates from the day on which Diocletian was proclaimed emperor at Chalcedon, 29 Aug. 284.

DIONYSUS, the Greek god of wine, poetry, and music, called Bacchus after the 5th century B.C. His worship was introduced from Greece into Rome, and his festivals, termed Dionysia and Bacchanalia, were finally suppressed by the senate on account of their dissolute character. The Greek drama is said to have arisen out of the Bacchic festivals, 168 B.C.

DIOPTRIC SYSTEM (from the Greek, dia, through, and optomai, I see), an arrangement of lenses for refracting light in lighthouses, devised by Fresnel, about 1819, based on the discoveries of Buffon, Condorcet, Brewster, and others; see Lighthouses.

DIORAMA. This admired exhibition was first opened by MM. Bouton and Daguerre in Paris, 11 July, 1822; in London, 29 Sept. 1823. It was not successful commercially here, and was sold in 1848. The building in Regent's-park was purchased by sir S. M. Peto, and opened on May 2, 1855, as a Baptist chapel.

DIPHThERIA (from the Greek diphthera, leather), a disease resembling croup which has the essential character of developing a false membrane on the mucous membrane connected with the throat. It was named diphtheritis by Brétonneau of Tours in 1820. From its prevalence in Boulogne, it has been termed the Boulogne sore-throat; many persons were affected with it in England at the beginning of 1858. The princess Alice, grand-duchess of Hesse-Darmstadt, died of this disease, 14 Dec. 1878, after nursing her husband and children. Often epidemic in London, &c., 1891-1901; origin and propagation uncertain.

Dr. Roux of Paris successfully applied the antitoxin treatment of disease to diphtheria in 1894 by injecting into the patient's blood the serum of the blood of a horse previously rendered immune by a course of injections of the weak virus of diphtheria.

The treatment has been gradually developed from the discoveries of Löffler, Behring, Koch, and others in Germany. The Goldsmiths' company grant 1000l. for the prosecution of researches on the subject. . . . Nov. 1894

Anti-toxin successfully used 1895 et seq.

Dr. L. Martin's method of transforming the Roux serum into pastilles, reported to be successful with children. May, "

As showing the effect of antitoxin, the following return of all forms of diphtheria treated in the hospitals of the Metropolitan asylums board is interesting:

1890-1893 (before antitoxin), 7,111 cases, 2,161 deaths.
1905 4,224 cases, 346 deaths.

DIPLOMACY, the art of managing the relations of foreign states by means of ambassadors, envoys, consuls, chargés d'affaires, &c.; see Ambassadors and Consuls.

DIPLOMAS. The wholesale fraudulent sale of diplomas of M.D., &c., for 10l. by a Dr. Buchanan, dean of the American University of Philadelphia, and others, was detected in 1880. He attempted escape by a sham suicide, but was captured, prosecuted, and imprisoned.

DIPLOMATICS, the foreign term for the science of palæography or ancient writings. Valuable works on this subject have been compiled by Mabillon (1681), De Vaines (1774), Astle (1781), De Wailly (1838), and other antiquaries.

DIPTYCH, a two-leaved tablet of metal, ivory, or other material, used by the Greeks and Romans. In the Christian church in its early days it was customary to inscribe the names of deceased bishops on diptychs. This practice was extended to include other distinguished persons who had deserved well of the church, and from it arose the calendars and martyrologies of a later period. The earliest diptychs in existence belong to the 5th century.

DIRECTORS' LIABILITY ACT, relating to prospectuses, &c., of public companies, passed 18 Aug. 1890.

"DIRECTORY FOR THE PUBLIC WORSHIP OF GOD" was drawn up at the instance of the parliament by an assembly of divines at Westminster in 1644, after the suppression of the Book of Common Prayer. The general hints given were to be managed with discretion; for the Directory prescribed no form of prayer or manner of external worship, and enjoined the people to make no responses except Amen. It was adopted by the parliament of Scotland in 1645, and many of its regulations are still observed by presbyterians.

DIRECTORY, THE FRENCH, established by the constitution of the 5th of Fructidor, an III. (22 Aug. 1795), and nominated 1 Nov., was composed of five members (MM. Lépoux, Letourneur, Rewbel, Barras, and Carnot). On 18 Fructidor, 4 Sep. 1797, two directors (Carnot and Barthélemy) were deposed, and afterwards, with other officials, transported to Cayenne for favouring royalty. The directory ruled in conjunction with two chambers, the Council of Ancients and Council of Five Hundred (which see), till the revolution of the 18th of Brumaire (9, 10 Nov. 1799). It was deposed by Bonaparte, who, with Cambacérès and Lebrun, assumed the government as three consuls, himself the first, 13 Dec. 1799; see Consuls.

DIRECTORY, the first LONDON, is said to have been printed in 1677. The "Post-office Directory" first appeared in 1800.

Directories of most of the English counties and of Scotland now published at short intervals.
Thom's Official Directory, Ireland, 67th year, 1910.

"DISCIPLES OF CHRIST" (also called CAMPBELLITES) profess adherence to pure Scriptural doctrine and practice, reject human creeds and formularies, and admit to their communion all who recognise Christ's obedience and death as "the only meritorious cause of the sinner's acceptance with God," and are baptized (by immersion) in his name.

The term Campbellite originated through their first church at Brush Run, in America, having been set up by a Scotch presbyterian preacher from Ireland, named Thomas Campbell, and his son Alexander. In 1812 they renounced infant baptism, and were rebaptized by immersion. Their number in America is said to be about 600,000; and in the United Kingdom, where the movement began independently and simultaneously, about 5000. They have also churches in the British colonies.

DISCIPLINE, ecclesiastical, originally conducted spiritually according to the divine commands in Matt. xviii. 15, 1 Cor. v., 2 Thess. iii. 6, and other texts, was gradually changed to a temporal character, as it now appears in the Roman, Greek, and other churches. The "First Book of Discipline" of the presbyterian church of Scotland was drawn up by John Knox and four ministers in Jan. 1560-1. The more important "Second Book" was prepared with great care in 1578 by Andrew Melville and a committee of the leading members of the general assembly. It lays down a thoroughly presbyterian form of government, defines the position of the ecclesiastical and civil powers, &c.

The following returns under the Diseases of Animals acts show the number of animals suffering from anthrax, glanders and rabies in Great Britain in the years respectively. Anthrax: outbreaks, 1894, 494; 1903, 767; 1904, 1,049; 1906, 939; 1908, 1,105; animals affected 1894, 1,000; 1902, 1,032; 1904, 1,589; 1906, 1,330; 1908, 1,419. Glanders: outbreaks, 1894, 965; 1902, 1,155; 1904, 1,529; 1906, 1,066; 1908, 789; animals affected, 1894, 1,437; 1904, 2,658; 1906, 2,012; 1908, 2,433. Rabies in dogs, cases reported, 1893, 93; 1902, 13; 1903-1908, no cases reported. Swine fever: outbreaks, 1894, 5,682; 1904, 1,196; 1906, 1,280; 1908, 2,067; swine slaughtered, 1894, 56,296; 1904, 5,603; 1906, 7,359; 1908, 14,096; The board of agriculture announced Jan. 1903, that no case of foot and mouth disease had been confirmed in the United Kingdom or Channel Islands since May, 1902, and that there was reason to believe that the disease had been stamped out.

DISESTABLISHMENT. See Church of Ireland.

DISPENSARIES, to supply the poor with medical advice and medicines, began in London. The Royal General Dispensary, London, was established in St. Bartholomew's Close, in 1770. The Western Dispensary was founded 1789. Garth's satiric poem, "The Dispensary," published 1699.

DISPENSATIONS, ecclesiastical, were first granted by pope Innocent III. in 1200. These exemptions from the discipline of the church, with indulgences, absolutions, &c., led eventually to the Reformation in Germany in 1517.

DISPENSING POWER OF THE CROWN (for setting aside laws or their power) asserted by some of our sovereigns, especially by Charles II. (in 1672 for the relief of nonconformists) and by James II. principally to enable Roman Catholics to hold civil and military offices, in 1686-8; was abolished by the bill of rights, 1689. It has been on certain occasions exercised, as in the case of embargoes upon ships, the Bank Charter act, &c.; see Indemnity.

DISRAELI ADMINISTRATIONS.* On the resignation of the earl of Derby through ill-health, 25 Feb. 1868, Mr. Disraeli reconstituted the ministry, 29 Feb. (see Derby Administrations, III.). As the elections gave a large majority to the liberal party, Mr. Disraeli's ministry resigned 2 Dec. He declined to take office with the then house of commons when Mr. Gladstone resigned, 12 March, 1873, and the latter resumed office.

FIRST ADMINISTRATION, 29 Feb. 1868.

First lord of treasury, Benjamin Disraeli.
Lord chancellor, Hugh MacCalmont, lord Cairns.

Chief secretary for Ireland, sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach (entered the cabinet, Nov. 1876): succeeded by James Lowther, Feb. 1878.

Vice-president of council (education), Dudley, viscount Sandon; lord George Hamilton, April, 1878.

Chancellor of duchy of Lancaster, col. Thos. E. Taylor.

Commissioner of woods and forests, lord Henry Lennox, resigned July, 1876; Gerard James Noel, 14 Aug. 1876.

DISSECTION, see Anatomy.

DISSENTERS. (For dates of foundation of various dissenting churches, see Nonconformists.) An association of baptist, independent, and presbyterian ministers, styled "The general body of Protestant dissenting ministers resident in and about London and Westminster," was organised July 1727. This body has direct access to the throne, with kissing of hands. "Dissenting deputies," laymen, founded Nov. 1732. The great act (9 Geo. IV. c. 17) for the relief of dissenters from civil and religious disabilities was passed 9 May, 1828. By this act, called the Corporation and Test Repeal act, so much of the several acts of preceding reigns as imposed the necessity of receiving the sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a qualification for certain offices, &c., was repealed. By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85 (1836), dissenters acquired the right of solemnising marriages at their own chapels, or at a registry office. Another act passed in 1898, by which, under certain regulations, marriages may be solemnized in nonconformist places of worship if duly registered for that purpose, without the presence of a registrar. The act does not apply to Scotland or Ireland, nor to marriages of the Society of Friends, or of Jews. See Worship in England and Independents.

A Burials bill to permit the ministers of dissenters to officiate at funerals in churchyards several times rejected; in the commons 248 to 234, 21 April, 1875; 279 to 248, 3 March, 1876; earl Granville's resolution in the lords rejected 148 to 92, 15 May, 1876.

Lord Harrowby's additional clause to the government burials bill (permitting dissenters to have religious services in churchyards), was supported by the archbishops, and carried against government, (127-111,) 18 June; the bill withdrawn, 25 June, 1877.

Mr. Osborne Morgan's resolution for reforming burial laws (i.e. permitting other services), rejected (242-227), 15 Feb. 1878.

Act to amend the burial laws, permitting dissenters to have their own service or no service in churchyards; passed commons (258-79), 13 Aug., royal assent, 7 Sept. 1880.

The Rev. W. H. Fremantle having proposed to preach at Dr. Parker's city temple, and the bishop of London having disapproved, the opinion of two counsel (Messrs. Fitzjames Stephen and Benjamin Shaw) was taken. They declared it to be illegal for the clergy of the English church to take part in worship of dissenters, June, 1875.

Several episcopal clergymen take part in the dedication services of Christ church (formerly Surrey chapel), Blackfriars, middle of July, 1876.

Great dissatisfaction expressed by nonconformists, and strenuous opposition to the Education bills of 1902 and 1903 (see Education). Their cause championed by Dr. Clifford and others, March 1902 et seq.

Many nonconformists refuse to pay the Education rate, their goods distrained upon. Passive resistance movement (which see) started, March 1903.

DISSOLVING VIEWS. Henry Langdon Childe, the alleged inventor, died 15 Oct. 1874, aged 92.

DISTAFF (or Rock), the staff to which flax or any substance to be spun is fastened. The art of spinning with it at the small wheel, first taught to English women by Anthony Bonavisa, an Italian. Stow. St. Distaff's or Rock day was formerly the first free day after the Epiphany (6th Jan.), because the Christmas holidays were over and women's work was resumed.

DISTILLATION, and the various processes dependent on it, are believed to have been introduced into Europe by the Moors about 1150; see Alcohol, Brandy. The distillation of spirituous liquors was in practice in Great Britain in the 16th century. Burns. The processes were improved by Adam of Montpellier in 1801. M. Payen's work (1861) contains recent improvements. An act to prevent the use of stills by unlicensed persons was passed in 1846. 118 licences to distillers were granted in the year ending 31 March, 1858, for the United Kingdom.

System introduced in Russia rendering distillation a government monopoly, reported, April, 1901.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER, for army and navy officers established 9 Nov.; first investiture, 17 Dec. 1886.

Distinguished service medal (India) instituted by king Edward VII., 25 June, 1907.

DISTRESS.

Law of Distress amendment act, 1908, comes into force, 1 July, 1909.

DISTRICT AUDITORS ACT, 42 Vict. c. 6 (28 March, 1879), regulated their appointment, duties, and payment.

DISTRICT CHURCHES ACTS. By the one passed in 1865 certain new churches were constituted rectories, and by another act, passed in 1868 (the Bishop of Oxford's act) the new parishes not rectories were ordered to be styled vicarages. See under Parishes.

"DIVERSIONS OF PURLEY" ("Epea Pteroenta," flying words) a collection of grammatical treatises by John Horne Tooke, published in 1786, named from the residence at Purley.

DIVINATION was forbidden to the Jews, B.C. 1451. (Deut. xviii. 9.) It was common among their neighbours: and is described by Ezekiel (xxi. 21) 493 B.C.

DIVINE RIGHT OF KINGS, the absolute and unqualified claim of hereditary sovereigns to the obedience of their subjects, a doctrine which is generally considered to be foreign to the genius of the English constitution, was defended by many persons of otherwise opposite opinions, e.g., by James I., by Hobbes the free-thinker (1642), by Salmasius (1640), by sir Robert Filmer (about 1653), in his Patriarcha, published in 1680, and by the High Church party generally about 1714; but opposed by Milton (1651), Algernon Sydney, and others. The comte de Chambord, the last of the elder branch of the Bourbons, and the last consistent holder of the divine right of kings, died 24 Aug. 1883. See France, 1872 et seq.

DIVING.

The earliest record of the art of diving for a purpose of utility occurs in Homer's Iliad. Thus it would seem that the art was known approximately

Thucydides relates that divers were employed at the defence of Syracuse
B.C. 1100
B.C. 215-212

At the siege of Tyre, Alexander the Great ordered divers to destroy the submarine defences, &c. 333
 The employment of divers for the salvage of sunken property is first mentioned by Livy. In the piscatorial contest between Antony and Cleopatra, Antony sent down a diver secretly with a fish previously caught to attach it to his hook. Cleopatra despatched another diver to fix a salted fish on the hook.
 Roger Bacon is supposed to have invented a diving-bell A.D. 1240
 In Vegetius's De Re Militari is an engraving representing a diver, published 1511 & 1532
 Lorini, an Italian, designed a diving apparatus 1609
 Borelli invented an apparatus which aimed at the renewal of the air and the separation of the exhaled from the inspiratory air 1682
 John Lethbridge, a Devonshire man, invented a watertight case for enclosing the person 1715
 The next contrivance most nearly resembling the modern diving dress was an apparatus invented by Kleingert, of Breslau, in 1798
 Augustus Siebe invented his "open" dress, worked in conjunction with an air force pump, in 1819
 Though great improvements have been introduced since Siebe's death in 1872, his principle is in universal use to this day 1910
 The greatest depth at which useful work has been performed by a diver is 182 feet. From this depth a Spanish diver, Angel Erostarbe, recovered 10,000 l. in silver bars from the wreck of the steamer Skyro, off Finisterre

DIVING-BELL.

To Dr. Edmund Halley, secretary of the Royal Society, the honour is due of having invented the really first practical diving-bell 1717
 Robert Boyle in his experiments Physico-Mechanical (1667) describes a submarine vessel, contrived by Cornelius Drebbel about the year 1620, which was to be rowed and used under water, and was actually tried in the Thames by order of James I.
 Martin Triewald, a Swedish military officer, contrived a diving-bell of a lighter and less expensive character than Halley's, in 1728
 Charles Spalding introduced an improvement on Halley's bell 1775
 John Smeaton designed a diving-bell for use in repairing the foundations of Hexham bridge 1788
 To Smeaton we are indebted for the first diving-bell plant in the form with which we are familiar to-day (1810), that celebrated engineer having designed a square bell of iron for use on the Ramsgate harbour works in 1790
 Probably the first really practicable diving-boat was Dr. Payenne's in 1844

DIVINING ROD (virgula divina, baculatorius), formed of wood or metal, was formerly believed, even by educated persons, to have the property of indicating the position of minerals and springs of water. Instances were alleged in 1851 by Dr. H. Mayo, in his work on "Popular Superstitions"; and upheld by many writers since.

DIVORCE was permitted by the law of Moses (Deut. xxiv. 1), 1451 B.C., but forbidden by Christ except for unchastity (Matt. v. 31, 32). It was put in practice by Spurius Carvilius Ruga at Rome, 234 B.C. At this time morals were so debased that 3000 prosecutions for adultery were enrolled. Divorces are of two kinds; one, à vinculo matrimonii (total divorce); the other à mensâ et thoro (from board and bed). Divorces were attempted to be made of more easy obtainment in England in 1539. Until 1858, in England, complete divorce could only be obtained by act of Parliament, as in Ireland now. The divorce court, established by the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, was, by the Judiciary act, 1873, constituted the probate, divorce, and admiralty division of the High Court of Justice, with two judges. See Supreme Court and Probate.
 Bill to prevent women marrying their seducers brought into parliament 1801

The commissioners on the law of divorce issued their first report April, 1857
 In 1857 there had been in England, since the Reformation, 317 divorces by act of parliament; in Scotland, by the law, 174 divorces since 1846.
 By 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts respecting divorce, &c., was abolished, and the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes court instituted, to consist of three judges, the judge of the Probate court to be one (if possible)
 A full court sat—lord Campbell, chief baron Pollock, sir Cresswell Cresswell (judge of the Probate court) when five marriages were dissolved 10 May, 1858
 The act amended by acts passed in consequence of the increase of the business of the court 1858-60
 An act respecting divorces in Scotland passed 1861
 Sir C. Cresswell died in July; sir James P. Wilde (afterwards lord Penzance) successor Sept. 1863
 Lord Penzance retired, Oct.; succeeded by sir James Hannen, Nov. 1872; sir Francis H. Jeune, 30 May, 1892, resigns 28 Jan. 1905 (baron St. Hellier, 1905; died 9 April, 1905); succeeded by Mr. (kt. 1905) Justice Gorrell Barnes, 1 Feb. 1905; right hon. sir John C. Bigham.

See Appeal, Probate and Supreme Court.

The Divorce Amendment act passed 21 July, 1868. Between 1856 and 1867 1279 dissolutions of marriage and 213 judicial separations were decreed.
 Divorces 1858-87, 7321. In 1858, 200; 1868, 200; 1878, 403; 1887, 450; 1891, 744; 1901, 1,127; 1906, 1,092; 1907, 1,288; 1908, 1,314.
 On appeal, the House of Lords decide that proceedings may be taken for divorce from a wife insane (see Mordaunt case, Trials, 1870) 22 June, 1874
 Divorce legalised by the French Republic; about 7000 divorces in Paris alone 1793-4; prohibited by the civil code, yet Napoleon I. divorced Josephine 16 Dec. 1809; again prohibited 1816; again legalised (with conditions) by M. Naquet's bill, passed July; many suits instituted, Aug. 1884. 7,051 divorces in 1896; 9,053 in 1899; 9,860 in 1904; 10,573 in 1906; 11,515 in 1908
 In the United States of N.A., owing to the great increase of divorces, the National Divorce League urges congress to reform the law
 Bills greatly facilitating divorce passed by the parliaments of New South Wales and Victoria, vetoed by the colonial office 1888-9
 A divorce bill for Victoria, having received the assent of the home government, the bishops of Victoria forbid their clergy marrying divorced persons May, 1890
 Dr. Gore, bp. of Birmingham, appointing the first chancellor of the new diocese, specifically excludes from the chancellor's powers the right to grant marriage licenses to persons who have been divorced, reported 31 Aug. 1905

See Church of England, 1903 and 1905.
 Royal commission on the law of divorce in England appointed; first sitting held 25 Feb. 1910
 See Times, Feb.-July, 1910.

DIZIER, ST. (N.E. France). Here a siege was sustained for six weeks against the army of the emperor Charles V., 1544. The allies here defeated Napoleon, 27 Jan. and 26 March, 1814.

DOBRUDSCHA, the N.E. corner of Bulgaria; in 1854, the scene of the earlier incidents of the Russo-Turkish war (which see). At the close of the war of 1877-8 it was given to Roumania in exchange for the part of Bessarabia restored to Russia, and occupied 26 Dec. 1878.

DOCETÆ, a sect of the 1st century, said to have held that Jesus Christ was God, but that his body was an appearance, not a reality.

DOCKS. There are several kinds of docks, of which the chief are wet, which afford facilities for loading and unloading vessels; dry or graving, for the inspection and repair of ships, and floating, for the same purposes. Wet docks are of two kinds—those in which the water is always maintained at about the same level by means of land streams or pumping, and these are the most convenient; and those known as tidal, where during the ebb of the tide the ships practically rest upon the mud. The first dock in England was constructed at London in 1696, and was for the accommodation of whaling vessels from Greenland, and afforded facilities for boiling or "trying-out" blubber, whilst the first dock at Liverpool was constructed in 1708. During the last century the immense development of the world's trade and the building of ships of enormous size and carrying capacity, necessitated improvements in the facilities for dealing with ocean traffic; and, as a result, old docks were enlarged and new ones constructed. Tidal docks were deepened by dredging, and deeper water was provided at the quays. In the United Kingdom the principal docks are at London, Cardiff, Liverpool, Birkenhead, Newcastle, Bristol, Manchester (opened up to ocean traffic by means of the ship canal; see Manchester), Dover, Grimsby, North and South Shields, Glasgow, Hull, the Hartlepoons, Aberdeen, Southampton, Plymouth, Cork, Dundee, Newport (Mon.), Dublin, Swansea, Middlesbrough, Portsmouth, Greenock, Barry, and Leith. London is the largest port in the world. A royal commission was appointed in 1900 to inquire into the administration of the Port of London (see London and other places named). Floating docks save much time in the inspection and repair of damaged vessels. The docks, by means of a series of chambers into which water is allowed to flow, are sunk beneath the vessel to be repaired; the water is pumped out, and the dock rises to the surface again with the ship upon its deck. The principal London docks are as follows:—

Commercial Docks, Rotherhithe, originated about 1696. West India Docks commenced 3 Feb. 1800; opened 27 Aug. 1802.

London Docks were commenced 26 June, 1802, and opened 20 Jan. 1805.

East India Docks commenced 1803; opened 4 Aug. 1806. St. Katharine's Docks began 3 May, 1827; opened 25 Oct. 1828.

Royal Victoria Docks (in Plaistow marshes) completed and opened Nov. 1855; enlarged and named Royal Albert Docks by the duke and duchess of Connaught, 24 June, 1880.

Millwall Docks, near London, opened, 14 March, 1868.

The construction of floating docks for repairing ships advocated by lord Brassey, Jan. 1837.

Erection of docks at Tilbury determined on 30 Sept. 1881; begun 8 July, 1882; opened 17 April, 1886.

For dock labourers' strike see Strikes, Aug.-Sept. 1889.

A great floating iron dry dock, which cost 250,000*l.*, was launched at North Woolwich, 3 Sept. 1868; and towed from the Medway by two ships of war, 23 June, and arrived at the Bermudas (in thirty-six days), 30 July, 1869; another sent arrived 8 Aug. 1902.

Floating dock for Durban, launched, Wallsend-on-Tyne, 8 Aug. 1903.

ROYAL DOCK-YARDS.

Woolwich, an extensive one in 1509; closed 1 Oct. 1869. Deptford dock-yard founded about 1513, closed 31 March, 1869.

Chatham dock-yard was founded by queen Elizabeth. Three grand docks constructed at a cost of about 2,000,000*l.* independent of cost of convict labour, 1866-83.

Portsmouth dock-yard established by Henry VIII.

Plymouth dock, now Devonport, about 1689. Great fire here, by which the Talavera, of 74 guns, the Imogene frigate, of 28 guns, and immense stores, were destroyed; the relics and figure-heads of the favourite ships of Boscawen, Rodney, Duncan, and other naval heroes, which were preserved in a naval museum, were also burnt: the loss was estimated at 200,000*l.*, 27 Sept. 1840. Great fire, damage 20,000*l.*, 8 Feb. 1882.

Sheerness dock-yard was built by Charles II. after the insult of the Dutch, who burnt our men-of-war at Chatham in 1667. A fire occurred at Sheerness dock-yard, on board the Camperdown, 9 Oct. 1840.

Milford-Haven dock-yard, 1790; removed to Pembroke in 1814.

Southampton large graving dock, length 750 ft., width, quay level, 112 ft. 6 in., depth 35 ft.; opened by the prince of Wales, 3 Aug. 1895.

There are also dockyards at Keyham and Haulbowline. New naval ordnance store built at Devonport Mar. 1908. King Edward VII. opens the Royal Edward dock at Avonmouth, 9 July 1908.

New dock at Garston opened, area 14½ acres, 24 Feb. 1909. Disaster at the Victoria wharf, Birkenhead, through the collapse of a dam, 14 men instantly buried under a mass of earth and water lost their lives; three others were injured, 6 March, 1909.

Collapse of a dam at the Alexandra dock extension at Newport (Mon.) 39 lives lost, 2 July 1909. King's Dock, Swansea, opened, 23 Nov. 1909.

DOCTOR. Doctor of the Church was a title given to Athanasius, Basil, Gregory Nazianzen, and Chrysostom in the Greek church; and to Jerome, Augustin, Ambrose, and Gregory the Great in the Latin church; see Fathers. Afterwards the title of doctor only was conferred on certain persons with distinguishing epithets, viz.: Thomas Aquinas (Angelicus), Bonaventura (Seraphicus), Alexander de Hales (Irrefragabilis), Duns Scotus (Subtilis), Roger Bacon (Mirabilis), William Occam (Singularis), Joseph Gerson (Christianissimus), Thomas Bradwardine (Profundus), and so on. Doctor of the Law was a title of honour among the Jews. Formal promotions to the degree of doctor legum commenced at Bologna, circa 1130; the university of Paris followed this use soon after. The degree of doctor was conferred in England, 8 John, 1207. Spelman. Some give it an earlier date, referring it to the time of the Venerable Bede and John de Beverley, the former of whom, it is said, was the first that obtained the degree at Cambridge in the 8th century. Originally the degree of "doctor" was granted only in law and divinity; it was not conferred in medicine until the 14th century. The right to confer degrees was granted in the middle ages by the pope, as the recognised head of the universities; in protestant countries this right is granted only by the state. The archbishop of Canterbury, by an act in the reign of Henry VIII. (25 Henry VIII., c. 21, 1553-4), received the right of conferring degrees, known as Lambeth degrees. The doctorate in science, music, and literature dates from the latter part of the 19th century.

DOCTORS' COMMONS, the college for the professors of civil and canon law in the 8th century. In February, 1568, Dr. Henry Hervie, dean of the arches and master of Trinity-hall (a seminary founded at Cambridge chiefly for the study of the civil and canon laws), procured from the dean and chapter of the diocese of London a lease of Montjoy-house and buildings in the parish of St. Benet, Paul's wharf, for the accommodation of the society. Other courts being held here, the whole place received the appellation of "Doctors' Commons." The original college was destroyed in the great fire of 1666; in 1672 it was rebuilt on the old site. After the great fire, until 1672, the society held its courts at Exeter-house in the Strand. It was incorporated by charter in June, 1768. Cooté. The buildings of the College of Advocates, which included all the courts of Doctors' Commons (arches, admiralty, consistory, &c.), were purchased by the Metropolitan Board of Works, and were pulled down in April, 1867, for the new Queen Victoria Street; some new buildings were erected. Till 1857 the causes taken cognizance of here were blasphemy, divorcees, bastardy, adultery, penance, tithes, mortuaries, probate of wills, &c.; see Ecclesiastical Courts, Civil Law, &c.

The wills were removed to Somerset-house, where the office was opened 24 Oct. 1874

DOCTRINAIRES, a name given since 1814 to a class of politicians in France (Guizot, Molé, the duc de Broglie and others), who upheld constitutional principles, in opposition to arbitrary monarchical power. The party came into office in 1830 under Louis-Philippe, and fell with him in 1848. The term was applied in this country to the writers in the "Westminster Review" (1824 et seq.), Bentham, Molesworth, and others.

DODONA, Epirus. The temple of Jupiter here, renowned for its ancient oracle, delivered by the sound of wind in a grove of trees, was destroyed by the Ætolians, 219 B.C. The foundations of the temple, with other relics, were discovered in 1883, by the excavations of M. Carapanos.

DODSON'S ACT (brought forward by Mr. John G. Dodson, and passed 1 Aug. 1861) provided that votes for electing members of parliament for the universities may be recorded by means of polling papers. The act was amended in 1868.

DOMES'-DAY BOOK or DOOM'S-DAY [Domus Dei book, Stow] (Liber Censualis Angliæ), a book of the general survey of England, commenced in the reign of William I., 1086 (some say 1085), and completed in 1086. It was intended to be a register to determine the right in the tenure of estates*; and from it the question whether lands be ancient demesne or not, is sometimes still decided. The book, formerly kept in the Chapter-house of Westminster, is now in the Public Record Office. "This Domes'-day book was the tax-book of kinge William." Camden. The taxes were levied according to this survey till 13 Henry VIII., 1522, when a more accurate survey was taken, called by the people the New Doom's-

DOMINGO, St., see Hayti and Dominican Republic.

DOMINICA (W. Indies), discovered by Columbus in his second voyage, on Sunday, 3 Nov. 1493. It was taken by the British in 1761, and confirmed to them by the peace of Paris, Feb. 1763. The French took Dominica in 1778, but restored it at the subsequent peace in 1783. Their admiral Villeneuve ineffectually attacked it in 1805. It suffered great damage by a hurricane in 1806, and also 4-5 Sept. 1883. Failing prosperity; changes in the administration to be made, reported 5 Oct. 1894; imperial assistance accepted, July, 1898. Population, 1881, 28,211; 1901, about 28,894; 1910 (est.), 32,000. See Leeward Isles.

(President—Ramon Carceres, 1903.)

DOMINICAL LETTER, noting the Lord's day, or Sunday. The seven days of the week, reckoned as beginning on the 1 Jan., are designated by the first seven letters of the alphabet, A (1 Jan.), B, C, D, E, F, G; and the one of these which denotes Sunday is the Dominical letter. If the year begin on Sunday, A is the Dominical letter; if on Monday, G; on Tuesday, F; and so on. Generally to find the Dominical letter call New Year's day A, the next B, and go on thus until you come to the first Sunday, and the letter that answers to it is the Dominical letter; in leap years count two letters. The letters for 1893, A; 1894, G; 1895, F; 1896, E D; 1897, C; 1898, B; 1899, A; 1900, G; 1901, F; 1902, E; 1903, D; 1904, C B; 1905, A.; 1906, G.; 1907, F.; 1908, E D; 1909, C; 1910, B; 1911, A. The letter or its number (figure of 1 for A, &c.) used in ancient charters.

DOMINICANS, formerly a powerful religious order (called in France, Jacobins, and in England, Black friars), founded to put down the Albigenses and other heretics by St. Dominic, approved by Innocent III. in 1215, and confirmed by Honorius III. in 1216, under St. Augustin's rules and the founder's particular constitution. In 1276 the corporation of London gave the Dominicans two streets near the Thames, where they erected a large convent, whence that part is still called Blackfriars. A Dominican establishment at Haverstock hill, near London, was consecrated 10 Oct. 1867.

DOMINION OF CANADA, see Canada.

DOMINOES, a game of great antiquity played with bone or ivory cards, on which pips are marked from double blank upwards to double twelve.

DONATISTS, an ancient strict sect, formed about 313-318, by an African bishop, Donatus, who was jealous of Cæcilian, bishop of Carthage: it became extinct in the 7th century. The Donatists held that the Father was above the Son, and the Son above the Holy Ghost. Their discipline was severe, and those who joined them were re-baptized.

DONAUWERTH (Bavaria). Here the French and Bavarians were defeated by the duke of Marlborough, after a severe conflict, 2 July, 1704.

DONCASTER (Yorkshire), the Roman Danum, the Saxon Donne caestre. The races here (held annually in September) began about 1703; see Races. Population, 1901, 28,928; 1909 (est.), 31,750.

DONGOLA, a town on the Nile, 750 miles S. of Cairo, subject to Egypt. See Soudan, 1883, 1885, 1896. The town and province re-conquered for Egypt by sir H. H. Kitchener (afterwards lord) in the campaign of 1896. New Dongola rapidly built and fortified, reported 19 Nov. 1896; reported prosperous by sir H. H. Kitchener, 17 Jan. 1897. Government organized. Population, about 60,000.

DON QUIXOTE, by Saavedra Miguel de Cervantes (born 1547; died 1616). The first part of this work appeared in 1605, and the second part in 1608. It is said that upwards of 12,000 copies of the first part were circulated before the second was printed. Watts. First English translation, by Thomas Shelton, was published in 1612. Tercentenary of the publication of "Don Quixote" celebrated by the British academy, 25 June, 1905.

DOOM'S-DAY BOOK, see Domes'-day Book

DORADO, see El Dorado.

DORCHESTER (Oxfordshire) was once a bishopric, founded about 636. The first bishop Birinus, the apostle of the West Saxons (which see), was succeeded in 650 by Agilbert. In 659 the see was divided by the king. Dorchester remained with Agilbert, and Wina, established at Winchester, in 660 obtained the whole. The see of Dorchester was revived about 764. In 1072 the bishop Remigius de Feschamp removed the see to Lincoln.

DORCHESTER (Dorsetshire), the Roman Durnovaria, the Saxon Dornceaster. Here are found remains of a Roman theatre and of a British camp. Splendid specimen of villa pavement discovered, Aug. 1899. Here Jefferies held his "bloody assize" (after Monmouth's rebellion), 3 Sept. 1685. Much excitement was caused by six labourers of Dorchester being sentenced to transportation 17 March, 1834, for administering illegal oaths. Population, 1901, 10,148; 1910 (est.), 12,000.

DORIANS, Greeks, who claimed descent from Dorus, son of Helien; see Greece. The return of the Dorians, named Heraclidae, to the Peloponnesus is dated 1104 B.C. They sent out many colonies. To them we owe the Doric architecture, the second of the five orders.

DORKING, Surrey, an ancient town; the manor having been given by the Conqueror to earl Fitzwarren. An imaginary battle of Dorking, in which the German invaders totally defeat the British army, was the subject of a clever article, attributed to gen. sir George Chesney, in Blackwood's Magazine for May, 1871. It provoked much controversy, and caused the publication of several pamphlets. Population, 1901, 12,699; 1910 (est.), 14,000.

DORMANS (N. E. France). The Huguenots and their allies, under Montmorency, were here defeated by the duke of Guise, 10 Oct. 1575.

DORT, or DORDRECHT, an ancient town in Holland. Here happened an inundation of the Meuse in 1421, through the breaking down of the dykes. In the territory of Dordrecht 10,000 persons perished; and more than 100,000 round Dollart, in Friesland, and in Zealand. The independence of the thirteen provinces was declared here in 1572, when William Prince of Orange was made stadtholder. A Protestant synod sat at Dort 13 Nov. 1618, to 25 May 1619; to which deputies were sent from England, and from the reformed churches in Europe, to settle the difference between the doctrines of Luther, Calvin, and Arminius, principally upon points of justification and grace. This synod condemned the tenets of Arminius. Population, 1900, 38,884; 1908, 45,725.

DORYLÆUM (Phrygia). Soliman, the Turkish sultan of Iconium, having retired from the defence of Nicœa his capital, was here defeated with great loss by the crusaders 1 July, 1097. Michaud.

DOUAY (N. France), the Roman Duacum, was taken from the Flemings by Philip the Fair in 1297; restored by Charles V. in 1368. It reverted to Spain, from which it was taken by Louis XIV. in 1667. It was captured by the duke of Marlborough in June, 1710; and retaken by the French 8 Sept. 1712. This town gives its name to the Roman Catholic English version of the Bible authorised by the pope, the text being explained by notes of Roman divines. The Old Testament was published by the English college at Douay in 1609; the New had been published at Rheims in 1582. The English college for Roman Catholics was founded in 1568 by William Allen, afterwards cardinal. Dodd. For 335 years most English and Irish priests were trained here. The Benedictine monks, professors and students, were expelled from France 18 July 1903; the college transferred to St. Mary's Roman Catholic college at Wolverhampton.

DOURO, a river (separating Spain and Portugal), which, after a desperate struggle between Wellington's advanced guard under Hill, and the French under Soult, was successfully crossed by the former on 12 May, 1809. So sudden was the movement, that Wellington at 4 o'clock sat down to the dinner prepared for the French general. Alison.

DOVER (Kent), the Roman Dubris. Near here Julius Caesar is said to have first landed in England, 26 Aug., 55 B.C., and its original castle to have been built by him soon after; but this is disputed. The works were strengthened by Alfred and succeeding kings, and rebuilt by Henry II. See Tunnels and Cinque Ports. Population, 1901, 41,782; 1910 (est.) 50,750.

DOWER, the gifts of a husband to a wife before marriage (Genesis xxxiv. 12). The portion of a man's lands or tenements which his wife enjoys for life after her husband's death. By the law of king Edmund, a widow was entitled to a moiety of her husband's lands or tenements for her life, 941. The widows of traitors, but not those of felons, are debarred their dower by statute 5 Edw. VI. 1551. By the Dower act passed in 1833, the power of the wife over her dower was much diminished.

DOWN (N. E. Ireland). An ancient see, first bishop St. Cailan, in 499. At the instance of John de Courcy, the conqueror of Ulster, the cathedral, consecrated to the Trinity, was re-dedicated to St. Patrick about 1183. The sepulchre of St. Patrick (buried here in 493, in the abbey of Saul, founded by himself) brought this place into great repute. The see was united with that of Connor in 1441 (see Connor); and the see of Dromore was united to both by the Irish Church Temporalities act, 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 37, Aug. 14, 1833. The cathedral of Downpatrick was destroyed by lord Grey, lord deputy of Ireland; for this and other crimes he was impeached and beheaded in 1541. Beatson.

DOWNES, see Naval Battles, 1652-3.

DRACO'S LAWS (enacted by him when archon of Athens, 621 B. C.), on account of their severity, were said to be written in blood. Idleness was punished as severely as murder. This code was set aside by Solon's, 594 B. C.

DRAFTS (or cheques). In 1856, drafts crossed with a banker's name were made payable only to or through the same banker. This act was passed in consequence of a decision to the contrary in the case of Carlou v. Ireland, 12 Dec., 1855. In 1858 the crossing was made a material part of a cheque, but bankers are not held responsible when the crossing does not plainly appear, and a penny stamp was ordered to be affixed to drafts on bankers, commencing 25 May. In the case of Simmonds v. Taylor, May, 1858, it had been decided that the crossing formed no part of the draft. The crossing had been erased, and the money paid to the holder of the draft, who had stolen it.

The "Cheque-bank," established for issuing drafts for limited amounts, opened 23 July, 1873; after many years' successful working it failed owing to extensive forgeries; in liquidation, 1903.

The payment of a stolen draft crossed on one banker and presented by another banker declared legal; Smith v. Union Bank of London: verdict for defendants, 29 Nov. 1875.

Crossed Cheques act passed, Aug. 15, 1876.

DRAGONNADES. The fierce persecution of the Protestants in the reign of Louis XIV. by dragons, by the minister Louvois, 1684, was consummated by the revocation of Henry IV.'s edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685, which drove 50,000 families from France. Duruy.

DRAGOON. A cavalry soldier originally with infantry arms but now armed with lance, sword and carbine; the name is of doubtful origin, the Roman Draconarii were horse soldiers, who bore dragons for ensigns. Charles de Cossé, Marshal of Brissac, instituted French dragoons about 1600. The oldest British regiment, Scots Greys, enrolled in 1683.

DRAINAGE OF LAND, in England, is of early date—remains of British works being still extant in the Fens district. Cornelius Vermuyden, the Dutch engineer, was invited to England in 1621, and amidst much opposition, he and his successors drained the districts termed the Great Levels; see Levels. In the last century great progress was made in drainage. In 1861 was passed "an act to amend the laws relative to the drainage of land for agricultural purposes;" see Sewers.

DRAKE'S CIRCUMNAVIGATION. Sir Francis Drake sailed from Falmouth 13 Dec. 1577, circumnavigated the globe, and returned to England after many perils, 3 Nov. 1580. He was vice-admiral under lord Howard, high admiral of England, in the conflict with the Spanish Armada, 19 July, 1588. He died at Panamá, 28 Jan. 1596, during an expedition against the Spaniards.

DRAMA, both tragedy and comedy, originated with the Greeks, rudimentary forms being gradually combined with the periodical choral performances in honour of the gods, the stories being derived from sacred legends. The early dates given below are doubtful. See Theatre.

The first comedy performed at Athens, by Susarion and Dolon, on a movable scaffold about B. C. 580 or 562

LATIN DRAMA, derived from the Greek.

Livius Andronicus, a freed Greek slave of Tarentum, wrote Latin dramas; of 14 the titles and fragments have been preserved; his first play acted at Rome about B. C. 240

T. Maccius Plautus wrote about 130 plays; 20 extant: Miles Trinummus, &c.; very national and popular, about B. C. 254-184

P. Terentius or Terence, a freed slave, educated by his master, translated 108 of Menander's comedies, and imitated them; 6 of his own comedies extant: Andria, Hecyra, Heauton-Timoroumenos, (the self-tormentor) Eunuchus, Phormio, Adelphi B. C. 195-159

L. Annæus Seneca, the philosopher, wrote 10 tragedies: Hippolytus, Oedipus, Medea, Agamemnon, &c.; killed by Nero A.D. 65

The high-class drama declined under the emperors till its extinction, when it had degenerated into gross buffoonery

A Latin play of Plautus or Terence is annually performed at Westminster school in conformity with the statute of queen Elizabeth.

THE MODERN DRAMA, ENGLISH, was gradually developed from the services of the church in the 12th and 13th centuries, and appeared in the form of a miracle or mystery plays, based upon the bible history and legends of the saints. They were originally performed in churches, and afterwards in market-places and open fields. The Coventry, Chester and other mysteries, published by the Shakspeare Society, in 1843-7. See Church of England, 1897. John Skelton and others wrote Moralities about 1500; Nicholas Udall, 1540; The tragedy of Gorboduc or Ferrex & Porrex by Thos. Sackville and Thos. DRAMATIC COLLEGE, for the benefit of distressed actors and their children, was proposed 21 July, 1858, at the Princess's theatre, by Messrs. C. Dickens, Thackeray, C. Kean, B. Webster, and others. Mr. Henry Dodd's offer of land and money, with certain stipulations, was declined Jan. 1859. The first stone of the buildings at Maybury, near Woking, was laid by the prince consort, 1 June, 1860; and on 29 Sept. 1862, seven annuitants were installed. The central hall was opened by the prince of Wales, 5 June, 1865. The scheme was unsuccessful. On 12 Nov. 1877, it was determined to close the college, and provide for the inmates. The buildings were sold by private contract about 23 July, 1880. Academy of dramatic art founded by Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, 1904.

DRAMATIC REFORM ASSOCIATION, started at Manchester, Jan. 1878.

DRAPIER'S LETTERS, by dean Swift, published in 1723-4 against Wood's Halfpence (which see).

DRAUGHTS, a game resembling chess, played upon a checkered board divided in 64 black and white squares. Its origin is unknown. It was played in Europe in the 16th century. A game resembling draughts is depicted on the Egyptian monuments, and the Greeks and Romans played a similar game. Checkers is the common name for draughts in America, and in France it is called jeu des dames.

DRAWING SOCIETY (made Royal, 1892) of Great Britain, formed in July, 1888, to promote the teaching of drawing in schools. There are annual exhibitions.

DREADNOUGHT. In this ship, which was engaged in the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct. 1805, was established a hospital for the seamen of all nations (whose sovereigns are subscribers), by the Seamen's Hospital Society established 1821. The old vessel was replaced by others. The removal of the men to Greenwich hospital was proposed in 1867; effected, April, 1870. A new and exceptionally powerful type of battleship now being constructed by many of the leading powers. First British Dreadnought launched by king Edward VII. at Portsmouth, 10 Feb. 1906. At the end of 1909, Great Britain had 7 of these vessels completed, Germany 2, the United States 2, and Japan 1. It is estimated that at the end of 1912 Great Britain will have completed 20 Dreadnoughts, Germany 13, the United States 8, Japan 7, France 8, and Italy 2.

DREAMS are mentioned in Scripture, e.g., Joseph's and Pharaoh's, 1715 B.C., Usher (Gen. xxxvii. and xli.), and Nebuchadnezzar's, 603 and 570 B.C., Usher (Daniel ii. and iv.), and were regarded as direct messages from the spiritual world. The first attempt to interpret dreams and omens is ascribed to Amphietyon of Athens, 1497 B.C.

DRESS. The attire of the Hebrew women is censured in Isaiah iii., about 760 B.C. Excess in dress among the early Romans was restrained by sumptuary laws: and also in England by numerous statutes, in 1363, 1465, 1570, &c. (see Cap. Stow. F. W. Fairholt's "Costume in England" (1846) contains a history of dress with numerous illustrations derived from MSS., the works of Strutt, &c. J. R. Planché's elaborate "Cyclopædia of Costume" first appeared in 1876. A "dress-making company" was established in London, 6 Feb. 1865, with the view of improving the condition of the workwomen.

Sir Walter Raleigh wore a white satin-pinked vest, close-sleeved to the wrist, and over the body a doublet finely flowered, and embroidered with pearls, and in the feather of his hat a large ruby and pearl drop at the bottom of the sprig in place of a button. His breeches, with his stockings and ribbon garters, fringed at the end, all white; and buff shoes, which, on great court days, were so gorgeously covered with precious stones as to have exceeded the value of 6600*l.*; and he had a suit of armour of solid silver, with sword and belt blazing with diamonds, rubies, and pearls.

King James's favourite, the duke of Buckingham, had his diamonds tacked so loosely on, that when he chose to shake a few off on the ground, he obtained all the fame he desired from the pickers-up, who were generally les Dames de la Cour.

The court dress of civilians, previously that of the time of the Georges, was modified by the lord chamberlain, lord Sydney, in 1869.

The BLOOMER COSTUME, introduced into America in 1849, by Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, and worn there by many of the women. It resembled male attire, being an open-fronted jacket and loose trousers, the latter wide like those of the Turk, but gathered in at the ankles. The Bloomer dress was adopted by a few females in the west of London, in August, 1851; but though recommended by some American ladies in popular lectures, it was soon totally discontinued. Mrs. Bloomer warmly advocated the enfranchisement of women and other important reforms. She was born at Homer, New York, in 1818, and died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, 30 Dec. 1894.

Mr. Charles Worth, dressmaker, born at Bourne, Lincolnshire, in 1825; at the age of 20 went to Paris, and there established a business greatly influencing fashion; he died 10 March, 1895.

DREUX (N. W. France). Here the Huguenots were defeated, and their general Condé taken prisoner; and the catholic leader Montmorency was captured by the protestants; the slaughter was great on both sides, 19 Dec. 1562. Here is the burying-place of the Orleans family since 1816. The duke of Guise, aged 18, the last surviving child of the duc d'Aumale, was buried here 27 July, 1872. The bodies of king Louis Philippe and others of his family were brought here from England and buried, 9 June, 1876.

DROGHEDA (Ireland, E.), formerly Tre-dagh, a place of great importance, having the privilege of coining money. Here was passed Poyning's law (which see) in 1494. In the reign of Edward VI. an act was passed for the foundation of a university here. The town was besieged several times in the contests between 1641 and 1691, and Cromwell took it by storm, and put the governor, sir A. Aston, and the whole of the garrison, to the sword, 12 Sept. 1649. More than 3000 men, most of them English, perished. It surrendered to William III. in 1690. DRONTHEIM, capital of Norway, founded by Olaf I. about 998.

DROUGHT. The great suffering occasioned by drought, frequent in the eastern countries, is exemplified by Jeremiah, chap. xiv., about 601 B.C. Absolute droughts are rare in this country. According to Mr. G. J. Symons, there was partial drought in London, 16 April–30 May and 9 Aug.–5 Sept. 1880. "Of these long partial droughts I can trace only eight in the 93 years, viz.:—1800, June 6 to Aug. 19; 1817, March 8 to May 13; 1835, June 27 to Sept. 2; 1840, Feb. 5 to May 7; 1844, March 11 to June 23; 1852, Feb. 1 to April 28; 1854, Feb. 5 to April 26; 1893, Feb. 28 to May 16."—Times, 11 May, 1893. DROWNING, an ancient punishment. The ancient Britons are said to have inflicted death by drowning in a quagmire. Stow. It is said to have been inflicted on eighty intractable bishops near Nicomedia, A.D. 370; and to have been adopted as a punishment in France by Louis XI. The wholesale drownings of the royalists in the Loire at Nantes, by command of the brutal Carrier, Nov. 1793, were termed Noyades. 94 priests were drowned at one time. He was condemned to death in Dec. 1794. Societies for the recovery of drowning persons were first instituted in Holland, in 1767. The second society is said to have been formed at Milan, in 1768; the third in Hamburg, in 1771; the fourth at Paris, in 1772; and the fifth in London, in 1774. The motto of the Royal Humane Society in England is: Lateat scintillula forsan—"A small spark may perhaps lie hid." François Texier, of Dunkerque, after saving 50 lives at different times, was drowned in a storm, Oct. 1871.

DRUCE CASE, see Trials 1908.

DRUGS, sales regulated by Sale of Food and Drugs Act, passed 11 Aug. 1875. See Pharmacy.

DRUIDS. Priests, among the ancient Germans, Gauls, and Britons, so named from their veneration for the oak (Brit. deriv.) They administered sacred things, were the interpreters of the gods, and supreme judges. They headed the Britons who opposed Caesar's first landing, 55 B.C., and were exterminated by the Roman governor, Suetonius Paulinus, A.D. 61.

DRUM. It was used by the Egyptians and other ancient nations; and brought by the Moors into Spain. The drum, or drum capstan, for weighing anchors, was invented by sir S. Morland, in 1685. Anderson.

DRUMCLOG (W. Scotland). Here the covenanters defeated Graham of Claverhouse, on 1 June, 1679. An account of the conflict is given by Walter Scott, in "Old Mortality."

DRUMMOND CASTLE, Castle Line steamer, Donald Currie co., from the Cape and Natal, struck on the Pierres Vertes, Molène island, off Ushant, abt. midnight, 16 June, 1896, Captain W. Pierce, 103 of the crew, and 147 passengers drowned. Perfect order and much heroism were displayed during this great calamity. Mr. Marquardt, passenger, and 2 sailors were saved by 3 Breton fishermen. Much humanity was shown by the natives of Ushant, Molène and neighbourhood in regard to the burials and the relatives of the sufferers; total, 25,400*l.*, 3 May, 1897. Board of trade inquiry, calamity attributed to neglect of precautions, 27 July. Waterworks to be built in Molène, and a church clock and steeple at Ushant, with 1,600*l.* subscribed in England to commemorate French sympathy; reported 24 Jan. 1897. Silver medals distributed by sir Edmund Monson to 247 persons at Brest, 27, 29 April; others awarded by queen Victoria June, 1897. 5,000 francs subscribed by the English for a harbour at Port Sall, Finistère; announced 13 March, 1898.

DRUMMOND LIGHT; see Lime-light.

DRUNKARDS were to be excommunicated in the early church, 59 (1 Cor. v. 11). In England, a canon law forbade drunkenness in the clergy, 747. Constantine, king of Scots, punished it with death, 870. By 21 James I., c. 7, 1623, a drunkard was liable to a penalty of five shillings, or six hours in the stocks. See Temperance, Tee-totaler and Black List.

Mr. Wilson estimates the total expenditure in the United Kingdom on alcoholic liquors to be—1908, 161,060,482l.; 1909, 155,162,489l. (the decrease of 5,897,997l. in expenditure would have been 11,147,097l. had there not been the increase in prices owing to the budget of 1909). Three special causes contributed to reduce the consumption of alcoholic liquors. Two are mentioned in the parliamentary paper [No. 115] issued 1909. "The diminishing consumption of alcoholic liquors, though to some extent attributable to the recent depression in trade, is principally the result of a continuous change in the habits of the people, which has been in progress for some time, and seems likely to be permanent." The third is the increased price of spirits, which has been the chief factor in causing the enormous reduction of over 7,000,000 gallons in the quantity of spirits consumed.

Quantity of spirits consumed in the United Kingdom—1908, 38,133,721 gals.; 1909, 31,110,946 gals.

See Black List.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE derives its origin from a cock-pit, which was converted into a theatre in the reign of James I. It was rebuilt and called the Phoenix; and Charles II. granted an exclusive patent to Thomas Killigrew, 25 April, 1662. The actors were called "the king's servants," and ten of them, called gentlemen of the great chamber, had an annual allowance of ten yards of scarlet cloth, with lace; see under Theatres. Drury-lane Theatrical Fund, established, 1766.

Drury-lane theatre burnt, Jan. 1672 and 14 Feb. 1809, and the stage on 25 March, 1908.

DRUSES, a warlike people dwelling among the mountains of Lebanon, derive their origin from a fanatical Mahometan sect which arose in Egypt about 996, and fled to Palestine to avoid persecution. They now retain hardly any of the religion of their ancestors: they eat pork and drink wine, and do not practise circumcision, pray, or fast. In the middle of 1860, in consequence of disputes (in which doubtless both parties were to blame), the Druses attacked their neighbours the Maronites (which see), whom they massacred, it was said, without regard to age or sex. Peace was made in July; but in the meantime a religious fury seized the Mahometan population of the neighbouring cities, and a general massacre of Christians ensued. Fuad Pasha with Turkish troops, and general Hautpoul with French auxiliaries, invaded Lebanon in Aug. and Sept. The Druses surrendered, giving up their chiefs, Jan. 1861. See Damascus and Syria.

DUALIN, an explosive substance (said to be from four to ten times more powerful than gunpowder, composed of varying proportions of cellulose (woody fibre), nitro-starch, nitro-mannite, and nitro-cellulose; invented by Carl Ditmar, a Prussian, and made known in 1870. This name is also given to another explosive compound, invented by Mr. Nobel, composed of ammonia and sawdust, acted on by nitro-sulphuric acid.

DUALISM, a term applied to the equally-matched conflicting powers of good and evil in the Persian mythology, the Ormuzd and Ahriman of Zoroaster: is also applied to the principles of the advocates for a separate government of Hungary under the emperor of Austria; effected in 1867.

DUBLIN, capital of Ireland, anciently called Ashled, said to have been built 140. Auliana, daughter of Alpinus, a lord or chief among the Irish, having been drowned at the ford where now Whitworth-bridge is built, he changed the name to Auliana, by Ptolemy called Eblana (afterwards corrupted into Dublana). Alpinus is said to have brought "the then rude hill into the form of a town," about 155; see Ireland and Trinity Colleges. Dublin returns 4 M.P.'s by Act passed 25 June, 1885. Population, 1901, 289,108; 1910 (est.) 338,435.

DUBLIN, ARCHBISHOPRIC OF. It is supposed that the bishopric of Dublin was founded by St. Patrick, in 448. Gregory, bishop in 1121, became archbishop in 1152. It was united to Glendalagh in 1214. George Browne, an Augustine friar of London (deprived by queen Mary in 1554), was the first Protestant archbishop. Dublin has two cathedrals, St. Patrick's, said to have been founded 1190, restored 1865; Christ Church, built about 1038, made a cathedral in 1541. The revenue was valued, in the king's books, 30 Henry VIII., at 534*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* Irish. Kildare, on its last avoidance, was annexed to Dublin, 1846; recent protestant archbishops: Richard Whately, 1831, dies 8 Oct. 1863; Richard Chenevix Trench, Nov. 1863, resigns 28 Nov. 1884 (dies 28 March, 1886); Wm. Conyngham, lord Plunket, 18 Dec. 1884, dies 1 April, 1897; succeeded by Dr. J. F. Peacocke, 17 June, 1897. See Bishops. For R.C. abps. see Dublin.

DUDLEY GALLERY. The exhibition held since 1865 in the Egyptian Hall was removed to a new building in Piccadilly, under the direction of the Dudley Gallery Art Society, established in 1883.

DUELLING took its rise from the judicial combats of the Celtic nations. The first formal duel in England, between William count of Eu and Godfrey Baynard, took place 1096. Duelling in civil matters was forbidden in France, 1305. Francis I. challenged the emperor Charles V. 1528 without effect. The fight with small swords was introduced into England, 1587. Proclamation that no person should be pardoned who killed another in a duel, 1679.* Duelling was checked in the army, 1792; and was abolished in England, by the influence of public opinion. A society "for the discouraging of duelling" was established in 1845. "The British Code of Duel," published in 1824, was approved by the duke of Wellington and others. See Battle, Wager of, Combat, and Jarnac.

DULWICH COLLEGE (Surrey), called "God's-gift college, founded by Edward Alleyn, an eminent comedian, was completed and solemnly opened 13 Sept. 1619. Alleyn was its first master, and died in 1626. In 1686 Wm. Cartwright, an actor, gave a library and some portraits, and on 20 Dec. 1810 sir Francis Bourgeois bequeathed his collection of pictures, the gallery for which was erected by sir John Soane, and opened in 1812. Sir Francis died 8 Jan. 1811. In 1857, an act was passed by which the college was reconstituted. Two schools were established, and the number of the almspeople increased. The annual income, about 20,000*l.*, is derived from Dulwich manor. The new school buildings, founded 26 June, 1866, were opened by the prince of Wales, 21 June, 1870. The Endowed Schools Commissioners put forth a draft scheme for remodelling the charity about Oct. 1872; and another scheme was approved 18 Aug. 1882. Four parishes are benefitted by the charity, St. Luke's, Middlesex; St.

Botolph's, Bishopsgate; St. Saviour's, Southwark; and St. Giles's, Camberwell. Dulwich Park, 72 acres, presented to the public by the governors of the college, opened by the earl of Rosebery, 26 June,

The walls and fortifications of Dundalk were destroyed in 1641. It was taken by Cromwell in 1649. The first cambric manufacture in Ireland was established in this town by artisans from France in 1727. Population, 1901, 14,308; 1910
(est.), 15,738.

DUNDEE (E. Scotland), on the Tay. The site was given by William the Lion (reigned 1165—1214) to his brother David, earl of Huntingdon, who built or strengthened the castle, and erected a large church, the tower of which, 156 feet high, still remains. Charter granted by Robert I. 1327.
The town was taken by the English in 1385; pillaged by Montrose, 1645; stormed by Monk in 1651; and visited by queen Victoria in 1844. It has thriven since 1815, through its extensive linen manufactories; at one of these (Edwards's) a steam explosion took place on 15 April, 1859, when twenty persons were killed. Claverhouse, viscount Dundee (killed 1689), had a house here. See

DUNGAN-HILL (Ireland). Here the English army, commanded by colonel Jones, signally defeated the Irish, of whom 6000 are said to have been slain, while the loss on the side of the English was inconsiderable, 8 Aug. 1647.

DUNKELD (Perthshire) was made a bishopric by David I. about 1127; the ancient Culdee church, founded by king Constantine III., becoming the cathedral. The beautiful bridge over the Tay, erected by Thomas Telford, was opened in 1809.

DUNKIRK (N. France), founded in the 7th century, was taken by the Spaniards, Sept. 1652, and retaken from them by the English and French after Turenne's victory over them under Condé on the dunes (or sands), 14 June, 1658, and put into the hands of the English, 25 June following. It was sold by Charles II. for 500,000*l.* to Louis XIV., 17 Oct.; restored 1662, and was one of the best fortified ports in the kingdom; but the works were demolished in conformity with the treaty of Utrecht in 1713. The works were ordered to be demolished at the peace of 1763; but in 1783 they were again resumed. The English besieged Dunkirk; the duke of York, defeated by Hoche, retired with loss, 7 Sept. 1793. It was made a free port in 1816. Large dock works constructed in 7 years, inaugurated; 13 Sept. 1896. Pres. Loubet opens a new town-hall, 17 Sept. 1901; receives the czar and czarina, 18 Sept. 1901. DUNMOW (Essex), famous for the custom of awarding a fitch of bacon to couples who for a year and a day had had no difference, and had not wished themselves unwed.

It is mentioned in "Chaucer." Its origin is unknown, but it was associated in some way with Dunmow Priory, the remains of which are now built into Little Dunmow church.

The earliest recorded claim for the bacon was in 1445. Three claims are found in the books of the Priory, and three in the records of the lord of the manor.

The last legitimate claimant was John Shakeshaft, 1751. In 1851 an award was made by public subscription.

Harrison Ainsworth's "Fitch of Bacon" was published in 1854, and in 1855 and 1857 fitches given by the novelist were awarded.

Awards by local committees have been made on 21 occasions since, the last being in 1902.

All the data in relation to the custom are considered in "The Strange Story of the Dunmow Fitch" (1909).

DUNSE (S. Scotland). Here on 18 June, 1639, by treaty between the Scots commission and Charles I., their demands were acceded to, and they agreed to disband their army. Disputes arose, and the treaty was not carried into effect.

DUNSINANE (Perthshire). On the hill was fought the battle between king Macbeth formerly the thane of Glamis, and Siward, earl of Northumberland, 27 July, 1054. Edward the Confessor had sent Siward on behalf of Malcolm III., whose father Duncan, the usurper had murdered. Macbeth was defeated, and it was said was pursued to Lumphannan, in Aberdeenshire, and there slain, 1056 or 1057.

DURBAN, the seaport of the colony of Natal, and during the S. African war of 1899-1902 the port of entry for British troops and supplies. It was originally laid out by the Dutch, and since 1842, when the British took possession of the colony, has been greatly improved. The government railway runs to Pietermaritzburg, and an extension to Johannesburg and the Transvaal was completed in 1895. The inner harbour of 4,700 acres was made accessible to vessels of deep draught, by extensive works carried out 1883-95. The bar which formerly prevented large vessels from entering the harbour is now (1905) in process of being removed. The principal residential part of Durban is the hilly district near the town called the Berea, with which it is connected by a series of tramways. Durban has numerous public buildings, including a town hall, museum, library, and theatre, and there are also public parks, and botanical and town gardens. New floating dock 1903. Population 1904, 69,903; estimated 1908, 60,250.

DURHAM, an ancient city, the Dunholme of the Saxons, and Durême of the Normans. The BISHOPRIC was removed to Durham from Chester-le-street in 995; whither it had been transferred from Lindisfarne, or Holy Island, on the coast of Northumberland, in 875, in consequence of the invasion of the Danes. The bones of St. Cuthbert, the sixth bishop, were brought from Lindisfarne, and enshrined in a church erected by bp. Aldune in 995, on the site of which the present cathedral was begun by bp. Wm. Abbot of St. Carilef, about 1093, and the work was continued by his successors till 1500. This see, deemed the richest in England, was valued in the king's books DUST. A controversy respecting the connection between dust and disease originated with a lecture on the subject by professor Tyndall at the Royal Institution, 21 Jan. 1870, when he demonstrated the presence of organic matters in the dust of the atmosphere in conformity with the experiments of Pasteur and other eminent philosophers. See Germ Theory and Vivisection. The agency of dust in promoting fires and explosions was asserted by Faraday in relation to coal mines in 1845, and by Rankine and Macadam in relation to flour mills in 1872. Professor F. A. Abel's discourse on Some of the Dangerous Properties of Dusts, 28 April, 1882. Mr. Aitken's dust-counting apparatus was set up on Ben Nevis, Feb. 1890.

DUUMVIRI, two Roman patricians appointed by Tarquin the Proud 520 B.C. to take care of the books of the Sibyls, which were supposed to contain the fate of the Roman empire. The books were placed in the Capitol, and secured in a chest under the ground. The number of keepers was increased to ten (the Decemviri) 365 B.C., afterwards to fifteen, the added five called quinque viri.

DWARFS, OR PIGMIES, are described by several ancient classical writers. Herodotus gives an account of a race of pigmies living in Libya and the Syrtis, to which Aristotle and Pliny also refer. Mr. H. M. Stanley (afterwards sir), in his journey across Africa in 1888, came upon a dwarfish race, which he thought might be descended from that mentioned by Herodotus. Mr. Arthur B. Lloyd crosses the great pigmy forest and descends the Aruwimi to the Congo, Sept.-Nov. 1898. "The Land of the Pigmies," by capt. Guy Burrows, published Jan. 1899. Philetas of Cos, distinguished about 330 B.C. as a poet and grammarian, was jocularly said to have carried weights to prevent his being blown away. He was preceptor to Ptolemy Philadelphus. Ælian. Julia, niece of Augustus, had a dwarf named Coropas, two feet and a hand's-breadth high; and Andromeda, a freed-maid of Julia's, was of the same height. Pliny.

MODERN DWARFS.—John d'Estrix, of Mechlin, was brought to the duke of Parma, in 1592, when he was 35 years of age, having a long beard. He was skilled in languages, and not more than three feet high.

Geoffrey Hudson, an English dwarf, when a youth of 18 inches high, was served up to table in a cold pie, before the king and queen, by the duchess of Buckingham, in 1626. He challenged Mr. Crofts to fight a duel, but the latter came armed with a squirt. At another meeting the dwarf shot his antagonist dead, 1653.

Count Borowlaski, a Polish gentleman, of great accomplishments and elegant manners, well known in England, where he resided for many years, was born in Nov. 1739. His growth was at one year of age, 14 inches; at six, 17 inches; at twenty, 33 inches; and at thirty, 39. He had a sister, named Anastasia, seven years younger than himself, and so much shorter that she could stand under his arm. He visited many of the courts of Europe, and died in England in 1837.

Charles Heywood Stratton (termed general Tom Thumb), an American, was exhibited in England, by Mr. P. T. Barnum, 1846. In Feb. 1863, in New York, when 25 years old and 31 inches high, he married Lavinia Warren, aged 21, 32 inches high. He, his wife and child, and commodore Nutt, another dwarf, came to England in Dec. 1864, and remained here some time. Died 15 July, 1883.

Mr. Collard, aged 22, smaller than Stratton, sang at concerts in London, and was termed the "Pocket Sims Reeves," May, June, 1873.

Several dwarfs (said to be smaller than the preceding) exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, July, 1878.

Che-mah, a Chinese, 42 years old, 25 inches high, exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, 11 June, 1880.

Lucia Zarate, born 2 Jan. 1863, in Mexico, weight 4½ lbs., and general Mite, Francis Joseph Flynn, born 2 Oct. 1864, in New York State, height 21 inches, weight 9 lbs., were both exhibited in Piccadilly, 22 Nov. 1880, et seq. Milly Edwards exhibited in London, July, 1882, 15 years of age, weighing 7 lbs.; Miss Edwards and "general Mite" were married at Manchester, 28 May, 1884.

"Princess Topaze," of French parentage, born at Buenos Ayres, stated to be 16 years old, to weigh 15 lbs., height 20 inches, with symmetrical proportions, exhibited at the Westminster aquarium, 30 Jan. et seq. 1893.

Six specimens of the negritos, or dwarf negroes (rediscovered by Stanley in the forests of the Congo tributaries), 4 men, 2 women, from 18 to 35 years of age, height of the tallest 5 ft., of the shortest 3 ft., brought from the Ituri forest in the Congo Free State by Mr. Jas. Harrison, were exhibited at the Hippodrome, London, 5 June, 1905.

Tiny Town, exhibition of a number of dwarfs opened at Earl's Court . . . 26 Dec. 1909

DYEING is attributed to the Tyrians, about 1500 B.C. The English are said to have sent fine goods to be dyed in Holland, till the art was brought to them probably in 1608. "Two dyers of Exeter were flogged for teaching their art in the north" (of England), 1628. A statute against abuses in dyeing passed in 1783. The art has been greatly improved by chemical research. A discovery of Dr. Stenhouse in 1848 led to M. Marnas procuring mauve from lichens; and Dr. Hofmann's production of aniline from coal-tar, led to the invention of a number of beautiful dyes (mauve, magenta, red, green, black, &c.); see Aniline.

DYNAMICS is the science which treats of matter and motion, substituted for the term "mechanics," which see.

DYNAMITE, an explosive compound, consisting of 25 parts of silicious earth saturated with 75 parts of nitro-glycerine (which see). It is suitable for mining purposes, and was tried and approved at Merstham 14 July, 1868. It was invented by Alfred Nobel. Its manufacture is very dangerous. Mr. Nobel died, 10 Dec. 1896, and bequeathed a fund of about 454,000/1. to promote science. A preparation called "Safety" Dynamite, invented by Herr von Dahnem, who by the addition of a simple substance renders dynamite unmanageable, thus avoiding the danger of thawing in cold weather, 1889. Dynamite which cannot be frozen, invented by Herr Edward Liebert, of Berlin (very important, many deaths having been caused by thawing frozen dynamite), reported Aug. 1890. See New York, 28 Dec. 1892; Cannon, 1891; and Nobel Bequest.

Snyder dynamite projectile; experiments at Aberdare, S. Wales; British and foreign officers present; reported fairly successful; 5 Oct. 1891.

Thirteen men killed by explosion of dynamite in a railway tunnel at Cymmer, S. Wales, 21 April, 1876.

A man named Thomson, Thomassin, or Thomas, consigned a cask of dynamite to Bremerhaven, to be conveyed by the North German Lloyd steamer Mosel. With it he sent a clock-work machine, which would in eight days give the cask a blow powerful enough to explode the dynamite and destroy the ship. From some cause the machine went off and exploded in the dock, killing above 80 and wounding about 200 persons, chiefly emigrants and their friends, 11 Dec. 1875. Thomson committed suicide, dying 16 Dec. 1875, after confessing his crime, his object being to obtain the paltry sum for which he had insured his goods.

Use of dynamite for killing oxen tried and advocated, summer, 1877.

Its use in fisheries prohibited by parliament, 14 Aug. 1877.

A parcel containing 27 cartridges of dynamite placed on the London and N. W. Railway, between Bushey and Watford (perpetrators not discovered), night 12-13 Sept. 1880.

Failure of attempt at explosion at the Times office, 15 Mar. 1883.

Thomas Callan, alias Scott, of Lowell, Massachusetts, and Michael Harkins, of Philadelphia, both residing in Islington, charged with conspiring together to cause a dynamite explosion, a large quantity of dynamite having been found in their dwellings in Islington 21 Nov.; committed 19 Dec. (Cohen, a co-conspirator died 19 Oct.) 1887; as secondaries sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude 1-3 Feb. 1888.

DZOUNGARIA, a region of Central Asia, N. of China, with about 2,000,000 inhabitants, fierce, warlike Mahometans. After being long tributary to China, they rebelled in 1864; massacred the Chinese residents, and set up their countryman Abel Oghlan as sultan. As he was unable to restrain predatory attacks upon the Russians, the czar declared war in April, 1871. After a brief campaign in May and June, and several conflicts in which the Russians were victors, the sultan surrendered to general Kolpakoviski, 4 July, and the country was annexed to the Russian empire.

E.

EAGLE, an ancient coin of Ireland, made of a base metal, and current in the first years of Edward I. about 1272, was so named from the figure impressed upon it. The American gold coinage of eagles, half eagles, and quarter eagles, began 6 Dec. 1792; an eagle is of the value of 10 dollars, or about 2*l.* 1*s.*—The standard of the eagle was borne by the Persians, at Cunaxa, 401 B.C. The Romans carried gold and silver eagles as ensigns, and sometimes represented them with a thunderbolt in their talons, on the point of a spear, 102 B.C. Charlemagne added the second head to the eagle for his arms, to denote that the empires of Rome and Germany were united in him, A.D. 802. The eagle was the standard of Napoleon I. and Napoleon III.; as well as of Austria, Russia, and Prussia; see Knighthood.

EARL (Latin, comes), introduced at the conquest, superseded the Saxon ealdorman, and continued the highest rank in England, until Edward III. created dukes in 1337 and 1351, and Richard II. created marquises (1385), both above earls. Alfred used the title of earl as a substitute for king. William Fitz-Osborn was made earl of Hereford by William the Conqueror, 1066. Gilbert was created earl of Angus, in Scotland, by king Malcolm III. in 1037, and sir John de Courcy created baron of Kingsale and earl of Ulster in Ireland, by Henry II. 1181.

EARL MARSHAL of England, the eighth great officer of state. This office, until it was made hereditary, always passed by grant from the king. Gilbert de Clare was created lord marshal by king Stephen, 1135. The last lord marshal was John Fitz-Alan, lord Maltravers. Camden. Richard II. in 1397 granted letters patent to the earl of Nottingham by the style of earl marshal. In 1672, Charles II. granted to Henry lord Howard the dignity of hereditary earl marshal. The earl marshal's court was abolished in 1641. (See Howard.)

EARL MARISCHAL of Scotland was an officer who commanded the cavalry, whereas the constable commanded the whole army; but they seem to have had a joint command, as all orders were addressed to "our constable and marischal." The office was never out of the Keith family. It was reserved at the Union, and when the heritable jurisdictions were bought, it reverted to the crown, being forfeited by the rebellion of George Keith, earl marischal, in 1715.

EARLY CLOSING ASSOCIATION established 1842, to abridge the hours of labour, and to abolish Sunday trading.

Sir John Lubbock's Early Closing Bill for shops (8 p.m. and 10 p.m. on Saturdays) rejected by the commons (278-95), 2 May, 1888.

Shop Hours Act, 1904, providing for the early closing of shops, by "closing order" under the local authority and confirmed by the central authority, royal assent, 15 Aug. 1904.

EARTHQUAKES. Kircher, Des Cartes, and others supposed that there were many vast cavities under ground which have a communication with each other, some of which abound with water, others with exhalations, arising from inflammable substances, as nitre, bitumen, sulphur, &c. Dr. Stukeley and Dr. Priestley attributed earthquakes to electricity. They are probably due to steam generated by subterranean heat. An elaborate Catalogue of earthquakes (from B.C. 1606 to A.D. 1842), with commentaries on the phenomena, by R. and J. W. Mallet, was published by the British Association in 1858. In 1860 the velocity of their propagation was estimated by Mr. J. Brown at between 470 and 530 feet per second.* Prof. John Milne, at the Royal Institution, London, 12 Feb. 1897, described his important researches in seismology, with special reference to Japan; his "Seismology" published Nov. 1898. See Seismometer.

EASTER, instituted about 68, the festival observed by the church in commemoration of Our Saviour's resurrection, so called in England from the Saxon goddess Eostre, whose festival was in April. There was much disputing in the early church as to whether Easter should be kept at the time of the Paschal full moon (the Jewish passover) or on the following Sunday. The council of Nice, 325, decided that it should always be kept on the Sunday, and those who kept it on the passover (the fourteenth day of the month) were afterwards called Quartodecimani. The Paschal full moon (that following the vernal equinox) was determined by the metonic cycle of 19 years. But the date of the equinox changed in course of time because the Julian calendar year was a little longer than the true year. In 1582 Pope Gregory XIII. altered this calendar, and the Gregorian rule was gradually adopted throughout the western church. But the Greek church or eastern church adhered to the old style of the calendar, and therefore their Easter is usually on a different day from that of the western church. In 1906 it fell actually though not nominally on the same day, because their April 2 corresponded to our April 15. "Easter-day is the Sunday following that fourteenth day of the calendar moon which happens upon or next after the 21st March: so that, if the said fourteenth day be a Sunday, Easter-day is not that Sunday but the next." Easter-day may be any day of the five weeks which commence with March 22 and end with April 25. Easter Sunday, 1908, 19 April; 1909, 11 April; 1910, 27 March; 1911, 16 April.

EASTER ISLAND, in the Pacific Ocean, was discovered by Davis in 1686; it was visited by Roggewein, April 1722, and from him obtained the name it now bears; it was visited by captain Cook, March 1774. At the south-east extremity is the crater of an extinguished volcano, about two miles in circuit and 800 feet deep.

EASTERN BENGAL AND ASSAM. This province was formed by the addition to Assam of 15 districts of Bengal, and was placed under a lieut.-gov. with a legislative council, 1905. Under the Indian Councils Act, this council has 43 members, partly elected and partly nominated; reconstructed area about 106,250 sq. miles; population about 30,975,000. Chief city, Decca. Pop. 90,500. Lieut.-Gov. sir Lancelot Hare (Aug. 1906). See Assam and Bengal.

EASTERN QUESTION. In the 19th century related especially to the affairs of the Turkish empire and its connection with its neighbours; see Turkey and Russo-Turkish wars. An Eastern Question association was formed in London, Dec. 1876, the duke of Westminster president. The eastern question became again prominent through the troubles in the Balkan, see Bulgaria and Servia, 1889-92. Armenia and Turkey, 1893 et seq. Crete, 1896-97. Macedonia, 1903.

EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION, for the advocacy of the interests of all the inhabitants of India, founded 7 Nov. 1866. A journal is published and meetings held. The maharaja of Gwalior gives 1,000*l.* to the association, Aug. 1902.

EAST INDIA STOCK DIVIDEND REDEMPTION ACT passed 15 May, 1873. It finally abolished the company on 1 June, 1874, and made needful arrangements.

EAST INDIES, see India.

EBELIANS, a German revivalist sect, which began at Königsberg in Prussia, about 1836, its leaders being archdeacon Ebel and Dr. Diestel, who were tried and condemned for unsound doctrine and impure lives in 1839. The sentence was annulled in 1842, it is said by royal influence. The sect is popularly termed "Mucker," German for hypocrites.

EBIONITES, heretics, in the 1st century, a branch of the Nazarenes, were of two kinds: one believed that Our Saviour was born of a virgin, observed all the precepts of the Christian religion, but added the ceremonies of the Jews; the other believed that Christ was born after the manner of all mankind, and denied his divinity. Photinus revived the sect in 342.

EBONITE (vulcanised india-rubber), see Caoutchouc.

EBRO, a river in Spain—the scene of a signal defeat of the Spaniards by the French, under Lannes, near Tudela, 23 Nov. 1808; and also of several important movements of the allied British and Spanish armies during the Peninsular war (1809–1813).

ECBATANA, capital of Media; the date of foundation is unknown; Herodotus ascribes it to Deioceas about 700 B.C.; it was taken by Cyrus 549, and became the summer residence of himself and his successors.

"ECCE HOMO," "Behold the man" (John xix. 5). A study of the human character of Jesus Christ (the supernatural element being excluded), a work of much spiritual reverence and literary excellence. It was published anonymously in 1865, and caused great excitement; the authorship was attributed to many eminent persons, but eventually assigned to prof. John Robert Seeley, without his contradiction. He was made Regius professor of modern history at Cambridge in 1869, and K.C.M.G. in 1894; born 1834, died 13 Jan. 1895.

ECCLESIASTICAL ASSESSMENTS (Scotland) act passed, 1900.

ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONS: appointed by queen Elizabeth, 1559; by James I. in Scotland, 1617; by the English parliament in 1641; and by James II. to coerce the universities in 1687. A Church Inquiry Commission, appointed 23 June, 1832, reported June, 1835. The present Ecclesiastical Commissioners (bishops, deans, and laymen), for the management of church property, were appointed in Feb. 1835; incorporated in 1836; and their proceedings regulated in 1840 and 1841. The law relating to them was amended in 1868; annual reports issued. Since 1840 (when the common fund was first created) the commissioners have augmented and endowed over 5,900 benefices by annual grants, capital sums, lands, &c., equivalent to a capital sum of about 32,188,000*l.* for year ended 31 Oct. 1902.

Fifty-eighth annual report, presented to parliament, shows total income for the year ended 31 Oct. 1905, 1,585,000*l.*; expenditure, 1,191,000*l.*; appropriation for current year, for the endowment and augmentation of benefices, to be increased from 250,000*l.* to 300,000*l.* 2 March, 1906

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS. There existed no distinction between lay and ecclesiastical courts in England until 1085, after the Norman conquest; see Arches and Consistory Courts. Till the establishment of the Divorce and Probate courts (which see) in 1857, the following were the causes cognisable in ecclesiastical courts: blasphemy, apostasy from Christianity, heresy, schism, ordinations, institutions to benefices, matrimony, divorces, bastardy, tithes, incest, fornication, adultery, probate of wills, administrations, &c.

A royal commission of inquiry respecting these courts agreed to, house of lords; 7 March, 1881, appointed. Report issued, Aug. 1883.

ECCLESIASTICAL DILAPIDATIONS, law respecting, amended by acts passed in 1871 and 1872.

ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, Church of England semi-official journal; sent gratuitously to all dignitaries and incumbents; established 10 July, 1838.

ECCLESIASTICAL STATE, or STATES OF THE CHURCH, see Rome, Modern.

ECCLESIASTICAL TITLES ACT, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 60 (1851), repealed 24 July, 1871; see Papal Aggression.

ECCLESIOLOGICAL SOCIETY, formed in 1839, was originally the Cambridge Campden Society, mainly established by the 2nd earl of Gainsborough (Charles George Noel) for the proper restoration of ancient churches.

ECHO. The time which elapses between the utterance of a sound and its return must be more than one-twelfth of a second, to form an echo. The whispering gallery of St. Paul's is a well-known example. The Echo, independent evening paper, price $\frac{1}{2}$ d., estd. Dec. 1868, ceased 1905.

ECKMUHL (Bavaria), the site of a battle between the main armies of France (75,000) and Austria (40,000); Napoleon and marshal Davoust (hence prince d'Eckmühl) defeated the archduke Charles, 22 April, 1809.

ECLECTICS (from Greek, eklego, I choose), ancient philosophers (called Analogetici, and also Philalethes, the lovers of truth), who, without attaching themselves to any sect, chose what they judged good from each: of them was Potamon of Alexandria, about A.D. 1. Also a Christian sect, who considered the doctrine of Plato conformable to the spirit of Christianity.

ECLIPSES. Their revolution was calculated by Calippus, the Athenian, 336 B.C. The Egyptians said they had accurately observed 373 eclipses of the sun, and 832 of the moon, in the period from Vulcan to Alexander, who died 323 B.C. The theory of eclipses is said to have been known to the Chinese before 120 B.C.; they record an eclipse 776 B.C. The first eclipse recorded in history happened 19 March, 721 B.C., at 8*h.* 40*m.* P.M., according to Ptolemy; it was lunar, and was observed with accuracy at Babylon. See Sun.

The Royal Astronomical Society published a volume of "Observations made during total solar eclipses," 1880.

ECLIPSES OF THE SUN.

Eclipse recorded in the Assyrian tablets	B.C. 1063
The Nineveh eclipse (recorded, according to sir Henry Rawlinson, on a Nineveh tablet in the British Museum)	15 June, B.C. 763
That predicted by Thales; see Halys (Pliny, lib. ii. 9) , believed to have occurred	28 May, 585
[Sir G. B. Airy thinks the date should be 610; others say 603 or 584 B.C. It is the one recorded by Herodotus as interrupting a battle between the Medes and Lydians.]
The alleged eclipse at the time of Xerxes' expedition against Greece, 480 B.C., is much disputed, and the darkness was probably meteorological.
One at Athens (Thucydides, lib. iv.)	B.C. 424
Eclipse of Agathocles (Airy)	15 Aug. 310
Total one: three days' supplication decreed at Rome (Livy)	188
One observed at Constantinople	A.D. 968
At the battle of Sticklestadt	29 July, 1030
Mythical reports: in France, when it was dark at noon-day (Du Fresnoy), 29 June, 1033; in England a total darkness (W. Malmsb.), 20 Mar. 1140; again, the stars visible at ten in the morning (Camden)	23 June, 1191
Total eclipse, visible in England; the darkness so great that the stars shone, and the birds went to roost at noon	3 May, 1715
Last total eclipse observed in England; seen near Salisbury	22 May, 1724
Remarkable one, central and annular in the interior of Europe	7 Sept. 1802
Total eclipses—17 July, 1833; 8 July, 1842; 28 July, 1851.
An annular eclipse; it was seen and photographed at Oundle; but not seen well at other places	15 March, 1858
Total eclipse of the sun; well seen by sir G. B. Airy, astronomer royal, and others in Spain; Mr. Warren de la Rue took photographs, 18 July, 1860

Total eclipse of the sun of the longest possible duration (the Royal Society provided means for its observation in India, by col. Walker, Mr. Herschel, and others) . . . 18 Aug. 1868

During the solar eclipse, 18 Aug. 1868, as observed in India, M. Janssen invented a method of studying the phenomena of the sun at any time, by employing several spectroscopes, whereby the spectrum is lengthened and the dazzling brilliancy diminished. Mr. (aft. sir) Joseph Norman Lockyer had suggested a similar method of observation in 1866, but did not use it till 20 Oct. 1868, being then not aware of M. Janssen's discovery.

The solar eclipse well observed in North America, . . . 7 Aug. 1869

Two expeditions to observe the solar eclipse of 22 Dec. 1870, sent out by the British government, were not successful . . . 22 Dec. 1870

The solar eclipse well observed at Ceylon and in southern India, 12 Dec. 1871; and in North America, 29, 30 July, 1878; and in Egypt 17 May, 1882 [The same eclipses (about 70) recur in a period of 18 years 10½ days.]

Except the total eclipse, 12 Aug. 1909, there can be no total eclipse of the sun visible in England for 250 years: July, 1871. Hind.

Grand eclipse, well seen by astronomers at Caroline island, &c., Pacific . . . 6 May, 1883

Eclipse of the sun well seen in North America, &c., 16 March; seen in New Zealand . . . 8 Sept. 1885

Solar eclipse 29 August, 1886; British expedition to island of Grenada (West Indies) authorized by Government April; eclipse well observed and photographed at Grenada . . . 1886

Eclipse of 19 Aug. not well observed through unfavourable weather, except at Moscow and other places in Russia and Germany . . . 1887

ECOLE POLYTECHNIQUE, a military academy at Paris, established in 1794, and reorganised and given its present name on 1 Sept. 1795. The "Journal" (which began in 1795) contains profound mathematical papers. The school was reorganised 4 Sept. 1816. The pupils helped to defend Paris in 1814 and 1830. Centenary festival, 17, 18, 19 May, 1894.

ECONOMIC MUSEUM (or Museum of Domestic and Sanitary Economy), at Twickenham, open free, was established chiefly by the agency of Mr. Thos. Twining, in 1860. It originated from the Paris exhibition of 1855. Economic Review, No. 1, published Jan. 1891.

ECONOMIST, London weekly journal, devoted to financial matters, first appeared 2 Sept. 1843.

ECONOMISTES, a philosophical sect, founded by François Quesnay (1694–1774), who exalted agriculture above all other arts; he asserted that it gave two things, the support of the labourer and an excess of value which belonged to the proprietor of the land ("product net"), and which alone should be taxed. He also favoured great freedom for industry and trade. His "Physiocratie" (1768) and other works were at the time very popular, even at court, and are said to have influenced Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations."

ECONOMY, see Political Economy and Societies, 1902.

The British Association for the Advancement of Economic Knowledge was founded 20 Nov. Mr. (aft. visct.) G. J. Goschen elected first president, 23 Nov. 1890. A quarterly journal was founded . . . 1893

ECORCHEURS (Flayers), bands of armed adventurers who desolated France and Belgium during the 15th century, beginning about 1435. Amongst their leaders were Chabannes, comte de Dammartin, the bastard of Armagnac, and Vil-landras; and they at one time numbered 100,000. They are said to have stripped their victims to their shirts, and flayed the cattle. They were favoured by the English invasion and the civil wars.

ECRASITE, an explosive invented by Siersch and Kubin, Austrian engineers, impervious to damp, shock, or fire, Oct. 1889.

ECUADOR, see Equator.

EDDAS (thought formerly to mean Oldemoder, or "mother of mothers," by others, "art"), two books of songs and sagas (prose and verse) containing the Scandinavian mythology (or history of Odin, Thor, Frea, &c.), written by skalds or bards about the 10th, 11th or 12th centuries. Translations have been made into French, English, &c. MSS. of the Eddas exist at Copenhagen and Upsal.

EDDYSTONE (or EDYSTONE) LIGHTHOUSE, off the port of Plymouth, erected by the Trinity House to enable ships to avoid the Eddystone rock. The first lighthouse was commenced under Mr. Winstanley, in 1696; finished in 1699; and destroyed in the dreadful tempest of 27 Nov. 1703, when Mr. Winstanley and others perished. A wooden one, by Rudyerd, was built by order of parliament, and all ships were ordered to pay one penny per ton inwards and outwards towards supporting it, 1708. This lighthouse was burnt 4 Dec. 1755; and one on a better plan, erected by Mr. Smeaton, finished 9 Oct. 1759. The woodwork of this, burnt in 1770, was replaced by stone.

The foundation having given way, a new one was designed by Mr. (aft. sir) James N. Douglass, engineer of the Trinity House. The foundation-stone was laid by the duke of Edinburgh in the presence of the prince of Wales, 19 Aug. 1879. The corner-stone was placed by the duke on 1 June, 1881. Successfully lit, 3 Feb. 1882; opened by the duke, 18 May, 1882. Smeaton's lighthouse memorial tower erected at Plymouth; founded by duke of Edinburgh, 20 Oct. 1882; inaugurated, 24 Sept. 1884.

EDEN, ship burnt; see Wrecks, 1873.

EDESSA (now Orfah), a town in Mesopotamia, said by some to have been built by Nimrod; by Aprian, to have been built by Seleucus. It became famous for its schools of theology in the 5th century. It was made a principality by the crusaders, and was taken by the Saracens, 1145; by Nur-ed-deen, in 1144; and the Turks in 1184. Its ancient kings or rulers were named Abgarus and Mannus.

EDGEHILL FIGHT (23 Oct. 1642), Warwickshire, between the royalists under prince Rupert and the parliament army under the earl of Essex, was the first important engagement in the civil war. Charles I. was present, and the earl of Lindsay, who headed the royal foot, was mortally wounded. The king lost 5,000 dead. The action was indecisive, though the parliament claimed the victory.

EDICT OF NANTES, by which Henry IV. of France granted toleration to his protestant subjects, 13 April, 1598, was confirmed by Louis XIII. in 1610, and by Louis XIV. in 1652. It was revoked by Louis XIV. 22 Oct. 1685. This act cost France 50,000 Protestant families, and gave to England and Germany thousands of industrious artisans. It also caused a fierce insurrection in Languedoc. See Camisards. Some of the refugees settled in Spitalfields, where their descendants yet remain; others settled in Soho and St. Giles's, and pursued the art of making crystal glasses, and carried on the silk manufacture and jewellery, then little understood in England.

EDICTS, public ordinances and decrees, usually set forth by sovereigns; originated with the Romans. The PERPETUAL EDICT: Salvius Julianus, of Milan, a civilian at Rome (author of several treatises on public right), was employed by the emperor Adrian to draw up this body of laws for the prætors, promulgated 132.

EDINBURGH, the metropolis of Scotland, derives its name—in ancient records Edinbure and Dun Edin, "the hill of Edin"—from its castle, founded or rebuilt by Edwin, king of Northumbria, who, having greatly extended his dominions, erected it for the protection of his newly acquired territories from the incursions of the Scots and Picts, 626. But it is said the castle was first built by Camelon, king of the Picts, 330 B.C. It makes a conspicuous appearance, standing on a rock 300 feet high at the west end of the old town, and, before the use of great guns, was a fortification of considerable strength. Edinburgh returns 4 M.P.'s by act passed 25 June, 1885. "Municipal Edinburgh" (historical and official), published June, 1895. Population 1904, 331,977; 1910 (est.), 356,215.

EDINBURGH, BISHOPRIC OF, was created by Charles I. when in Scotland in 1633; and William Forbes, minister of Edinburgh, first bishop. The king allotted the parishes of the shires of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Haddington, and a part of Berwick and of Stirlingshire, to compose the see. The sixth and last prelate was Alexander Ross, who was ejected on the abolition of episcopacy, at the period of the revolution, in 1689. Edinburgh became a post-revolution bishopric in 1720; see Bishops.

EDINBURGH, DUKE OF, Alfred Ernest, second son of late queen Victoria, born 6 Aug. 1844, created duke of Edinburgh and earl of Kent 24 May, 1866, with an annuity of 15,000*l.*; this annuity he resigned on becoming grand duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, announced Dec. 1893.

The duke was married to Marie Alexandrovna, the grand duchess of Russia, 23 Jan. 1874. [Queen Victoria was empowered by parliament, 5 Aug. 1873, to grant an additional annuity of 10,000*l.* to the duke on his marriage, and an annuity of 6,000*l.* to the grand duchess if she should survive the duke.] For biography and issue, see England, Royal Family; and Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, 1893. He died 6 Feb. 1899; succeeded by his nephew, Charles Edward, son of prince Leopold, 1st duke of Albany; accession on his majority, 19 July, 1905.

EDINBURGH REVIEW published first on 10 Oct. 1802.

EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY. A college was commenced by the town council of Edinburgh, in 1581, for which queen Mary had given the site of ancient religious houses, and Robert Reid, bishop of Orkney, the funds in 1558. The university was chartered 14 April, 1582. On 24 Oct. 1582 the university was chartered by James VI., afterwards James I. of England. The first principal was appointed in 1585. The foundation-stone of additional buildings was laid by Francis, lord Napier, grand-master of the masons of Scotland, 16 Nov. 1789. The constitution of the university was modified by act of parliament in 1858. In 1845, the library contained upwards of 80,000 volumes, besides numerous curious and rare MSS. and documents. Dr. Lyon Playfair elected the first M.P. for Edinburgh and St. Andrews universities in conformity with the act of 1868, 4 Dec. 1868. For our present knowledge of the early history of Egypt we are almost wholly indebted to discoveries in the nineteenth century, and to the interpretation of monumental inscriptions, and the papyri found in the tombs. The most recent investigators are Brugsch Maspero, Lepsius, De Rougé, Mariette, Chabas, Lieblein, Birch, Naville, Le Page, Renouf, Petrie, Davis, and others; A. Erman's "Egyptian Grammar," English translation, by J. H. Breasted, published about July, 1894; "History of Egypt," by W. M. Flinders Petrie, vol. I. 1894; E. A. Wallis Budge's "First steps in Egyptian for beginners," 1896; "History of Egypt under Roman rule," by J. G. Milne, edited by prof. Flinders Petrie, vol. 5 pub. 1899; vol. 7, "Under the Ptolemies," by Dr. Mahaffy, pub. 1899; see Egypt exploration Fund and Rosetta stone, &c. Manetho high-priest of On or Heliopolis in the second century B.C., at the request of king Ptolemy Philadelphus, wrote a history of Egypt, divided into 30 dynasties from Menes to the Persian conquests; of his work lists only have been preserved, by Julius Africanus, a writer who lived about 300 A.D. Eusebius died about 340, Georgius Syncellus, 800.

The fabulous god kings, including the sun god, Osiris god of Hades, and Isis his wife, Typhon, Horus the last, were said to have reigned 13,900 years, the demi-gods and names 4,000 years. See Pharaoh.

EGYPTIAN ERA, &c. The old Egyptian year was identical with the era of Nabonassar, beginning 26 Feb. 747 B.C., and consisted of 365 days only. It was reformed 30 B.C., at which period the commencement of the year had arrived, by continually receding to the 29th Aug., which was determined to be in future the first day of the year. To reduce to the Christian era, subtract 746 years 125 days. The canicular or heliacal period of the Egyptians and Ethiopians (1460 years) began when Sirius or the dog star emerged from the rays of the sun, on 20 July, 2785 B.C., and extended to 1325 B.C. This year comprised 12 months of 30 days, with 5 supplementary days.

EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, erected in 1812 by G. F. Robinson for Bullock's natural history collections, which were sold in 1819; since used for exhibitions, concerts, &c. See Dudley Gallery.

EHRENBREITSTEIN (Honour's broad-stone), a strong Prussian fortress on the Rhine, formerly belonged to the electors of Treves. It was often besieged. It surrendered to the French general Jourdain, 24 Jan. 1799. The fortifications were destroyed on its evacuation, 9 Feb. 1801, at the peace of Luneville. The works have been restored since 1814.

EIDER, a river separating Schleswig from Holstein, was passed by the Austrians and Prussians, 4 Feb. 1864. Eider, German steamer, see Wrecks, 1892.

Eight hours' day demanded by engineers; see Strikes . . . 3 July, et seq. "

Resolution in favour of legislative limitation of labour hours to 8 per day, and making this a test question at all elections passed at Trades Union congress . . . 10 Sept. 1903

Coal mines regulation act 1908 (coal mines eight hours act) came into force (except for the counties of Northumberland and Durham, where it applies on and after 1 Jan. 1910) . . . 1 July, 1909

EIGHTY CLUB. Established in 1880, to promote political education and to stimulate liberal organisation by Mr. Albert Grey, Sir Henry James, and lord Richard Grosvenor. Mr. Gladstone, president, 1887. The club adopted Home Rule, and 80 Liberal Unionists seceded, 18 May, 1887.

EIKŌN BASILIKĒ ("the Portraiture of His Sacred Majesty in his Solitudes and Sufferings"), a book of devotion formerly attributed to king Charles I., but now generally believed to have been written partially, if not wholly, by bishop Gauden, and possibly approved by the king: it was published in 1648-9, and 44 English editions and 10 in foreign languages, printed in 1649; 68 in all up to the present time. By direction of the parliament, Milton published a reply entitled "Iconoclastes," or Image-breaker.

EL ARISCH, Egypt, captured by the French under Reynier, 18 Feb. 1799. A convention was signed here between the grand vizier and Kleber for the evacuation of Egypt by the French, 28 Jan. 1800. He beat the Turks at Heliopolis on 20 March; and was assassinated on 14 June following.

ELBA, ISLE OF (on the coast of Tuscany), taken by admiral Nelson in 1796; but abandoned 1797. Elba was conferred upon Napoleon (with the title of emperor) on his relinquishing the throne of France, 5 April, 1814. He secretly embarked hence with about 1200 men in hired feluccas, on the night of 25 Feb. 1815, landed in Provence, 1 March, and soon after recovered the crown; see France, 1815. Elba was resumed by the grand duke of Tuscany, July, 1815; was annexed to Sardinia, 1860, and included in the kingdom of Italy in 1870; population in 1893 about 24,000.

ELBE, North German Lloyd steamer, see Wrecks, 30 January, 1895, and 21 July, 1902.

ELCHINGEN, Bavaria. Here Ney beat the Austrians, 14 Oct. 1805, and was made duke of Elchingen.

ELCHO SHIELD, see under Volunteers.

ELDERS (in Greek, presbuteroi), in the early church equivalent with episcopi, or bishops (see 1 Tim. iii. and Titus i.), who afterwards became a distinct and superior order. Elders in the presbyterian churches are laymen.

Elders' Widows Fund, established by the East India Company, in 1820, to provide for widows and orphans of some of its servants, was closed in 1860. In 1878 an act was passed to transfer the surplus money to the provident fund, &c.

EL DORADO (the "Gilded Man"). When the Spaniards had conquered Mexico and Peru, they began to look for new sources of wealth, and having heard of a golden city ruled by a king or priest, smeared in oil and rolled in gold dust (which report was founded on a merely annual custom of the Indians), they organised various expeditions into the interior of South America, which were accompanied with disasters and crimes, about 1560. Raleigh's expeditions in search of gold in 1596 and 1617 led to his fall.

ELEASA, Palestine. Here Judas Maccabæus was defeated and slain by Bacchides and Alcumus, and the Syrians, about 161 B.C. (1 Macc. ix.)

ELEATIC SECT, founded at Elea in Sicily, by Xenophanes, of Colophon, about 535 B.C., whither he had been banished on account of his wild theory of God and nature. He supposed that the stars were extinguished every morning and rekindled at night; that eclipses were occasioned by a partial extinction of the sun; that there were several suns and moons for the convenience of the different climates of the earth, &c. Strabo. Zeno (about 364) was an Eleatic.

ELECTION PETITIONS. The laws respecting them were consolidated in 1828, 1839, and 1844. An act passed in 1848 was amended in 1805. By the act of 1868, 3 new judges were appointed, and three to be selected from all the judges to try election cases.

ELECTOR PALATINE, see Palatinate.

ELECTORS for members of parliament for counties were obliged to have forty shillings a-year in land, 8 Hen. VI. 1429. Among the acts relating to electors are the following: Election Act for the City of London passed 1724; Act depriving excise and custom-house officers and contractors with government of their votes, 1782; see Customs. Act to regulate polling, 1828. Great changes were made by the Reform Acts of 1832, 1867, 1868, and 1885. County elections act, 1836; see Bribery. The forty-shilling freeholders in Ireland lost their privilege in 1829. By Dodson's act, passed in 1861, university electors are permitted to vote by sending balloting papers. Hours of polling extended (from 8 A.M. to 8 P.M.) by act passed 25 Feb. 1878.

Mr. Shaw Lefevre's Plural Voting (Abolition) bill, based on the principle, "one man, one vote," rejected by the commons (243-196) . . . 18 May, 1892
Mr. Stansfeld's Electors' Qualification and Registration bill (removing certain vexatious clauses), read a 2nd time . . . 25 May, "
Plural voting (1906) bill read first time in the lords, 4 Dec., and thrown out . . . 1c Dec. 1906

ELECTORS OF GERMANY. In the reign of Conrad I. king of Germany (912-918), the dukes and counts, from being merely officers, became gradually independent of the sovereign, and subsequently elected him. In 919 they confirmed the nomination of Henry I. duke of Saxony by Conrad as his successor. In the 13th century seven princes (the archbishops of Mentz, Treves, and Cologne, the king of Bohemia, the electors of Brandenburg and Saxony, and the elector Palatine), assumed the exclusive privilege of nominating the emperor. Robertson. An eighth elector (Bavaria) was made in 1648; and a ninth (Hanover) in 1692. The number was reduced to eight in 1777 (by the elector palatine acquiring Bavaria) and increased to ten at the peace of Luneville, in 1801. On the dissolution of the German empire, the crown of Austria was made hereditary, 1804-1806; see Germany.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS, see under Telegraphs.

ELECTRIC CLOCK; see Electricity, 1889.

ELECTRICITY, from the Greek ēlektrōs, electrum, amber. The electrical properties of rubbed amber are said to have been known to Thales, 600 B.C.; and Pliny, 70 A.D.; see Magnetism, Electrical transmission of force, and Niagara.

The Electrician first published, 1861.
"The Intellectual Rise in Electricity: a History," by Dr. Park Benjamin, published, 1895. "Electric Movement in Air and Water," by Lord Armstrong, published, June, 1897.

Electrical measurements: the following terms (after great electricians, suggested by sir Chas. Bright), were adopted by the electrical congress at Paris, 22 Sept. 1881: ohm, volt, ampère, coulomb, and farad. Important resolutions were passed by the international conference on electrical units at Paris (the "congress ohm" agreed to),

April-May, 1884
Capital punishment by electricity adopted by the state of New York . . . from 1 Jan. 1883

An electrical standard committee (consisting of lord Raleigh, sir Wm. Thomson and others) appointed, Dec. 1890; it was recommended that new denominations of standards be made, and determined with reference to the centimetre, gramme, and second, of the Board of Trade; the ohm to be the standard of resistance; the ampère, the standard of electrical current; the volt, the standard of electrical pressure; all being scientifically defined . . . 20 Feb. 1891

The committee's report printed Aug., 1891, supplementary report . . . 29 Nov. 1892

Joint parliamentary committee on "Electrical Disturbances," viscount Cross, chairman . . . June, 1893

FRICITIONAL OR STATIC ELECTRICITY.

Gilbert records that other bodies besides amber generate electricity when rubbed, and that all substances may be attracted . . . 1600

Otto von Guericke constructed the first electric machine (a globe of sulphur), about . . . 1647
Boyle published his electrical experiments . . . 1676

Stephen Gray, aided by Wheeler, discovered that the human body conducts electricity, that electricity acts at a distance (motion in light bodies being produced by frictional electricity at a distance of 666 feet), the fact of electric induction, and other phenomena . . . 1720-36

Dufay originated his dual theory of two electric fluids: one vitreous, from rubbed glass, &c., the other resinous, from rubbed amber, resin, &c.; and showed that two bodies similarly electrified repel each other, and attract bodies oppositely electrified, about . . . 1733

Desaguliers classified bodies as electrics and non-electrics . . . 1742

The Leyden jar (vial or bottle) discovered by Kleist, 1745, and by Cmnæus and Muschenbroek, of Leyden; Winckler constructed the Leyden battery . . . 1746

Important researches of Watson, Canton, Beccaria and Nollet . . . 1740-7

Franklin announced his theory of a single fluid, terming the vitreous electricity positive, and the resinous negative, 1747; and demonstrated the identity of the electric spark and lightning, drawing down electricity from a cloud by means of a kite . . . June, 1753

At a picnic, he "killed a turkey by the electric spark, and roasted it by an electric jack before a fire kindled by the electric bottle" . . . 1748

Professor Richman killed at St. Petersburg, while repeating Franklin's experiments . . . Aug. 1753

Beccaria published his researches on atmospheric electricity, 1758; and Æpinus his mathematical theory . . . 1759

Electricity developed by fishes investigated by Ingenhousz, Cavendish, and others, about . . . 1773

Lichtenberg produced his electrical figures . . . 1777

Electro-Statics: Coulomb applied the torsion balance to the measurement of electric force . . . 1785

Electro-Chemistry—water decomposed by Cavendish, Fourcroy, and others . . . 1787-90

Discoveries of Galvani and Volta (see Voltaic Electricity, below) . . . 1791-3

Ørsted, of Copenhagen, discovered electro-magnetic action (see Electro-Magnetism, next page) . . . 1819

Thermo-Electricity (currents produced by heat), discovered by Seebeck: it was produced by heating pieces of copper and bismuth soldered together, 1821; the Thermo-electrometer invented by sir Wm. Snow Harris, 1827; the Thermo-multiplier constructed by Melloni and Nobili, 1831. [Marcus constructed a powerful thermo-electric battery in 1865.]

Du Bois Reymond lectured on animal electricity at the Royal Institution, and showed the existence of an electric current, developed by action of the human muscles, in . . . May, 1855

Dr. Burdon Sanderson (bart. 1899) announced his discovery of electricity in plants to the British Association at Bradford . . . Sept. 1873

Mr. C. V. Boys exhibits his very sensitive quartz-fibre thermopile at the Royal Institution, see Moon . . . 14 June, 1889

Dr. Giraud's thermo-electric stove reported successful in London and Paris . . . May, 1893

Faraday produced a spark by the sudden separation of a coiled keeper from a permanent magnet (see Magneto-Electricity, next page) . . . 1831

Wheatstone calculated the velocity of electricity, on the double fluid theory, to be 288,000 miles a second; on the single fluid theory, 576,000 miles a second . . . 1834

Mr. W. G. Armstrong (aft. lord, died 27 Dec. 1900), discovered, and Faraday explained, the electricity of high pressure steam, which produces the hydro-electric machine . . . 1840

ELECTRIC MACHINES. Otto von Guericke obtained sparks by rubbing a globe of sulphur, about 1647; Newton, Boyle, and others used glass, about 1675; Hawksbee improved the machine, about 1709; Bose introduced a metallic conductor, 1733; Winckler contrived the cushion for the rubber, 1741; Gordon employed a glass cylinder, 1742; for which a plate was substituted about 1770; Canton introduced amalgam for the rubber, 1751; Van Marum constructed an electric machine at Haarlem, said to have been the most powerful ever made, 1785; the Rev. A. Bennet invented the "doubler of electricity," 1786; Carvallo

- discovers that metals when insulated, acquire slight charges of electricity, 1787; Nicholson constructs an influence machine, 1788; modified by Ronalds, 1823; Dr. H. M. Noad set up at the Panopticon, Leicester-square, London, a very powerful electric machine and Leyden battery [in possession of Mr. Edwin Clark, 1862] . . . 1855
- The Hydro-Electric machine, by Armstrong, was constructed . . . 1840
- Holtz's induction machine . . . 1865
- The ELECTROPHORUS, a useful apparatus for obtaining frictional electricity, was invented by Volta in 1775, and improved by him in . . . 1827
- C. F. Varley's "reciprocal electrophorus" invented Sir William Thomson's "electric replenisher" described . . . 1862
- The Carré machine invented . . . 1868
- Mr. Apps's great inductorium, or induction coil, giving the largest sparks ever seen, exhibited at the Royal Polytechnic Institution . . . 29 March, 1869
- The Voss machine introduced . . . 1880
- Mr. James Wimshurst invents a "continuous electrophorus" (very successful), and an "influence machine" . . . 1882
- ELECTROSCOPE and ELECTROMETER, as the terms signify, are apparatus for ascertaining the presence and quantity of electrical excitation. Pith-balls were employed in various ways as electroscopes by Gilbert, Canton, and others. Dr. Milner invented an electrometer similar to Peltier's, 1783. The gold leaf electrometer was invented by rev. A. Bennet, 1780, and improved by Singer, about 1810; Lane's discharging electrometer is dated 1767; Henley's, 1772; Bohnenberger's electro-scope, 1820; Peltier's induction electrometer, about 1848; sir Wm. Thomson's quadrant electrometer . . . about 1857
- GALVANISM, OR VOLTAIC-ELECTRICITY, ELECTROLYSIS, AND ELECTRO-MAGNETISM.
(See Electro-Physiology.)
- Sulzer noticed a peculiar sensation in the tongue when silver and lead were brought into contact with it and each other . . . 1762
- Madame Galvani observed the convulsion in the muscles of frogs when brought into contact with two metals, in 1789; and M. Galvani, after studying the phenomena, laid the foundation of the galvanic battery . . . 1791
- Volta announced his discovery of the "Voltaic pile," composed of discs of zinc and silver, and moistened card . . . 1800
- Mr. W. Cruikshank's experiments . . . "
- By the voltaic pile, Nicholson and Carlisle decomposed water, and Dr. Henry decomposed nitric acid, ammonia, &c. . . "
- Transfer of acids and alkalis by Hisinger and Berzelius . . . 1803
- Behrens formed a dry pile of 80 pairs of zinc, copper, and gut paper . . . 1805
- By means of a large voltaic battery in the Royal Institution, London, Davy decomposed the alkali potash, and evolved the metal potassium, (soda and other substances soon after) . . . 6 Oct. 1807
- Zamboni constructed a dry pile of paper discs, coated with tin on one side and peroxide of manganese on the other . . . 1809
- Children's battery fused platinum, &c. . . "
- J. W. Ritter constructed his "secondary pile" . . . about 1812
- Davy exhibited the voltaic arc . . . 1813
- Wollaston's thimble battery ignited platinum wire, Fowler experimented on animals with galvanism, 1793; and Aldini, 1796, who produced muscular contractions in a criminal recently executed, 1803; Ure did the same . . . 1818
- Faraday described his discovery of electro-magnetic rotation . . . Jan. 1822
- Multipliers or rheometers, popularly termed "galvanometers," invented by Ampère and by Schweigger, 1820; by Cumming, 1821; De la Rive, 1824; Ritchie (torsion), 1830; Joule (magnetic), 1843. Sir William Thomson has made many improvements since 1836; he described his reflecting galvanometer, and similar apparatus in the report of the British Association in 1867. Very large galvanometer made by prof. Wm A. Cornell, of New York . . . Aug. 1885
- George Simon Ohm enunciated his formulæ relating to the galvanic current, 1827; proposed erection of a statue of Ohm, at Munich, on the centenary of his birth, 16 March, 1789 . . . Feb. 1889
- Improvement in constructing the Voltaic battery made by Wollaston, 1815; Becquerel, 1829; Sturgeon, 1830; J. F. Daniell, 1836; Grove (nitric acid, &c.), 1839; Jacobi, 1840; Stuee, 1840; Bunsen (carbon, &c.), 1842; Grove (gas battery), 1842.
- Faraday demonstrated the nature of electro-chemical decomposition, and the principle that the quantity and intensity of electric action of a galvanic battery depend on the size and number of plates employed . . . 1834
- Wheatstone invented his electro-magnetic chronoscope . . . 1840
- Copper-Zinc Couple (which see) constructed by Dr. J. H. Gladstone and Mr. A. Tribe . . . 1872
- Batteries; Bichromate of potash battery; a modification of Dr. Leeson's; very powerful; now much used. (Gaston Plante's lead battery, powerful, 1860.) Chloride of silver battery (14,400 cells)—results of its discharge published by Drs. Warren de la Rue and Hugo Müller. Powerful results exhibited at Royal Institution, London, 21 Jan. 1871
- Dr. Byrne's pneumatic battery (air blown in), very effective, announced . . . 1875
- See under Electric Lighting.
- Mr. Coad's primary battery, put forth in 1834, greatly improved, exhibited in Soho square, London, W., Jan.; Major Renard's primary battery exhibited in London, Jan.; Mr. Weymersch's primary battery exhibited . . . Feb. 1890
- Continuous or alternating current transformer, invented by sir David Salomons and Mr. L. Pyke; exhibited . . . 1 Dec. 1892
- ELECTRIC ACCUMULATOR, or secondary battery, a modification by M. Faure, of Gaston Plante's powerful lead battery of 1860, was exhibited at Paris, May, 1881. In June a box, one cubic foot in size, containing four cells, inclosing thin sheets of lead surrounded with felt saturated with dilute acid, &c., was conveyed from Paris to London. Sir Wm. Thomson found it to possess the electric energy of one million foot-pounds; and said, in a letter to The Times of 9 June, 1881: "This solves the problem of storing electricity in a manner and in a state useful for many important applications" . . . 6 June, 1881
- ELECTRO-MAGNETISM began with Cæsted's discovery of the action of the electric current on the magnetic needle, 1819; proved by Ampère, who exhibited the action of the voltaic pile upon the magnetic needle, and of terrestrial magnetism upon the voltaic current; he also arranged the conducting wire in the form of a helix or spiral, invented a galvanometer, and imitated the magnet by a spiral galvanic wire . . . 1820
- Arago magnetised a needle by the electric current, and attracted iron filings by the connecting wire of a galvanic battery . . . "
- The first electro-magnet . . . 1825
- Induction of electric currents discovered by Faraday and announced 1831. (Sir W. H. Preece made experiments, showing how induced currents (from wire to wire) might be utilized in electric telegraphy, Nov., 1892.)
- Becquerel invented an electro-magnetic balance . . . 1831
- Faraday discovered the electro-magnetic rotative force developed in a magnet by voltaic electricity, 1831; experiments on the induction of a voltaic current, &c. . . 1834-5
- Sturgeon made a bar of soft iron magnetic by surrounding it with coils of wire, and sending an electric current through the wire . . . 1837
- Induction coil made by Professor G. C. Page of Salem, Mass. . . "
- Joseph Henry announced his discovery of secondary currents . . . 2 Nov. 1838
- Breguet used electro-magnetic force to manufacture mathematical instruments, about . . . 1854
- MAGNETO-ELECTRICITY (the converse of Cæsted's discovery of electro-magnetism), discovered by Faraday, who produced an electric spark by suddenly separating a coiled keeper from a permanent magnet; and found that an electric current

- existed in a copper disc rotated between the poles of a magnet (paper read to the Royal Society, 24 Nov.) . . . 1831
- The Magneto-Electric machine arose out of Faraday's discovery, and was first made at Paris by Pixii, 1832; and in London by Saxton . . . 1833
- Magneto-electricity applied to electro-plating by Woolwich . . . 1842
- Ruhmkorff's magneto-electric induction coil constructed, about . . . 1850
- Siemens' armature produced . . . 1854
- Principle of accumulation by successive action discovered by Wilde; 1865, by mutual action (by which permanent steel magnets are dispensed with), independently by Wheatstone and Siemens, 1866
- Dr. H. Wilde's description of his machine (a powerful generator of dynamic electricity, by means of permanent magnets) and the magneto-electric machine (constructed in 1865) sent to the Royal Society by professor Faraday and reported, 26 April, ..
- The light (resembling bright moon-light) exhibited on the top of Burlington house . . . 2 March, 1867
- Dynamo-magneto-electric machines, by Wheatstone and Siemens, described at the Royal Society, 14 Feb.; by Ladd . . . 14 March, ..
- Trial of Siemens' dynamo-magneto electric light in the torpedo service at Sheerness reported successful . . . 18 Dec. 1871
- Gramme's magneto-electric machine described . . . 1875
- Two of Siemens' machines ordered for the Lizards, announced . . . 1878
- Mr. W. Groves' electro-induction balance . . . 1879
- International Electrical Congress at Paris with exhibition . . . 15 Aug.-15 Nov. 1881
- [Medals and other honours awarded to England.]
- Mr. E. J. Atkins' method of separating metals from their alloys by electrolysis, announced . . . Nov. 1883
- Decomposition of common salt by electrolysis and the production thereby of alkali and bleaching powder very successful, discovered by H. Y. Castner (died Oct. 1899).
- APPLICATIONS—ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH. See Telegraph.
- The transmission of electricity by an insulated wire was shown by Watson and others . . . 1747
- Telegraphic arrangements were devised by Lesarge, 1744; Betancourt, 1787; Cavallo, 1795; Salva, 1796; Schmemmering, exhibited 29 Aug. 1809; Ronalds . . . 1816
- Ampere invents his telegraphic arrangement, employing the magnetic needle and coil, and the galvanic battery . . . 1820
- F. (aft. sir Francis) Ronalds publishes an account of his electric telegraph (died, aged 85, 8 Aug. 1873) . . . 1823
- Professor Wheatstone constructs an electro-magnetic apparatus, by which 30 signals are conveyed through nearly four miles of wire . . . June, 1836
- Telegraphs invented by Schilling, Gauss, and Weber (magneto-electric), 1833; by Steinheil and by Masson, 1837; by Morse (died 1872). . . 1837
- The magnetic needle telegraph patented by (aft. sir) Wm. F. Cooke and (aft. sir) Charles Wheatstone. (The Society of Arts Albert gold medal was awarded to them in June, 1867). . . 12 June, ..
- Mr. Robert Stirling Newall, of Gateshead, patented his wire rope used for submarine telegraphs . . . 1840
- Mr. Cooke set up the telegraph line on the Great Western Railway, from Paddington to West Drayton, 1838-9; on the Blackwall line, 1840; and in Glasgow . . . 1841
- Wheatstone's alphabetical printing telegraph patented . . . 1841
- The first telegraph line in America set up from Washington to Baltimore . . . 1844
- The murderer Tawell apprehended by means of the telegraph . . . 1845
- The electric telegraph company established (having purchased Cooke and Wheatstone's telegraphic inventions) . . . 1846
- Gutta-percha suggested as an insulator by Faraday . . . 1847
- Professor Charles Wheatstone drew plans of a projected submarine telegraph between Dover and Calais . . . 1840
- Mr. John Watkins Brett (on behalf of his brother, Jacob Brett, the inventor and patentee), submitted a similar plan to Louis Philippe without success . . . 1847
- He obtained permission from Louis Napoleon to make a trial, 1847; took place . . . 28 Aug. 1850
- The connecting wires (27 miles long) were placed on the government pier in Dover harbour, and in the Goliath steamer were coiled about 30 miles in length of telegraphic wire, enclosed in a covering of gutta-percha, half an inch in diameter. The Goliath started from Dover, unrolling the telegraphic wire as it proceeded, and allowing it to drop to the bed of the sea. In the evening the steamer arrived on the French coast, and the wire was run up the cliff at cape Grinez to its terminal station, and messages were sent to and fro between England and the French coast. But the wire, in settling into the sea-bottom, crossed a rocky ridge, and snapped in two, and thus the enterprise for that time failed.
- New arrangements were soon made, and on a scale of greater magnitude; and the telegraph was opened; the opening and closing prices of the funds in Paris were known on the London stock exchange within business hours, and guns were fired at Dover by communication from Calais; this cable was laid by the late T. R. Crampton, 13 Nov. 1851
- Duplex Telegraphy*—two messages transmitted along a single wire at the same time in opposite directions first accomplished by Dr. Gintl, Austrian, 1853; by Messrs. Siemens, 1857; in the same direction, by Stark, of Vienna, 1855; apparatus perfected by Stearns, an American, and also by Muirhead and Taylor for long cables; applied to British telegraphs . . . 1873
- Quadruplex Telegraphy*—four messages along one wire; successful experiments between London and Liverpool . . . 25 Sept. 1877
- Mr. T. A. Edison's quadruplex instrument, by which four messages, two from each end, may be transmitted upon one wire simultaneously, and professor Delaney's synchronous multiplex instrument by which six messages may be so transmitted on one wire, were exhibited at the Post Office Jubilee Fête . . . 2 July, 1890
- Professor Elisha Gray's teleautograph exhibited at the Royal society . . . 13 June, 1894
- Prof. Hughes in 1870-80 and in 1888 telephoned messages across space. Capt. Jackson succeeding in getting Morse signals across the Air, Dec. 1895
- Wireless Telegraphy*—Sir W. H. Preece, C.B., F.R.S., at the Royal Institution, 4 June, 1897, after some remarks on the propagation of waves in the ether, described and illustrated his own method of "Signalling through Space without Wires," by means of electro-magnetic waves of low frequency and two parallel circuits, established on each bank of a river. This system was successfully used in 1895, to telegraph across the Sound of Mull, when the submarine cable had broken down. Sir Wm. Preece next exhibited and explained the apparatus by which Hertzian waves of high frequency are utilized in the new system invented by Mr. Marconi, a young Italian, who brought it to England, in July, 1896, and who assisted at the lecture.—Times, 7 June, 1897. By Marconi's system, signals had been transmitted across the Bristol Channel, between Penarth and Brian Down, about 9 miles. Sir Wm. Preece considered the invention valuable for shipping and lighthouse purposes. Further experiments by the Post Office authorities between Dover and Fort Burgoyne, 17 Sept., et seq. 1897; and by Prof. Slaby with balloons (133 mi.) March, 1898. Very successful experiments between the S. Foreland lighthouse and the E. Goodwin lightship (12 mi.). Current not affected by

* Sir W. H. Preece, F.R.S., president of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, at a meeting on 26 Jan. 1893, described the amazing progress of the applications of electricity since 1850, in telegraphy, railway signalling, telephony, lighting, chemistry, transmission of power, and traction. In relation to our press, Sir Wm. Preece stated that in 1871, 27,701,968 words were transmitted by telegraph, and in 1891, 600,409,000.

stormy weather, mid Jan. 1899; again 30 Jan.; the first Press message, by Marconi's system, from Wimreux, near Boulogne, to S. Foreland; messages sent across the Channel in all weathers, 28-31 March. Lord Rayleigh and members of Trinity house inspect Sig. Marconi's system at S. Foreland, messages worked well, 6 April; Mr. Ritchie (pres. Board of Trade) witnessed similar demonstrations, 15 April; experiments in the presence of a French commission between a moving ship and the land, messages sent between the French gunboat Isis, the S. Foreland, the E. Goodwin lightship and Boulogne. It was clearly shown by a new device discovered by Sig. Marconi that not only can moving ships communicate with each other at sea, but that the messages can be concentrated on the point intended to be reached, 24 April; similar experiments carried on before the Chinese minister and others, 25 April; the E. Goodwin lightship being run into and damaged by F. F. Matthews, steamer, a wireless message from the lightship to the S. Foreland procured assistance, 28 April; again of practical use in an accident to a scaman, 18 May; experiments by Prof. Tuma between 2 balloons at Vienna, fairly successful, 14 July; messages sent from Dover town-hall to S. Foreland and E. Goodwin lightship, 16 Aug.; experiments with the Popoff system arranged under conditions of warfare, successfully carried on between the Black Sea fleet and the Crimean shore, reported, 25 Sept.; rapid development, successful long-distance transmissions from the Poldhu station at the Lizard, Cornwall, to St. Catherine's, Isle of Wight, 22 Jan. 1901; across the Atlantic to St. John's, Newfoundland, 13, 14 Dec.; and at night 2000 mi. to and from the ship Philadelphia, 25 Feb. 1902. Correspondence as to whether Prof. Oliver Lodge (in 1894) or Sig. Marconi (about June, 1902) was the first inventor, Times, 5 and 15 July, 1902. Messages sent from the Lizard received by the Carlo Alberto, Italian cruiser, at Kronstadt, 1600 mi., 14 July, 1902; and from there to the Mediterranean, Aug.-Sept. Various patents taken out by sir O. Lodge, N. Righi, Branley, Popoff, Shkly, Atco, Braun, Solari, Guarini Corvera, Ducretet, Castelli, Hetherford, Jackson, and Willoughby Smith, 1902

Messages (sent from Cape Breton to Poldhu, Cornwall) exchanged between the king and lord Minto, gov.-gen. of Canada, and the king of Italy; also by the Canadian government to the Times, congratulating the British people on the accomplishment by Signor Marconi, of the greatest feat which modern science has as yet achieved, 21 Dec. 1902; used successfully between Aldershot and the Channel squadron off Portsmouth, 12 Jan. 1903

- ceding), which can convey 2000 words an hour, adopted by the American telegraph company, Jan. 1859
- Wheatstone's automatic printing telegraph patented 1860
- It was stated that there were in work 15,000 miles of electric telegraph wire in Great Britain; 80,000 on the continent of Europe; and 48,000 in America; and altogether about 150,000 miles laid down in the world July, 1862
- Bonelli's typo-electric telegraph, made known and company established, 1860; and tried between Liverpool and Manchester, 1863; promised revival, June, 1864
- An "electric telegraph" conference, at which 16 states (not Great Britain) were represented, met at Paris, see Telegraph March, 1865
- The Telegraph act (see Telegraph) passed 31 July, 1868
- It enabled H.M.'s postmaster-general to acquire, work, and maintain electric telegraphs; postal telegraphy began 5 Feb. 1872
- Result of the "Derby" race sent to Calcutta in five minutes 24 May, 1871
- Society of Telegraph Engineers established, 28 Feb. 1872
- Statue of Morse at New York uncovered 10 June, 1875
- Messages rise from 6,000,000 to 20,000,000 a year 1875
- The "shilling telegraph" said not to pay July, "
- A new international telegraphic convention came into operation 1 Jan. 1876
- Direct line between New Zealand and London, completed 18 Feb.; communication between lord mayor and mayors of Wellington and Dunedin, 23 Feb. "
- ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH. A plan to unite Europe and America by telegraph was entered at the government registration office in June, 1845, by Mr. J. Watkins Brett and Mr. Jacob Brett, who made proposals to the government, which were not accepted. This scheme was carried out by a company in 1858, with the concurrence of the British and American governments.
- 2500 miles of wire were manufactured, and tested in March, 1857
- The laying it down commenced at Valentia, in Ireland on 5 Aug. "
- The vessels employed were the Niagara and Susquehanna (American vessels), and the Leopard and Agamemnon (British vessels). After sailing a few miles the cable snapped. This was soon repaired; but on 11 Aug. after 300 miles of wire had been paid out, it snapped again (and the vessels returned to Plymouth) 11 Aug. "
- A second attempt to lay the cable failed through a violent storm, 20-21 June, 1858
- The third voyage was successful. The junction between the two continents was completed by the laying down of 2050 miles of wire from Valentia, in Ireland, to Newfoundland; the engineer, sir Chas. Bright was knighted, aged 26. The first two messages, on 5 Aug., were from the queen of England to the president of the United States, and his reply 5 Aug. "
- This event caused great rejoicing in both countries; but, unfortunately, the insulation of the wire gradually became more faulty, and after 271 messages had been sent and received the power of transmitting intelligence utterly ceased owing to the employment of too high battery power, 4 Sept. "
- First cable to India laid by sir Chas. Bright for the government in 1864
- The Great Eastern steamer, engaged to lay down 2300 miles of wire, with 25,000 tons burden, sailed for Valentia, Ireland, from the Thames, sir Samuel Canning, engineer in charge for contractors, sir C. Bright and Mr. Latimer Clark, consulting engineers to the company, accompanied by professor Wm. Thomson and Mr. Cromwell F. Varley, as electricians 15 July, 1865
- After connecting the wire with the land, the Great Eastern sailed from Valentia 23 July, "
- Telegraphic communication with the vessel finally ceased on 2 Aug. The apparatus for raising the wire proving insufficient, the vessel returned, and arrived at the Medway 19 Aug. "
- Atlantic telegraph company reconstituted as the Anglo-American telegraph company limited, March, 1866
- The Great Eastern, with a new cable, sailed from the Medway, 30 June; the shore-end at Valentia was spliced with the main cable, and the Great Eastern sailed, 13 July; 1200 miles of cable had been laid, 22 July; the cable was completely laid at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, and a message sent to lord Stanley, 27 July; message from queen Victoria to president of the United States sent, 28 July. To which he replied 30 July, 1866
- The lost cable of 1865 recovered, 2 Sept.; and its laying completed at Newfoundland 3 Sept. "
- The Great Eastern arrived at Liverpool 19 Sept. "
- Baronetries conferred on Messrs. Curtis Lampson, John Pender, Daniel Gooch, R. R. Glass, Samuel Canning; prof. Wm. Thomson and capt. James Anderson, chief promoters of the company, were knighted Oct. "
- [It was stated (in Sept. 1866) that the engineer of the cable passed signals through 3700 miles of wire by means of a battery formed in a lady's thimble.]
- The U. S. congress voted a gold medal to Cyrus Field, for his exertions connected with Atlantic telegraphs 7 March, 1867
- At a dinner given to Cyrus Field at Willis's Rooms, London, telegraphic messages were exchanged between the company and lord Monck, viceroy of Canada and president Johnson 1 July, 1868
- French Atlantic Telegraph company formed; French government grant concession for 20 years, from 1 Sept. 1869, to baron (1871) Julius de Reuter and baron Emile d'Erlanger, see Reuter 8 July, "
- Anglo-Danish telegraph (Newbigin to Copenhagen) completed 31 Aug. "
- European end of the French Atlantic cable laid at Brest, 17 June; the American end at Duxbury, Massachusetts 23 July, 1869
- Reported union between the Anglo-American and French Atlantic telegraph companies Jan. 1870
- Telegraph between Bombay and Suez completed "
- Telegraph between Adelaide and Port Darwin, Australia, completed 22 Aug. 1872
- Message from the mayor of Adelaide received by the lord mayor of London, and replied to, 21 Oct. "
- The fourth Atlantic telegraph cable laid by the Great Eastern, from Valentia, Ireland, to Heart's Content, Newfoundland 8 June-3 July, 1873
- The Brazil telegraph cable completely laid, 22 Sept. "
- "Faraday," a great electric cable ship, built for Siemens Brothers, launched at Newcastle (see Steam), 17 Feb.; sails to lay the "Direct United States Company's" cable, 16 May; laid shore-end in Nova Scotia, 31 May; in New Hampshire, 8 June; connected with Newfoundland, July 1874
- The fifth Anglo-American telegraph laid by the Great Eastern Aug.-Sept. "
- E. A. Couver's Writing telegraph: quick plain writing (36 miles), exhibited at Royal Institution, &c. [an improved one by J. Hart Robertson exhibited in London, 1887] May, 1879
- South African line laid between Mozambique and Natal, 23 Aug.; connected with Capetown; opened to the public 29 Dec. "
- The new French Transatlantic cable to be laid from Brest to St. Pierre by the Faraday, sailed June; connected with Halifax, Oct. 1879; line from Paris to New York opened 1 June, 1880
- International Congress of Electricians opened at Paris, 15 Sept.; exhibition 11 Aug.-20 Nov. 1881
- New Atlantic cable laid by the Faraday 22 Aug. el seq. "
- Telegraph from England to Panama completed Sept. 1882
- International Submarine Conference, Paris, 16 Oct. Cromwell Fleetwood Varley, electrical engineer, who patented many inventions, died 2 Sept. 1883
- International Conference for protection of submarine cables, Paris, closed; convention agreed to, 26 Oct. 1883; signed at London, 14 March; signed for 26 states at London, at Paris 26 March, 1884; another conference 1 Dec. 1886
- The Volta, an electric launch (37 feet long, 7 feet beam) built of steel, constructed by Messrs. Stephens, Smith & Co. of Millwall, designed by Mr. A. Reckenzaun, crossed from Dover to Calais and back by means of one charge of the accumulators; about 4 hours crossing 13 Sept. "

- Electric boat for communicating light to powder houses, &c.; invented by Thomas Webb; launched at Waltham Abbey. Aug. 1886
- Arrangements invented for transmitting telegraphic messages from railway trains in motion without contact with the ordinary wires. 1887
- A central laboratory of electricity inaugurated at Grenelle, Paris, by the International society of electricians. 1888
- Sir Charles Bright, an eminent engineer, who laid many telegraph cables, died. 3 May, "
- Electric omnibus invented by Mr. Radcliffe Ward, running in London. Feb. 1889
- Messrs. Moore & Wright announce their column printing telegraph in which messages are produced resembling type writing. April, "
- The Metropolitan electric supply company propose six central stations, W. & W.C. April, "
- International Electro-Technical congress at Frankfort-on-Maine, opened. 8 Sept. 1891
- Electrical exhibition at the Crystal Palace. 9 Jan. 1892
- Electrical Exhibition at St. Petersburg. 23 Jan. "
- Great progress made, messages and returns sent all round the world in a few minutes from New York, during an electrical exposition. June, 1896
- Sir John Pender, an energetic promoter of submarine telegraphy, born 1815, died. 7 July, "
- Meetings of committee of the Submarine Telegraph Memorial, to establish a memorial to sir John Pender recording the jubilee of submarine telegraphy in 1901. 30 Oct., 10, 27 Nov. "
- Submarine telegraph cable between Emden and Vigo, opened, reported. 24 Dec. "
- New cable laid between Brest and England, reported. 3 Aug. 1899
- Successful experiments in rapid telegraphing in Buda-Pesth and Berlin, 220 words sent in 10 secs. Sept. "
- German-American cable, between Emden and New York, opened. 1 Sept. 1900
- Submarine cable between Cornwall and St. Vincent, Cape de Verd Islands, opened. 30 Jan. 1901
- Cable from S. Africa to W. Australia, opened, Oct. "
- Committee to consider the cable communications of the empire, presided over by lord Balfour, evidence given by sir E. A. Sassoon, sir J. D. Pender, sir Sandford Fleming, Mr. Chas. Bright, and others. 1901-2
- Pacific Cable bill passed, 16 Aug. 1901; amendment bill passed. 7 Aug. 1902
- All British Pacific cable from Vancouver to Queensland, connecting New Zealand, Norfolk Island, and Australia, first section completed at Doubtless Bay, 25 March, 1902; the king receives a message from Fiji, 10 April; last link completed at Suva, Fiji, 31 Oct.; a telegraphic girdle round the world, touching foreign soil only at Madeira and St. Vincent; a message travels the whole circuit in 30 minutes, Times. 1 Nov. "
- ELECTRIC CLOCK, &c. Professor Wheatstone invented an electro-magnetic telegraph clock in 1840. Clocks worked by electricity, invented by Mr. Alexander Bain, Mr. Shepherd, and others, appeared in the exhibition of 1851. An electric clock, with four dials, illuminated at night, was set up for some time in front of the office of the electric telegraph company, in the Strand, London, July, 1852. A time-ball was set up by Mr. French, in Cornhill, in 1856. In 1860, Mr. C. V. Walker so connected the clock of the Greenwich observatory with that of the South-eastern station, London, that they could be controlled by electricity.
- Lowne's electric clock reported successful, mid-May, 1903
- Commercial Pacific cable company's cable between the United States and China completed. 16-17 April, 1906
- New cable between Guam, America, and Japan, 26 June, "
- First section, 215 nautical miles of the telegraphic cable to Iceland, from the Shetland Is. to the Faroe Is. opened 1 Aug.; last section, reported completed. 26 Aug. "
- M. Armengaud, president of the French society of aerial navigation, devises an apparatus for supplementing the power of vision by artificial devices, based on the employment of electricity, making it possible to see across immense distances. April, 1908
- ELECTRIC LIGHT.
- Humphrey Davy produced electric light with carbon points. 1800
- Apparatus for regulating the electric light were devised in 1846, as shown by W. Stait's patents, 1846, 1849; Stait (at Sunderland, 25 Oct. 1847), and Petrie in 1848; by Foucault soon after.
- Jules Dubouche's Electric Lamp (the most perfect of the kind) appeared at the Paris exhibition in 1855; and was first employed by professor Tyn dall, at the Royal Institution, London, for illustrating lectures on light and colours. 1856
- The works of new Westminster bridge were illuminated by Watson's electric light. 1858
- The Magneto-Electric light (the most brilliant artificial light yet produced), devised by prof. Holmes, successfully tried at the South Foreland light-house, Dover. 1858 and 1859
- The French government ordered eight light-houses to be illuminated by electric light. April. 1861
- M. Serrin, of Paris, exhibited his improved electric lamp. 1862
- Electric Candle*, invented by Paul Jablochkoff (an electric current passed through two carbons side by side with a slip of kaolin between them, produces a steady, soft, noiseless light; the carbons burn like wax); reported to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, by M. Démarquay. Oct. 1876
- The electric light successfully employed for photography by Mr. H. Van der Weyde. "
- Head, Wrightson, & Co., of Stockton-on-Tees, use Siemens' electric light for bridge building. "
- At the Magasin du Louvre, 8 electric lights replaced 100 Carcel gas-burners; as manageable as coal gas supply; tried at West India docks. 15 June, 1877
- Tyndall's experiments at S. Foreland, demonstrate superiority of Siemens' dynamo-electric machine, Aug. 1876-July, "
- Gramme's machine (light equal to 758 candles). "
- Serrin's and Jablochkoff's lights improved by Rapiéff, a Russian; taken up by Mr. (aft. sir) E. J. Reed, M.P.; a small magneto-electric machine, worked by steam; conducting wires replace the gasworks and pipes. July, 1878
- Mr. Stayton reports, that the light is much dearer than gas, and not suitable for street lighting in London. Sept. "
- Electric light tried at Westminster palace, 28 March, "
- Two of Siemens' dynamo-magneto-electric machines ordered for the Lizards light-houses. "
- The Gaiety theatre lit by light from Lontin's machine and modification of Jablochkoff's. Aug. "
- Hippolyte Fontaine's treatise on Electric Lighting, 1877; translated by Paget Higgs, published. "
- Mr. T. A. Edison announces at New York his discovery of a method of producing a great number of lights and much mechanical power from a Ritchie inductive coil, a dynamo-electric machine, which he terms "telemachon," which may be worked by water-power or steam. Sept.-Oct. "
- Edison's plans of subdividing lights filed at patent office. 23 Oct. "
- National Electric Light company forming. Nov. "
- Richard Westermann's electric light subdivided; a number of jets lit simultaneously; shown by British telegraph company. 2 Nov. "
- Electric light used for large workshops at Woolwich, &c., throughout the country. Nov. "
- Wallace lamp (American), introduced by Mr. Ladd, autumn, "
- Jablochkoff candle tried at Westgate-on-Sea, by Mr. E. F. Davis, 2-26 Dec.; light successful; difficulty in practice; given up. Dec. "
- Formation of nitric acid in the air by electric light; announced by Mr. T. Wills, 13 Dec. 1878; of hydro-cyanic or prussic acid by prof. J. Dewar, autumn, 1879
- Machines of Farnier & Wallace, Lontin, De Meritens, Browning, Carré, and others in use in London. "
- Light given up at Billingsgate market, about 30 Jan. "
- Siemens' light successful at the Albert Hall, 13 Feb. "
- Edison obtains beautiful light from platinum which fuses; used 600-horse power to obtain 20,000

- Lights at one station; failure announced, March; his patent registered 23 April, 1879
- M. Jamin's electric candle exhibited at Academy of Sciences, Paris about 17 March, "
- A continuous current dynamo-magneto-electric machine patented by lord Elphinstone and C. W. Vincent (since improved) "
- A committee of the House of Commons appointed "to consider whether it is desirable to authorize municipal corporations or other local authorities to adopt any schemes for lighting by electricity" 19 June, 1880
- Electric light placed on Thames Embankment, in British Museum, at Victoria Station, &c. Dec. "
- System of C. F. Brush (American), exhibited in London, said to be simple and trustworthy, 23 Dec. "
- Dr. C. William Siemens reports to Royal Society, that electric light acts like solar light on vegetation 2 March, "
- Electric lights set up for trial on Thames Embankment, north side (Jablochhoff system), 13 Dec. 1878; Waterloo Bridge, 10 Oct. 1879; continued, April, "
- Mr. J. W. Swan exhibits his system of dividing light, &c., at Newcastle-on-Tyne (aft. in London) 20 Oct. "
- Trial of three systems in London: Lontin's, Southwark bridge, &c.; Brush, Blackfriars' bridge, &c.; Siemens', Guildhall, &c. 31 March, 1881
- Swan's incandescent lamp set up in Earnock colliery, Hamilton, Lanarkshire, 9 Aug.; also in the Savoy Theatre, London, successfully, opened 10 Oct. "
- Junior Carlton Club first lit by the electric accumulator 16 Sept. "
- Godalming lit by electric light produced by water wheels driven by the Wey, Sept.; reported successful 15 Dec. "
- New lamp (the sun) by Louis Clerc, a combination of the arc and incandescent systems June, 1882
- The electric "sun" lamp and power company was to med. July, "
- Electric lighting act passed. 18 Aug. "
- The Ferranti system of electric lighting (invented by Sir William Thomson, Mr. S. Ziani de Ferranti, and Mr. Alfred Thomson) successfully tried, Dec. "
- International electrical and gaslight exhibition at the Crystal Palace opened 13 Dec. "
- Electric light applied by Bell Brothers, Newcastle, to their mines Dec. "
- Elphinstone and Vincent machine advertised for sale
- Mr. J. E. H. Gordon's great dynamo machine exhibited at Woolwich 25 Oct. 1883
- Messrs. G. C. V. Holmes, F. E. Burke, and F. Cheesewright's invention for the use of the electric light in railways tried on Great Northern line, reported successful 25 Oct. "
- St. Matthew's Church, Brixton, lit by electricity 28 Oct. "
- Gaulard-Gibbs' system of secondary generators announced April; inaugurated on the Metropolitan railway Nov. "
- H. T. Barnett's secondary battery tried at the Great Western station Oct. et seq. "
- Mr. O. C. D. Ross's improved galvanic battery for light and motion 1883-4
- Domestic electric lighting by the Beeman, Taylor and King system tried at Colchester 11 June, 1884
- Electric light employed in Liverpool and Manchester trains Aug. "
- Electric lighting successful at the Fisheries, 1883, and Health exhibitions "
- Brighton successfully lit by the Hammond-Wright system; described Nov. "
- Upward's primary battery (an advance); use of acid dispensed with July, 1886
- The Edison & Swan united electric light company v. Woodhouse & Rawson for infringement of patent for carbon filaments; verdict for plaintiffs 20 May, "
- Affirmed on appeal, judge Cotton dissentient 31 Jan. 1887
- Kensington & Knightsbridge electric lighting company's first station opened Jan. "
- Mr. Edison's "Pyro-Magnetic" dynamo, in which heat is directly transformed into electricity without the intervention of steam-engine or other machinery, announced to the American association Sept. "
- Duc de Feltre's suggestion for the employment of windmills to produce electric light by working dynamo machines; experiments made at Cap de la Hève Sept. 1887
- Mr. Urquhart's new portable electric lamp, weighing 4 lb. 2 oz., adapted for coal mines, &c.; exhibited in London Dec. "
- Schanschieff's primary battery; applicable to lighting, miners' lamps, &c. autumn "
- Proposal to light part of the city of London by the Anglo-American Brush system submitted to the commissioners of sewers, deferred 21 Feb. 1883
- Erection by the London electric supply corporation of works at Deptford to supply the metropolis with electric light "
- The Edison & Swan united electric light company v. Holland and others; 21 days' trial; divided verdict, Edison's patent of 1879 declared invalid. Cheesborough patent of 1878 maintained 16 July, 1888. Edison's patent declared valid on appeal, 18 Feb. 1889
- The house-to-house electric supply company founded 1883; the first station at West Brompton opened 24 Jan., about nine stations established and others in preparation Feb. "
- The city of London from Fleet street to Aldgate about to be electrically lighted Feb. "
- The electric light had been adopted at Milan, Rome, Paris, Tours, Marseilles, New York and other great cities up to June, 1890
- Fourteen companies have been established to supply electricity in the Metropolis alone up to Feb. 1891
- The first permanent electric lights in the city of London set up in Queen Victoria street from the Mansion-house to Blackfriars summer, "
- Electric light extension acts brought in 1892
- Several explosions in St. Pancras and other places in the electrical supply street boxes, attributed to the presence of sodium and escaped coal-gas; remedies suggested by the Board of Trade Feb. 1895
- Prof. Nernst's new electric lamp described by Mr. Jas. Swinburne at the Society of Arts 8 Feb. 1899
- Mr. Thos. Edison's machine for generating electricity direct from coal without dynamos or engines, reported 1 Sept. 1900
- ELECTRIC LOOM. M. Bonelli, of Turin, in 1854, devised a plan of employing magnets and electro-magnets in weaving, thereby superseding the tedious and costly Jacquard system of cards. His loom was set up in London in 1859, and lectured upon at the Royal Institution by professor Faraday 8 June, 1860
- Electric Pen (for copying, &c.), invented by Mr. T. A. Edison; an electric writing company was established 1877
- Lamp-lighting by Electricity.—Mr. St. George Lane Fox's invention tried at Fulham, and reported successful, autumn 1877; doubtful 1879
- ELECTROPHONE, invented by Dr. Strethill Wright, for producing sound by electric currents of high tension: one laid before the Royal Scottish Society of Arts. See Telephone 25 April, 1864
- Mr. Chamberlain's speech on the fiscal question at the Guildhall, reproduced simultaneously to a large assembly at Queen's hall by electrophone, 19 Jan. 1904
- ELECTRO-TINT. Mr. Palmer, of Newgate-street, London, patented inventions by which engravings may be copied from engraved plates, and the engraving itself actually produced, by electrical agency, and one process he termed glyptography 1841
- ELECTRO-TYPE OR DEPOSIT. Mr. W. Cruikshank's experiments, 1800; Mr. Spencer, in England, and professor Jacobi, in Russia, made the first successful experiments in this art in 1837 and 1838. Since then, Mr. A. Smee and others have perfected the processes. In 1840, Mr. Rob. Murray applied black-lead to non-metallic bodies as a conducting surface. In 1840, Mr. Ruolz and Mr. Elkington applied it to gilding and silver plating. Since 1850, printing types and woodcuts, and casts from them, have been electrolytically produced with copper, and the process is now largely adopted in the arts.
- An Electric safety lamp made by MM. Dumas and Benoit; exhibited at Paris 8 Sept. 1862

The Electro-block company established, 1860; by their processes the engraving and reduction of engravings, obtained by india-rubber, can be immediately transferred to a lithographic stone, and multiplied. Leech's engravings, so enlarged, were coloured by himself, and exhibited in 1862

ELECTRO-PHYSIOLOGY. Aristotle and Pliny refer to the powers of the torpedo; Walsh and Ingenhous, the discoveries of Galvani in 1790, and the researches of Matteucci about 1830, have greatly advanced the science.

Electric tramway car accidents—
At Swindon; 4 deaths, 30 persons injured 1 June, 1906
Electric tramway accident at Archway-road, Highgate; 3 killed, many injured . . . 23 June "

Accident at Bradford through the breaking of the trolley connecting the car with the overhead wire; 14 persons injured . . . 31 July, 1907

Serious accident at Bournemouth; a car, while descending the hill near Fairlight glen, got out of control, left the metals, and fell a distance of 20 ft. through the trees; 7 persons were killed 1 May, 1908

ELECTRIC LIGHTING ACT, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 56, passed 18 Aug. 1882. Amendment act passed 1888 (extending the monopoly of electric light companies from 21 to 42 years). Regulations of the Board of Trade published 18 May, 1889. Professor Fleming reported in 1894, that London was supplied by 13 companies, and about 700,000 incandescent electric lamps were in use, and about 425,000 lamps in the provinces. Electric lighting is now generally adopted throughout the civilised world, 1906.

ELECTRO-CHEMICAL SOCIETY, founded in America, at Philadelphia, pres., prof. J. W. Richards, 3-5 April, 1902. Another in London. The "Faraday," Mr. Swan, pres., 1903.

ELECTROCUTION, a method of execution by means of electricity. See under Death.

ELECTROLYSIS, see Electricity, 1883.

ELECTRONS, minute particles of matter, consisting of positive and negative electricity, contained in an atom, the negative electrons being in a state of violent movement with occasional possibility of escape. Investigated by prof. Rarmor, lord Kelvin, and others, 1903 et seq. See sir Oliver Lodge's address on "Radium and its Meaning," at Birmingham, 5 January, 1904, reported in Times, 6 January, 1905.

M. Poincaré, at a meeting of the Academy of Sciences, reads a note from M. Jean Becquerel on the nature of positive electricity and the existence of positive electrons. According to this statement, an electron, charged with positive electricity, was found in a Crookes' tube, 22 June, 1908

ELEGY. Elegiac verse (consisting of a hexameter and pentameter alternately) was the first variation from the hexameter or epic measure, used by Tyrtæus and other early poets. The elegies of Ovid and Catullus are celebrated. Gray's "Elegy written in a Country Churchyard" was published in 1749.

ELEMENTARY EDUCATION ACT, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 75, passed 9 Aug. 1870; amended in 1872. Clause 25, which authorizes payments to support denominational schools, much objected to by dissenters; bill to repeal it rejected by the commons (373-128), 10 June, 1874. Another act (for agricultural districts, &c.) brought in by lord Sandon, 18 May, 1876; royal assent, 15 Aug. 1876. Another combining act passed 5 Aug. 1891. Other acts passed, 8 Aug. 1900 See Education.

ELEMENTS were formerly reckoned as four: earth, air, fire and water. Lavoisier enunciated the principle that all bodies which cannot be proved to be compounded are elements, and to be treated as such. Mr. W. Crookes (knt. 1897), F.R.S., in a lecture at the Royal Institution, London, by delicate experiments demonstrated that yttrium is a compound body, and expounded a theory that all the elements have been evolved from what he termed Protyle, 18 Feb. 1887. Above twelve new elements said to have been discovered in rare earths by MM. Krüss and Nilson by the spectroscope in 1887. Mr. Crookes declared Didymium to be a compound body. See Table, and separate articles. The chemical elements were stated to be about 54 in 1834, about 77 in 1881, about 80, 1903.*

* Mr. (aft. sir) Joseph Norman Lockyer, in a paper read at the Royal Society, 12 Dec. 1878, expressed doubts of the elementary character of some of the following substances based on his spectroscopic experiments. His views were not supported by the researches of professors Dewar and Living, 1880-81. See Chlorine. Professor Mendeleef classified the elements into 7 groups or families; each having special properties. His "Principles of Chemistry" (in English), published 1898.

ELEPHANT, in the earliest times trained to war. The history of the Maccabees informs us, that "to every elephant they appointed 1000 men armed with coats of mail, and 500 horse: and upon the elephants were strong towers of wood, &c." The elephants in the army of Antiochus were provoked to fight by showing them the "blood of grapes and mulberries." The first elephant said to have been seen in England was one of enormous size, presented by the king of France to our Henry III. in 1238. Baker's Chron. Polyænus states that Cæsar brought one to Britain 54 B.C., which terrified the inhabitants greatly. See Knighthood. 13 elephants in lord mayor's procession, 9 Nov. 1876.

Chance, an elephant 13 feet high, in Cross's menagerie, Exeter Change, London, becoming dangerous, was shot, receiving 180 musket balls before he fell, 1 March, 1826.

A young elephant brought into Court of Exchequer to show his peaceful character, in a suit for damages for frightening a pony at the Alexandra Palace, 18 July, 1879.

Barnum, the American showman, bought, for 2,000*l.*, the large male African elephant Jumbo, 6 tons weight, of the Zoological Society, Regent's Park, London. Jumbo refused to go 18 Feb. After much trouble he was removed in the night, 22-23 March, and placed in the Assyrian Monarch, 24 March; arrived at New York, 9 April, 1882; killed on the railway, 15 Sept. 1885. A so-called white elephant (little differing from others), "Toung Taloung," bought from the king of Siam, shown at the Zoological gardens, London, 17 Jan. to 12 March, 1884; burnt with Alice, "Jumbo's wife," and others at the destruction of Mr. Barnum's show and menagerie at Bridgeport, U.S., by fire, 20 Nov. 1887. "Jung Pasha" given to the "Zoo" by the Prince of Wales in 1876; died 8 March, 1896. "Lita," a pet elephant in the Dublin Zoological gardens, killed his keeper, and was shot, 11 June, 1903. "Jumbo, Junior," the smallest elephant in the world, exhibited at Hengler's circus 1905

ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES. The institution of these ancient secret religious ceremonies in honour of Demeter (Ceres) at Athens, is traditionally attributed to Cadmus, 1550; to Erechtheus, 1399; or to Eumolpus, 1356 B.C. If any one revealed them, he was to be put to death. They were introduced from Eleusis into Rome, lasted about 1800 years, and were abolished by Theodosius A.D. 389. The laws were—1. To honour parents; 2. To honour the gods with the fruits of the earth;

3. Not to treat brutes with cruelty. Cicero makes the civilisation of mankind one of the beneficial effects of the Eleusinian mysteries. During the excavations carried on by the Greek archaeological society on the site of Eleusis in 1895, interesting ancient relics were discovered.

ELGIN MARBLES, derived chiefly from the Parthenon, a temple of Minerva, on the Acropolis at Athens, of which they formed part of the frieze and pediment, the work of Phidias, under the government of Pericles, about 440 B.C. Thomas earl of Elgin began the collection of these marbles during his mission to the Ottoman Porte, in 1802; and from him they were purchased by the British government for 35,000*l.* and placed in the British Museum, in 1816. The ship conveying them was wrecked near Cerigo, and Mr. W. R. Hamilton, who was on board, remained several months at Cerigo, and recovered them from the sea.

ELGUETA, N. Spain; near here the Carlists defeated the republicans under gen. Sorna, and took 600 prisoners, 5-6 Aug. 1873.

ELINGA, W. Spain. Here P. Scipio Africanus totally defeated the Carthaginians under Hasdrubal Gisco, which led to their expulsion from the country, 206 B.C.

ELIS, a Greek state termed the "Holy Land," in the Peloponnesus, founded by the Heracidae, 1103 B.C. Here Iphitus revived the Olympic games, 884, which were regularly celebrated after Corœbus gained the prize in 776. Elis surrendered many towns to the Spartans in war, 400. After various changes, Elis joined the Achæan league, 274; and with the rest of Greece was subjugated by the Romans in 146.

ELIZABETHAN STAGE SOCIETY, founded in 1895 to promote the performance of Shakespeare's plays in a manner resembling that of his time; "Twelfth Night" was so performed, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Poel, at Burlington Hall, London, 21 June; "Comedy of Errors," at Gray's Inn, 6 Dec. 1895. Other plays since.

ELL (so named from ulna, the arm) was fixed at 45 inches, by king Henry I. in 1101. The old French ell, or aune, was 46·790 inches.

ELLISON GALLERY. In April, 1860, Mrs. Elizabeth Ellison (in conformity with the wish of her deceased husband, Richard), presented to the South Kensington Museum a series of 50 original water-colour drawings, by the first masters.

ELLORA or ELORA, Central India; remarkable for its very ancient rock-cut temple; excavated according to Hindoo legends nearly 7000 years ago; but more probably about 800 A.D. The town was ceded to the British by Holkar in 1818, and transferred by them to the Nizam of the Deccan in 1822.

ELMINA (originally named La Mina, from the gold found here), and Dutch Guinea, W. Africa, were ceded by the Dutch government by treaty, signed Feb. 1872, and consolidated with the West African settlements; first governor, Mr., after Sir John, Pope Hennessy, April, 1872. See Ashantee.

EL-OBEID, Battle of, 3-5 Nov. 1883. See Soudan.

ELOPEMENT. A wife who departs from her husband, loses her dower by the statute of Westm. 1285—unless her husband, without coercion of the church, be reconciled to her. Earlier laws punished elopement with death when adultery followed.

ELPHIN (Ireland). St. Patrick founded a cathedral near Elphin, in the 5th century, and placed over it St. Asicus, whom he created bishop, and who soon after filled it with monks. After many centuries, Roscommon, Ardarn, Drumelive, and others of less note, were also annexed to Elphin, which became one of the richest sees in Ireland. It is valued in the king's books, by an extent returned 28 Eliz., at 103*l.* 18*s.* sterling. The see was united to Kilmore in 1841, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities act, passed Aug. 1833.

ELSINORE, Zealand, Denmark, formerly the station for receiving the Sound dues (which see). Population, 1910, about 15,000.

ELSWICK, a township of Newcastle-on-Tyne, the site of the great works of lord Armstrong & Co. The engineering department began about 1847, the ordnance works in 1857, see Cannon. Since then the naval construction has been largely carried on. About 20,000 workmen employed now. Great fire at the works, estimated damage, 150,000*l.*, 10 June, 1899.

EL-TEB, Battle of, 29 Feb. 1884. See Soudan.

ELY, an island in Cambridgeshire, on which a church was built about 673, by Etheldreda, queen of Egfrid, king of Northumberland; she also founded a religious house, filled it with virgins, and became herself first abbess. The 1200th anniversary was celebrated 17-21 Oct. 1873; about 60,000*l.* had then been spent on the restoration of the cathedral. The Danes ruined the convent about 870; but a monastery was built in 879, on which king Edgar and succeeding monarchs bestowed great privileges and grants of land; whereby it became the richest in England. Richard, the eleventh abbot, wishing to free himself from the bishop of Lincoln, made great interest with Henry I. to get Ely erected into a bishopric, 1108, and his successor Hervæus was the first prelate, 1109. It is valued in the king's books at 2134*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.*; present stated income, 5500*l.* Population of Isle of Ely 1901, 64,435; 1910 (est.), 74,950.

The octocentenary of the consecration of the Norman church, and of the translation of St. Etheldreda thereto from the Saxon church, celebrated by the archbishop of Canterbury, 17 Oct. 1906

RECENT BISHOPS.

- 1781. James York, died 26 Aug. 1808.
- 1808. Thomas Dampier, died 13 May, 1812.
- 1812. Bowyer Edward Sparke, died 4 April, 1836.
- 1836. Joseph Allen, died 20 March, 1845.
- 1845. Thomas Turton, died 7 Jan. 1864.
- 1864. Edward Harold Browne, translated to Winchester, Aug. 1873.
- 1873. James Russell Woodford, Aug.; died 24 Oct. 1885.
- 1885. Lord Alwyne Compton; resigned 1905.
- 1905. Frederick Henry Chase, appointed 4 July.

ELY CHAPEL, Holborn, London, erected in the 14th century, sold for 5250*l.*, 29 Jan. 1874; acquired by the R. C. fathers of the order of Charity, 1874; and finely restored at the expense of the duke of Norfolk and others, opened as St. Etheldreda's chapel, 23 June, 1876.

ELZEVI, or ELSEVIER, a family of printers, in Holland, whose reputation is based on fine pocket editions of the classics.

Louis, the founder, was born in 1540; began business at Leyden in 1583; he printed about 150 works, and died 4 Feb. 1617. His sons (especially Bonaventure) and grandsons, were celebrated for their work.

EMANCIPATION, see Roman Catholics and Slavery. The Emancipation Society for slaves lasted 1862-5.

EMBALMING. The ancient Egyptians believing that their souls, after many thousand years, would reinhabit their bodies, if preserved entire, embalmed the dead. Some of the bodies, called mummies, buried 3000 years ago, are still perfect. "The physicians embalmed Israel," 1689 B.C. Gen. 1. 2; see Mummies. Carbolic acid was successfully employed by professor Seely in America, in 1868.

The most perfect specimens of modern embalming are preserved in the museum of the royal college of surgeons, one being the body of the wife of Van Butchell, preserved by John Hunter by injecting camphorated spirits of wine, &c., into the arteries and veins; and the other the body of a young woman, who died about 1780 of consumption, in the Lock hospital. During the American War (1861-5), many soldiers' bodies were embalmed and sent home.

Improvements in embalming made by Prof. Laskowski of Geneva, 1885.

EMBANKMENTS of earth were erected by the ancients for preservation from their enemies and the inundations of the tide. Those of the Egyptians and Babylonians are described by Herodotus and Strabo. To the Romans are attributed the first dykes of Holland, and the embankments of Romney Marsh, considered to be the oldest in Britain. In 1250 Henry III. issued a writ enforcing the support of these works; and his successors followed his example. James I. greatly encouraged the embankment of the Thames. Sir W. Dugdale's "History of Embanking" first appeared in 1662; see Drainage, Levels, and Thames.

EMBARGO, from the Spanish embargar, to detain, applied to the restraining ships from sailing. This power is vested in the crown, but is rarely exercised except in extreme cases, and sometimes as a prelude to war. The most memorable instances of embargo were those for the prevention of corn going out of the kingdom in 1766; and for the detention of all Russian, Danish, and Swedish ships in the several ports of the kingdom, owing to the armed neutrality, 14 Jan. 1801; see Armed Neutrality.

EMBER WEEKS, instituted, it is said, by pope Callixtus I. (219-223), to implore the blessing of God on the produce of the earth by prayer and fasting, in which penitents used to sprinkle the ashes (embers) of humiliation on their heads. In the English church the Ember days are the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, after the following days—the first Sunday in Lent, Whit-sunday, 14 Sept. (Holy Cross), and 13 Dec. (St. Lucia).

EMBROIDERY is usually ascribed to the Phrygians; but the Sidonians excelled in it, and it is mentioned in 1491 B.C. Exodus xxxv. 35 and xxxviii. 23. See Bayeux Tapestry. Embroidery is now done by machinery. The first embroidery machine is said to have been invented by John Duncan of Glasgow in 1804. Heilmann's embroidery machine was patented by Köchlin. Berlin Wool-work has been much improved of late years by the production of more elegant patterns, first published by Mr. Wittich in Berlin, about 1810.

EMERALD, a precious stone, of a green colour, found in the East and in Peru. It has been erroneously alleged that there were no true emeralds in Europe before the conquest of Peru; but there is one in the Paris Museum, taken from the mitre of pope Julius II. who died in 1513, and Peru was not conquered till 1545. It is stated that there were mines at Gebel Zabara worked by Egyptians, 1800 B.C.

EMERGENCY MEN, a name given to the more energetic members of the Irish Defence Association; and especially to the men engaged in carrying out evictions in Ireland. See Mansion House Funds, 1881.

EMESA, now Hems, Syria, renowned for a temple of the sun, the priest of which, Bassianus, was proclaimed emperor with the name Heliogabalus or Elagabalus, 218. His atrocities led to his assassination, 11 March, 222.

EMIGRANTS. The French aristocracy and clergy (émigrés) began to leave their country in July, 1789, at the breaking out of the revolution: their estates were confiscated in Dec. A large number returned in 1802, by an amnesty granted after the peace of Amiens. Many were indemnified after the restoration in 1815.

EMIGRATION. Phœnician and Greek emigrants colonised the coasts of the Mediterranean and the Black Sea; see Magna Græcia, Marseilles, &c. The discovery of America opened a vast field for emigration, which was restrained by Charles I. in 1637. It has been greatly encouraged since 1819. Regulations for emigration were made in 1831, and in Jan. 1840, the Colonial Land and Emigration Board was established. Emigration much promoted through want of employment in London, 1869-70; from Ireland, by act passed, 1883. Much emigration from Great Britain and Germany to America, 1881-5. Fare of steerage passengers from Britain to America by steamers reduced to about 4*l.* Jan. 1883.

The "Order of the Sons of St. George," at Philadelphia, which was established to succour emigrants, still exists. (See under George, St.) It published a letter dissuading unsuitable emigration 31 July, 1874

A tax of ss. per head levied in United States on immigrants; act passed by congress in opposition to the govt. and steam-ship companies . . . Aug. "

EMPIRE. Empire City, a name given to New York. Empire Club, Constitutional, established 10 Oct. 1881, founded 1883, closed 1886. Empire Route to the east, by the Canadian Pacific Railway; term applied 1887. Empire Day, inaugurated 24 May, 1904.

EMPIRICS, a sect of physicians, formed in the 3rd century before Christ, who contended that all reasoning respecting the animal economy was useless, and that experience and observation were the only foundations of medicine. The sect adopted the principles of Acron of Agrigentum, who flourished about 430 B.C. Empiricism, the name applied to a school in philosophy, which admits of nothing as true but what is the result of experience.

EMPLOYERS OF LABOUR, National Federation of Associated, formed in London about 10 Dec. 1873. The founders were said to employ about 2,000,000, principally in N.W. and N. England. Their object was to counteract the influence of trade unions. The first annual meeting held 24 Feb. 1875.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT (to make compensation for personal injuries suffered by workmen not by their own fault), passed for 7 years, 7 Sept. 1880; effects neutral (1884). New act passed 24 Dec. 1888. The stringent application of the spirit of these laws by the decision of the house of lords in the case of Smith v. Charles Baker & Sons on appeal was strongly enforced 21 July, 1891.

New bill introduced, 20 Feb. 1893; re-introduced 8 Nov.; the commons reject a clause for enabling workmen to contract out of the act by arrangement with employers, 10 Nov.; the clause maintained by the lords, 29 Jan.; the bill withdrawn 20 Feb. 1894

EMPRESS OF INDIA (Imperatrix Indiæ), addition to the royal titles of the late Queen Victoria, proclaimed in London, 1 May, 1876.

ENAMELLING was practised by the Egyptians, Chinese, and other nations, and was known in England in the time of the Saxons. At Oxford is an enamelled jewel, which belonged to Alfred, and which, as appears by the inscription, was made by his order, in his reign, about 887. Limoges enamelled ware was popular in the 16th century. Magnificent specimens by Lepec, Elkington, Emanuel, and others, appeared at the exhibition at Paris, 1867. See Mosaic. On 19 June, 1862, madame Rachel (Levison or Leverson) sued captain Carnegie for 928*l.* for enamelling his wife's face, and was nonsuited; see Trials, 1868. She was convicted of fraud in 1878; and died in prison 12 Oct. 1880.

ENCÆNIA, Greek festivals kept on days on which cities were built and temples consecrated; and in later times, as at Oxford, at the celebration or commemoration of founders and benefactors. Oldisworth. The public commemoration at Oxford suspended in 1875; restored, 21 June, 1876. They were the origin of church-wakes in England, about 600. They were also feasts celebrated by the Jews on the 25th of the ninth month, in commemoration of the Maccabees cleansing the temple, which had been polluted by Antiochus Epiphanes, 131 B.C.

ENCAUSTIC PAINTING, enamelling by fire. Painting with burnt wax is said to have been known to Praxiteles about 360 B.C. This art was revived by M. Bachelier, 1749, by count Caylus, 1765, and by Miss Greenland, 1785 and 1792.

ENCLOSURE, see Inclosure.

ENCRATITES, followers of Tatian, about 170, denounced marriage, and abstained from flesh, and from wine even at the Lord's supper.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT, passed July 1849, to enable owners of land or leases in Ireland, subject to encumbrance, to apply to commissioners appointed under it to direct a sale of such property. These commissioners held their first court in Dublin, 24 Oct. 1849, and their last 28 July, 1858, a new court being established under the Landed Estates act. The number of estates sold, up to 1858, was 2380, producing twenty-two millions of pounds. In 1854 a similar act was passed for the West Indies.

ENCYCLICAL LETTER, see Pope, and Rome, 1864 et seq.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA or CYCLOPÆDIA, a general dictionary of art, science, and literature. This name has been given to a work by Abulpharagius in the 13th century.

"De Proprietatibus Rerum," an encyclopædic work in Latin, attributed to Bartholomæus Anglicus, a Franciscan (proved to be incorrectly named Glantville), was written about 1248 and 1267, and translated into several languages. The first English version, by John of Trevisa, a Wycliffite, in 1397, was printed between 1495-1582, and was doubtless the source from which Shakespeare, Spenser, and other writers derived much of their knowledge of natural history, &c. "Medieval lore: being classified Gleanings," from this work, edited by Robert Steele, published, 1893. Chinese cyclopædia, 600 vols. (all the valuable books then existing), printed by order of the emperor between . . . 1661-1721

ENDERBY LAND, see Southern Continent.

ENDOSMOSIS. M. Dutrochet, about 1826, found that if two fluids, gases or vapours, of unequal density, are separated by an animal or vegetable membrane, the denser will attract the less dense through the medium. This property he called endosmose, when the attraction is from the outside to the inside, and exosmose when it operates from the inside to the outside. Many natural phenomena are thus more clearly understood. Brande.

ENDOWED SCHOOL COMMISSION (consisting of lord Lyttelton, canon Robinson, and others), was appointed under the act 32-33 Vict. c. 56 (2 Aug. 1869). It threw open many endowments to the nation, and carried out reforms, being frequently much opposed. By an act passed 7 Aug. 1874, its duties were transferred to the charity commissioners.

ENDOWED SCHOOLS ACT, containing the "Conscience Clause," passed 1860; another similar act passed 2 Aug. 1869. A committee reported on the working of the act, June, 1887.

ENERGY. In an address to the British Association at York, 1 Sept. 1881, sir William Thomson described the sources of all the energy in nature available to man for the production of mechanical effect, as tides, food, fuel, wind and rain, all except the tides derived from the sun.

ENTFIDA CASE, see Tunis.

ENFIELD, N. Middlesex; a manor belonging to the duchy of Lancaster, is mentioned in Domesday, and was given to De Mandeville by William I. after 1066. After various changes it became the property of the crown by the marriage of Mary, heiress of the Bohuns, to Henry duke of Lancaster, afterwards king Henry IV. 1399. Edward VI. gave it to his sister Elizabeth, who resided here in 1552, in a palace, part of which still remains. The grammar school was founded about 1586. The ancient chase was dischased and enclosed, after 1 Jan. 1779. Population, 1901, 42,738; 1910 (est.), 60,000.

Sir Redvers Buller presented with an address and a silver inkstand by the Enfield ladies . 23 Sept. 1901

ENFIELD MUSKET, see Fire-arms.

ENGEN, Baden. Here Moreau defeated the Austrians, 3 May, 1800.

ENGHIEN or STEENKIRK (S. W. Belgium). Here the British under William III. were defeated by the French under marshal Luxembourg, 24 July, 1692.—The duc d'Enghien, a descendant of the great Conde, was seized in Baden by order of Bonaparte, conveyed to Vincennes, and, after a hasty trial, shot by torch-light, immediately after condemnation, 21 March, 1804. The body was exhumed, 20 March, 1816.

ENGINEERS. Military, formerly called Trench-masters. Sir William Pelham officiated as trench-master in 1622; the chief engineer was called camp-master-general in 1634. Capt. Thomas Rudd had the rank of chief engineer to the king about 1650. The corps of royal engineers was formerly a civil corps, but was made a military force, and directed to rank with the artillery, 25 April, 1787. It has a colonel-in-chief, 16 colonels-commandant, and 16 colonels. Civil Engineering became important in the middle of the 18th century, when Smeaton began the Eddystone lighthouse, and Brindley the Bridgewater canal. Since then the Rennies, Telford, the Stephensons and Brunels, Locke, and others have constructed breakwaters, docks, bridges, railways, tunnels, &c., which are the marvel of our age.

"Engineering is the art of directing the great sources of power in nature for the use and convenience of man." (Thos. Trelgold, died 1820.) The first society of Civil Engineers formed by Smeaton and others, afterwards termed the Smeatonian Society of Civil Engineers.

Institution of Civil Engineers established 2 Jan. 1818; obtained a charter, 3 June, 1828; 572 members April, 1889.

Institution of Mechanical Engineers, which had its headquarters in Birmingham, moved to London, 1877; annual meetings are held; established 1847. The Society of Engineers established for the advance of the science and practice of engineering, May 1854; John Corry Fell, president, 1899. Annual meetings held.

Civil and Mechanical Engineers' Society founded 1859.

Isambard Kingdom Brunel, projector of the Great Eastern, aged 53, died 15 Sept.; Robert Stephenson, railway engineer, aged 59, died 12 Oct. Engineers' Amalgamated Society, in 1867, consisted of above 30,000 members; annual income, 86,000l.; disbursed to disabled workmen, &c., about 50,000l.; amassed capital, about 125,000l.

ENGLAND (from Angles and land, land), so named, it is said, by Egbert, first king of the English, in a general council held at Winchester, 829; or by Athelstan, 925. See Anglo-Saxons. England was united to Wales, 1283; to Scotland in 1603; they have had the same legislature since 1707, when the three were styled Great Britain. James I. first adopted the title of king of England, Scotland, afterwards Great Britain, France, and Ireland. After the treaty of Amiens, signed 27 March, 1802, France was omitted from the royal style. Ireland was incorporated with them, by the act of legislative union, 1 Jan. 1801, as the United Kingdom of Great Britain, France, and Ireland. The British empire is computed to contain about 11,500,000 square miles of territory, with 410,000,000 inhabitants in 1905. Statistical details are given under the respective headings, Army, Navy, Revenue, Population, &c. For previous history, see Britain, Histories of England, by Kapin (in English), 1725-31; Thomas Carte, 1747-55; David Hume, 1755-62; Tobias Smollett, 1757-65; John Lingard, 1819-30; Charles Knight, 1856-62; J. R. Green, 1873-80. Parts by T. B. Macaulay, Earl Stanhope, J. A. Frende, Miss H. Martineau, and others. "The Victoria History of the Counties of England," a national survey of England at the commencement of the 20th century, Mr. H. Arthur Doubleday and Mr. Laurence Gomme, joint editors, supported by a committee, the marqu. of Lorne and many others, first series, illustrated, with maps, &c., issued March, 1899. See Administrations, Chronicles, Electric Telegraph, Imperialism, Ireland, Parliament, Reform, Revenue, Style, under the names of towns and cities, and of the various other subjects not dealt with here.  Letter from the queen to the empire:—

 (London Gazette, 2 Feb.)

"OSBORNE, January 26, 1892.

"I must once again give expression to my deep sense of the loyalty and affectionate sympathy evinced by my subjects in every part of my empire on an occasion more sad and tragical than any but one which has befallen me and mine, as well as the nation. The overwhelming misfortune of my dearly loved grandson having been thus suddenly cut off in the flower of his age, full of promise for the future, amiable and gentle, and endearing himself to all, renders it hard for his sorely stricken parents, his dear young bride, and his fond grandmother to bow in submission to the inscrutable decrees of Providence.

"The sympathy of millions, which has been so touchingly and visibly expressed, is deeply gratifying at such a time, and I wish, both in my own name and that of my children, to express from my heart, my warm gratitude to all.

"These testimonies of sympathy with us, and appreciation of my dear grandson, whom I loved as a son, and whose devotion to me was as great as that of a son, will be a help and consolation to me and mine in our affliction.

"My bereavements during the last thirty years of my reign have indeed been heavy. Though the labours, anxieties, and responsibilities inseparable from my position have been great, yet it is my earnest prayer that God may continue to give me health and strength to work for the good and happiness of my dear Country and Empire while life lasts. "VICTORIA, R.I."

ENGLISH CHURCH UNION, established 1860, after the protestant riots at St. George's-in-the-East, when it consisted of 210 members; there were about 40,000 in 1910, 4,000 clergy, 36,000 lay communicants. Its object is to defend the Church of England and its ancient constitution, doctrine and liturgy, and her right to regulate her own affairs, and determine spiritual questions in spiritual courts; and has supported clergymen who have suffered for maintaining these opinions. President, Lord Halifax, vice-presidents include 31 bishops. Annual meetings are held. The union earnestly protested against the Welsh disestablishment bill, May, 1894. Active in opposition to the Education Bill of 1902 and 1903; the re-marriage of divorced persons; and the modification or displacement of the Athanasian creed (which see). Organ: The Church Union Gazette.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE is traced from the FRISIAN variety of the Teutonic or Germanic branch of the great Indo-European family. "The English tongue possesses a veritable power of expression, such as, perhaps, never stood at the command of any other language of man." Grimm.

"ENGLISHMAN," a newspaper edited by Dr. Kenaley, published in April, 1874, soon after the conviction of the claimant of the Tichborne estates. For its libellous character, the editor was disbenched by the society of Gray's Inn, 1 Aug. 1874.

ENGRAVING on signets is mentioned Exod. xxviii. 11. Engraving on plates and wood began about the middle of the 15th century. Engraving on glass was perfected by Bourdier, of Paris, 1799. The copyright to engravings has been protected by several statutes; among the principal are the acts 16 & 18 Geo. III. 1775 and 1777; and the acts 7 & 8 Vict. 6 Aug. 1844, and 15 Vict. 28 May, 1852. A process of enlarging and reducing engravings by means of sheets of vulcanised indiarubber, was shown by the electro-printing block company in 1860; see Lithography and Photo-Galvanography.

ENGRAVING ON COPPER. Prints from engraved copper-plates made their appearance about 1450, and were first produced in Germany. Masso, surnamed Finiguerra, is considered to have been the first Italian engraver, about 1440. (See Niello.)

The earliest date known of a copper-plate engraving is 1461.

Rolling-presses for working the plates invented in 1545. Of the art of etching on copper by means of aqua-fortis, Francis Mazzuoli, or Parmegiano, is the reputed inventor, about 1532. De Piles.

Etching was practised by Albert Dürer, and most especially by Rembrandt. Its revival began about 1860. Eminent modern etchers:—Messrs Lalanne, P. G. Hamerton, F. Seymour Haden, Bracquemond, Jacquemart, Martial, and others. The Etching Club was established in 1838.

Royal Society of Painter-etchers formed; opened an exhibition, April, 1881; annual exhibitions, 27 Feb. 1893, et seq.

ENGRAVING ON WOOD, long known in China, began in Europe with the brief-mahlers or manufacturers of playing-cards, about 1400 (see Printing). The art is referred by some to a Florentine, and by others to Reuss, a German; it was greatly improved by Dürer (1471-1528) and Lucas van Leyden (1497). It was much improved in England by Bewick and his brother, and pupils, Nesbitt, Anderson, &c., 1789 et seq. The earliest wood engraving which has reached our times is one representing St. Christopher carrying the infant Jesus over the sea; it bears date 1423.

International society of wood engravers; 2nd annual dinner, 27 April, 1894. Mr. George Dalziel, eminent wood engraver, died, aged 86, 4 Aug. 1902.

ENGRAVING ON SOFT STEEL, to be hardened afterwards, was introduced into England, 1819.

John Pye, "father of English landscape engraving," born 1782; died 6 Feb. 1874.

MEZZOTINTO is said to have been discovered by col. von Siegen, who engraved a portrait of princess Amelia of Hesse in mezzotinto in 1643; it was improved by prince Rupert in 1648; and by sir Christopher Wren, about 1662. See British Museum, 1902.

Aquatinta, by which a soft and beautiful effect is produced, was invented by the celebrated French artist, St. Non, about 1662; he communicated his invention, to Le Prince. Barabbe of Paris was distinguished for his improvements in this kind of engraving, 1763. Chiar-oscuro engraving originated with the Germans, and was first practised by Mair, one of whose prints bears date 1491 (see Zinc, &c.).

New method of reproducing and printing illustrations, combining the intaglio or photogravure process of making engraved plates with the lithographic process of printing, devised and worked out by sir Jos. Wilson Swan, D.Sc., F.R.S., and his son, Mr. Donald Cameron-Swan. See Times, 28 Aug. 1906.

ENIGMARELLE, an automaton constructed of 365 different parts, actuated by electricity. The figure rides a bicycle, writes its name upon a black-board, and performs various other actions similar to a human being. Exhibited at the London Hippodrome, June, 1905.

ENLISTMENT. No persons enlisting as soldiers or sailors are to be sworn in before a magistrate in less than twenty-four hours after, and they are then at liberty to withdraw upon their returning the enlistment or bounty money, and 21s. costs. Enlistment is now entirely voluntary. In 1847 the term of enlistment was limited to ten years for the infantry, and twelve years for the cavalry, artillery, and royal marines; and in 1867, to twelve years; frequently altered since. See Army, 1867 and 1879, and Foreign Enlistment.

ENNISKILLEN (N. W. Ireland). This town made an obstinate defence against the army of Elizabeth, 1595, and resisted James II., 1689. 1500 Enniskilleners met his general M'Carthy at Newton Butler with 6000 men (of whom 3000 were slain, and nearly all the rest made prisoners), they losing but twenty men, 30 July, 1689. The dragoon regiment, the 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons, was originally recruited here. A foot regiment, the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, takes its name from the town.

ENOCH. BOOK OF, an apocryphal work, quoted by the fathers, disappeared about the 8th century. A MS. Ethiopic version was found in Abyssinia by Bruce, and brought to England in 1773. Of this, archbishop Laurence published an English translation in 1821, and the Ethiopic text in 1838. Mr. R. H. Charles published in 1893 an emended English translation from prof. Dillmann's Ethiopic text, with introduction, notes, &c.

ENSILAGE (from silo, a pit), a system of preserving corn and green fodder for cattle in pits made air and water tight, practised by French and other agriculturists; described by M. Goffart and by professor Thorold Rogers, M.P., in his "Ensilage," published 1883. Ensilage reported successful at Peckforton, Cheshire, 27 Nov. 1883; commended by the prince of Wales and others at a meeting of the Institute of Agriculture, 17 March, 1884; ensilage found successful in India, 1884. Favourable reports of a private practical and scientific commission issued, 5 Aug. 1885 and 14 May, 1886; opinions differ as to economy. Ensilage with building silos practised in 1887.

ENSISHEIM (E. France). Here Turenne defeated the Imperial army, and expelled it from Alsace, 4 Oct. 1674.

ENTAIL of estates began with the statute of Westminster, 1285. Subsequent legislation broke the entail in cases of treason (1534), when the estate is to revert to the crown, and of bankruptcy (1833 and 1849), when it is to be sold. The law of entail in Scotland was amended in 1875.

ENTENTE CORDIALE, a popular term used to designate the feelings of mutual regard and good-will which have been developed recently between France and England, due in a large measure to the efforts of King Edward VII. to establish a better understanding between the people of the two nations, in which the King has been cordially supported by M. Loubet, president of the French Republic. The visit of King Edward to Paris, 1-4 May, 1903, and the cordial reception accorded to M. Loubet on his visit to London, 7-9 July, 1903, prepared the way for the Anglo-French agreement, signed 8 April, 1904, which amicably solved questions that had been a source of friction and distrust between the two countries. This good understanding was further cemented by the efforts of both powers to maintain neutrality during the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5 (which see), and the good-will and enthusiasm evoked by the visit of the British Atlantic fleet to Brest, 10-17 July, 1905, and the return visit of the French Northern squadron to Portsmouth, 7-14 Aug., 1905. See England.

ENTOMOLOGY, the science of insects, now mainly based upon the arrangement of Linnæus, 1739. Ray's "Methodus Insectorum," 1705; "Insectorum Historia," 1710. The Entomological Society of London was instituted 3 May, 1833; was made Royal, Aug. 1885. Miss Ormerod, honorary consulting entomologist to the Royal Agricultural Society, 1882-1892; her 24th last annual report respecting insects issued March, 1901 (she died 19 July, 1901, aged 73).

ENVELOPES for letters are mentioned by Swift, 1726. Stamped adhesive envelopes came into general use shortly after the establishment of the penny postal system, 10 Jan. 1840. Machinery for their manufacture was patented by Mr. George Wilson in 1844; and by Messrs. E. Hill and Warren de la Rue, 17 March, 1845.

ENVOYS AT COURTS, in dignity below ambassadors, enjoy the protection, but not the ceremonies of ambassadors. Envoys extraordinary are of modern date. Wicquefort.

EOZOON CANADENSE, asserted to be the earliest known form of life, and a species of foraminifera, found by professor J. W. Dawson, of Montreal, in Laurentian limestone in 1858, see Geology.

EPACT (Greek, added) is the excess of the solar month above the lunar synodical month, 1 day, 11 hours, 15 minutes, 57 seconds, the lunar month being only 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, 3 seconds; and the excess of the solar year above the lunar synodical year (nearly 11 days), the lunar year being 354 days. The epact of any year indicates the moon's age on the 1st Jan. in that year. The number of the Gregorian epact for 1906, 5; 1907, 16; 1908, 27; 1909, 8; 1910, 19; 1911, 30.

EPERNAY (N.E. France), seat of the trade in champagne, was taken from the League by Henry IV., 26 July, 1592, when marshal Armand Biron was killed.

EPHESUS (in Asia Minor), a city said to have been founded by the Carians and Leleges, burnt by the Amazons, rebuilt by the Ionians about 1043 B.C. It was subdued by Cyrus in 544 B.C.; revolted from the Persians, 501 B.C. and was destroyed by an earthquake in A.D. 17. See Diana, Temple of, and Seven Churches. Paul preached here A.D. 55, 56 (Acts xviii. xix.) His epistle to the Ephesians is dated A.D. 64. The third general council was held here in 431. After investigation, begun in 1863, Mr. J. T. Wood discovered the site of the temple of Diana in April, 1870; and about 60 tons of marble were shipped at Smyrna for the British Museum, Jan. 1872, part of which arrived in the summer. The site of the temple was purchased for the British Museum. Mr. J. T. Wood resumed his excavations, summer, 1883. Further excavations by Mr. G. D. Hogarth, Oct. 1904; complete ground plan of temple of Diana discovered (see Diana).

EPHORI, powerful magistrates of Sparta, five in number, said to have been first created by Theopompus to control the royal power, about 757 B.C.

EPICUREAN PHILOSOPHY. Epicurus of Gargettus, near Athens, about 306 B.C., taught that the greatest good consists in peace of mind springing from virtue, as tending to prevent disquiet: but the name epicurean is frequently given to those who derive happiness from sensual pleasure. (See Atoms.)

EPIDAUROS (Greece), celebrated for the temple of Asclepius, or Æsculapius, god of medicine, and enriched by gifts from persons healed. The Romans sent an embassy to seek the help of the god during a pestilence, and his worship was introduced at Rome, 293 B.C. The temple was visited by Æmilius Paulus, after his conquest of Macedonia, 167 B.C.

EPIDEMIC PREVENTION ACT, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 59, passed 25 Aug. 1883.

EPIDEMIOLGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON, established in 1850; has done valuable work. Dr. Charles Creighton's "History of Epidemics in Britain," 3 vols. 1895.

EPIGRAMS. Marcus Valerius Martialis, the Latin epigrammatist, who flourished about A.D. 83, is allowed to have excelled all others, ancient or modern. The following epigram on Christ's turning water into wine (John iii.) is an example:—"Vidit et erubuit lymphica pudica Deum." "The modest water saw its God, and blushed." Crashaw (died 1650).

EPIPHANY (appearance), a feast (Jan. 6), termed Twelfth Day, celebrates the manifestation of the Saviour, by the appearance of the star which conducted the Magi to the place where he was to be found; early observed, but became a separate feast, 813. Whately.

EPIRUS (Northern Greece). Its early history is very obscure.

The first Pyrrhus (Neoptolemus) settled in Epirus, after the Trojan war, 1170 B.C., and was killed in the temple of Delphi	about B.C. 1165

EPISTEMOLOGY. A science of the sciences.

EPISTLES or LETTERS. An Egyptian letter about 1300 B.C. is translated in "Records of the Past," vol. 6. A letter was sent to Joab by David by the hands of Uriah, about 1035 B.C. (2 Sam. xi. 14); see under article Bible. Horace Walpole, renowned for his letters, was born 5 Oct. 1717; died 2 March, 1797. The collection entitled "Elegant Epistles," commencing with Cicero, was published in 1790. It ends with an essay on letter writing by Dr. Johnson.

EPITAPHS were inscribed on tombs by the Egyptians, Jews, Greeks, and Romans. Mr. T. J. Pettigrew published a collection entitled "Chronicles of the Tombs," in 1857.

EPITHALAMIUM, a nuptial song at marriage. Tisias, the lyric poet, is said to have been the first writer of one. He received the name of Stesichorus, from the alterations made by him in music and dancing, about 536 B.C. Bossuet.

EPOCHS, points of time made remarkable by some event, from which subsequent years are reckoned by historians and chronologers; see Eras.

EQUESTRIAN ORDER in Rome was established with Romulus, about 750 B.C.; see Knight-hood.

EQUINOX. When the sun in his progress passes through the equator in one of the equinoctial points, the day and night are equal all over the globe. This occurs twice in the year: about 21 March, the vernal equinox, and 22 Sept., the autumnal equinox. The equinoctial points move backwards about 50 seconds yearly, requiring 25,000 years to accomplish a complete revolution. This is called the precession of the equinoxes, which is said to have been observed by the ancient astronomers.

EQUITY, COURTS OF, are those of the lord chancellor, the vice-chancellors, and the master of the rolls, their office being to correct the operations of the literal text of the law, and supply its defects by reasonable construction not admissible in a court of law. The supreme court of session in Scotland combines the functions of law and equity. In 1865 equity powers were conferred on the county courts for cases respecting sums under 500l. See Supreme Court.

ERASTIANISM, the opinions of Thomas Lieber (latinised Erastus), a German physician (1524-83), who taught that the church had no right to exclude any person from church ordinances, to inflict excommunication, &c. Persons who acknowledge the jurisdiction of the civil power in spiritual matters and the law of patronage are now termed Erastians.

ERASURES. By order of sir John Romilly, master of the rolls, in 1855, no document corrected by erasure with the knife was to be henceforth received in his court. The errors must be corrected with the pen. It is so in the army courts.

ERFURT (Central Germany), was founded in 476; and its university established about 1390. Erfurt was ceded to Prussia in 1802. It capitulated to Murat, when 14,000 Prussian troops surrendered, 16 Oct. 1806. In this city Napoleon and Alexander met, and offered peace to England, 27 Sept. 1808. The French retreated to Erfurt from Leipzig, 18 Oct. 1813. A German parliament met here in March and April, 1850. Population, 1900, 85,190; 1905, 98,849.

ERICSSON'S CALORIC ENGINE, see Heat, note.

ERIVAN (Armenia), in the 16th century the residence of the shahs of Persia, was taken by the Turks in 1553 and 1582; but recovered by Abbas the Great, 1604. After being several times captured, it was ceded to Persia, 1769. It was taken by Paskiewitch in 1827, and annexed to Russia by treaty in Feb. 1828.

ERYTHREA, an Italian colony on the Red Sea, established by various decrees, 2 Jan. 1890-1901. Military occupation to be restricted to Massowah, announced, May, 1897. Area about 46,000 sq. m. Population, estimated 1910, 480,000. See Massowah and Italy, 1898, and 26 Nov. 1901.

ERZERUM (Asiatic Turkey), a city built by Theodosius II., 415; taken by the Seljuk Turks in the 13th century, and by the Ottoman Turks in 1517. It was captured by the Russian general Paskiewitch, June, 1829, but restored in 1830. It was almost totally destroyed by earthquakes, 2 June to 17 July, 1859. Population 40,000.

ESCHEAT, the reverting of any land or tenements to the lord of the fee, or to the state, through failure of heirs; formerly also through attainder of the tenant, which last was abolished by the Felony Act, 1870.

ESCOBRERA BAY, BATTLE OF; see Spain, 11 Oct. 1873.

ESCURIAL, properly ESCORIAL (25 miles N.W. of Madrid), the magnificent palace of the sovereigns of Spain, termed the eighth wonder of the world, was commenced by Philip II. in 1563, and completed in 1586, at a cost of about 10,000,000*l*. It is built in the form of a gridiron in honour of St. Lawrence, on whose day (10 Aug. 1557) the Spaniards gained the victory of St. Quentin. According to Francisco de los Santos the total length of all its rooms and apartments is above 120 English miles. The Escorial comprises a church, mausoleum (where the monarchs of Spain are buried), monastery, palace, library, and museum. It was struck by lightning and caught fire 11.30 p.m. 1 Oct. 1872, and was much damaged; but the grand library and other treasures were preserved.

ESPARTO, from the Latin spartum, stipa tenacissima of Linneus, a Spanish grass used by Romans for whip-thongs, and now largely employed in paper-making. In 1856 about 50 tons, in 1870 above 100,000 tons, and in 1902, 198,292 tons, were imported into Britain. The price has risen considerably in recent years.

ESPERANTO, an artificial key-language designed as a means of international communication. It is the invention of Dr. Zamenhof, a native of Grodno, in Russian Poland, who first produced his system in 1887 by the publication of "An International Language, by Dr. Esperanto." The leading characteristics of Esperanto are "its simplicity of construction, the facility by which it may be acquired, and the practical ease and euphony of its pronunciation." The alphabet is composed of 28 letters, each letter having an invariable sound; the vocabulary consists of about 900 roots selected from the most familiar languages. Since 1897 Esperanto has greatly increased in use, societies for its propagation have been formed, and there are now (1910) some 1700 Esperanto groups, 188 in Great Britain; the first, that of Keighley, in Yorkshire, being founded in 1902. The British Esperanto Association was founded 14 Oct. 1904. It publishes a journal, the British Esperantist.

ESPIERRES (Belgium). At Pont-à-Chin, near this village, the French, under Pichegru, attacked the allied English and Austrian army (100,000 men), commanded by the duke of York, and were repulsed after a long and desperate engagement, losing the advantages gained by the victory at Turcoing, 22 May, 1794.

ESPRIT, SAINT (or Holy Ghost), the title of an order of knighthood, founded by Henry III. of France in 1578, and abolished in 1791.

ESQUIRES, among the Greeks and Romans, were armour-bearers to, or attendants on a knight. Blount. In England the king created esquires by putting about their necks the collars of SS, and bestowing upon them a pair of silver spurs. John de Kingston was created a squire by patent, 13 Richard II., 1389-90. There are now legally esquires by birth, by creation, and by holding some office, but the title is very loosely given by courtesy.

"ESSAYS AND REVIEWS," by six clergymen and one layman of the church of England (the Rev. Drs. Fred. Temple and Rowland Williams, professor Baden Powell, H. B. Wilson, Mark Pattison, and professor B. Jowett, and Mr. C. W. Goodwin) were published in an 8vo vol. in March, 1860. The book did not excite much attention at first, but having been severely censured for heterodox views by nearly all the bishops and many of the clergy, it created much excitement in 1861, and was condemned by convocation 24 June, 1864. The ecclesiastical courts sentenced the revs. R. Williams and H. B. Wilson to suspension for one year, and costs, 15 Dec. 1862; but on appeal the sentence was reversed by the judicial committee of the privy council, 8 Feb. 1864. The election of Dr. Temple to the see of Exeter was much opposed on account of his essay in this collection; see Church of England, 1860 and Broad Church.

ESSEN, a town in Rhenish Prussia, which began with the Benedictine nunnery, about 873. Among the iron and steel manufactories, the chief are those of Krupp, established 1810, in which were employed 74 men in 1848, and 46,000 in 1902, when the works contained 1,600 furnaces, 600 steam-hammers, 497 steam-engines, and other great apparatus. A Christian miners' congress held, 424 delegates present; opposed to the social democrats, 26 Aug. 1894. See Cannon. Population, 1900, 118,863; 1905, 231,360. See Westphalia, 1889.

ESTE, HOUSE OF. Boniface, count of Lucca and duke of Tuscany, about 811, is said to have descended from Odoacer, king of Italy. From Boniface sprang Albert Azzo II. marquis of Italy and lord of Este, born about 996, who married—first, Cunegonda of the house of Guelf, by whom he had Guelf, duke of Bavaria, the ancestor of the house of Brunswick (see Bavaria and Brunswick); and secondly, Gersonda, by whom he had Fulk, the ancestor of the Estes, dukes of Ferrara and Modena.

ESTELLA, N. Spain. In a conflict at Peña Mura, near this place, 25-28 June, 1874, the republicans were repulsed, and their general, Manuel de Concha (aged 66), killed, by the Carlists, 27 June.

ESTHONIA or REVEL, a Russian province, said to have been conquered by the Teutonic knights in the 12th century; after various changes it was ceded to Sweden by the treaty of Oliva, 3 May, 1660, and finally to Russia by the peace of Nystadt, 30 Aug. 1721, having been conquered by Peter in 1710. Population, 1908, 459,700.

ÉTATS, see States.

ETCHING, see Engraving.

ETHER was known to the earliest chemists. Nitric ether was first discovered by Kunkel, in 1681; and muriatic ether, from the chloride of tin, by Courtauvau, in 1759. Acetic ether was discovered by count Lauraguais, same year; and hydriotic ether was first prepared by Gay-Lussac. The phosphoric ether was obtained by M. Boullay. The discovery that by inhaling ether the patient is rendered unconscious of pain, is due to Dr. C. T. Jackson, of Boston, U.S. Mr. Thomas Morton, of the same place, first introduced it into surgical practice, under Dr. Jackson's directions (1846); see Chloroform, and Amylene. The drinking of ether as an intoxicant greatly increased in the north of Ireland, was checked by the enforcement of the Poisons Act of 1870, in regard to its sale, Oct. 1891. The term "ether" was applied to the transparent celestial space by the German astronomer Encke, about 1829, when studying the elements of Pons' comet, discovered in 1818. Ether is now believed by scientists to be the medium by which heat, light, electricity, &c., are transmitted through space. See Wireless Telegraphy under Electricity, 1897 et seq.

ETHICS (Greek term for Morals). The works of Plato, Aristotle, and Confucius, contain heathen systems; the New Testament is that of Christianity. Paley's Moral Philosophy appeared in 1785, and Whewell's Elements of Morality in 1845. An Ethical Society existed in London, 1890. Many notable books on the subject have been written.

ETHIOPIA. The name was applied anciently rather vaguely to countries the inhabitants of which had sun-burnt complexions, in Asia and Africa; but is now considered to apply properly to the modern Nubia, Sennaar, and Northern Abyssinia. Many pyramids exist at Napata, the capital of Meroë, the civilised part of ancient Ethiopia.

ETHNIKE HETAIRIA, an enthusiastic Greek national society, founded Nov. 1894; a revolutionary movement made by them in Macedonia summer, 1896; their forces were reported to have begun the war with Turkey. See Greece, 10 April, 1897, et seq.; denied by them, Dec. 1897.

ETHNOLOGY, a branch of Anthropology, is defined as the science "which determines the distinctive characters of the persistent modifications of mankind, their distribution, and the causes of the modifications and distribution." The study of the relations of the different divisions of mankind to each other is of recent origin. Balbi's Ethnographic Atlas was published in 1826, and Dr. Prichard's great work, Researches on the Physical History of Mankind, 1841-7. The Ethnological Society, established in 1843, published transactions. On 17 Jan. 1871, it was amalgamated with the Anthro-logical Society (which see), and named the Anthropological Institute. Dr. R. G. Latham's works, on the Ethnology of the British Empire, appeared in 1851-2. Professor T. H. Huxley gave lectures on Ethnology at the Royal Institution, London, in 1866-7. Annual reports of the Bureau of Ethnology, Washington, U.S., began to be published, 1879. The International Congress of the Ethnographic Sciences met at Paris Sept. 30, 1889.

ETHYL, a compound radicle, a colourless gas, with a slightly ethereal odour, a compound of carbon and hydrogen, first obtained in the free state by professor (aft. air; died 9 Aug. 1839) Edw. Frankland in 1849. Several of its compounds with metals take fire in the air.

ETIENNE, St., important industrial town, 36 miles S.W. of Lyons. Second largest coal-field in France. First railways in France were built from here, 1828-1831. Population in 1910, 170,000.

ETNA, MOUNT (Sicily). Here were the fabled forges of the Cyclops; and it is called by Pindar the pillar of heaven. Eruptions are mentioned by Diodorus Siculus as happening 1693 B.C., and Thucydides speaks of three eruptions as occurring 734, 477, and 425 B.C. There were eruptions, 125, 121, and 43 B.C. Livy.

ETON COLLEGE (Buckinghamshire), founded by Henry VI. in 1440, and designed as a nursery to King's College, Cambridge. John Stanbery, professor to Henry VI. (bishop of Bangor, in 1448), was nominated the first provost. One of the provosts, William Waynflete, (bishop of Winchester, 1447) greatly promoted the erection of the buildings. Besides about three hundred noblemen's and gentlemen's sons, there were seventy king's scholars on the foundation, who, when properly qualified, were formerly elected, on the first Tuesday in August, to King's College, Cambridge, and removed there when there were vacancies, according to seniority. The establishment of the Montem is nearly coeval with the college. It consisted in the procession of the scholars, arrayed in fancy dresses, to Salt-hill once in three years; the donations collected on the road (sometimes as much as 800*l.*) were given to the senior or best scholar, their captain, for his support while studying at Cambridge. The montem was discontinued in 1847. The college system was modified by the Public Schools act, 1868.

In 1873 election Saturday ceased, the scholars to be students at Cambridge being chosen there. In 1880 there were 853 students; in 1905, 1,030. King's scholars who enter college between 12 and 14 years of age are known as "Collegers," the remainder, who enter between the ages of 10 and 14 are known as "Oppidans." Motto, "Floreat Etona." Eton Mission at Hackney wick, is supported by past and present Etonians.

The birthday of George III. is annually celebrated, 4 June, 1738.

Queen Victoria laid the corner stone of the new school buildings 18 May, 1889.

Hall and library erected as a memorial of old Etonians who fell in the S. African war, opened by king Edward 18 Nov. 1908.

ETRURIA (or TUSCIA, hence the modern name Tuscany), a province of Italy, whence the Romans, in a great measure, derived their laws, customs, and superstitions. Herodotus asserts that the country was conquered by a colony of Lydians. The subjugation of this country forms an important part of early Roman history. It was most powerful under Porsena of Clusium, who attempted to restate the Tarquins, 506 B.C. Veii was taken by Camillus, 396 B.C. A truce between the Romans and Etrurians for forty years was concluded, 351 B.C. The latter and their allies were defeated at the Vadimonian lake, 310, with the Boii their allies, 283 B.C., and totally lost their independence about 265 B.C. The vases and other works of the Etruscans still remaining show the degree of their civilisation. Napoleon I. established a kingdom of Etruria, 1801, and suppressed it 1807, see Tuscany.—Etruria, Staffordshire, was founded in 1771.

EUBCEA, the largest island in the Ægean sea. Two of its cities, Chalcis and Eretria, were very important, till the former was subdued by Athens, 506 B.C. and the latter by the Persians, 490. After the Persian war, Eubœa became wholly subject to Athens, and was its most valuable possession. It revolted in 445, but was soon subdued by Pericles. After the battle of Chæronea, 338, it became subject to Macedon. It was made independent by the Romans in 194; but was afterwards incorporated in the province of Achaia. It now forms part of the kingdom of Greece.

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS, or Blue Gum Tree, a very fast-growing Tasmanian evergreen, of the order Myrtaceæ. From the extraordinary power of its roots of absorbing moisture, and the salutary aromatic odour of its leaves, it has been found highly beneficial in counteracting the malaria of marshy districts of hot climates, and hence has been named the fever-destroying tree.

M. Ramel first sent seeds from Melbourne to Paris in 1854, and subsequently seeds were distributed over the south of Europe, the north and south of Africa, and elsewhere. He died in 1881.

So rapid is the growth of this tree, that a forest may be formed in twenty years. It sometimes reaches the height of 350 feet, with a circumference of 100 feet, rivalling Wellingtonia gigantea, which see.

The timber, bark, and oils of the Eucalyptus are highly valuable, and professor Bentley says that the genus is one of the most important to man in the vegetable kingdom.

EUCCHARIST, thanksgiving, an early name for the Lord's Supper; see Sacrament.

EUCLID'S ELEMENTS. Euclid, a native of Alexandria, flourished about 323-283 B.C. The Elements are not wholly his; for many of the demonstrations were derived from Thales, Pythagoras, Eudoxus, and others; Euclid reduced them to order, and probably inserted many theorems of his own. The Elements were first printed at Basel by Simon Grynaeus, in 1533. Euclid is said to have told king Ptolemy that there was no royal road to geometry.

EUDIOMETER, an apparatus to ascertain the purity of atmospheric air, or the quantity of oxygen gas or vital air contained in it; one was invented by Marsilio Landriani, and described by him in his "Ricerche," 1775; Dr. Priestley is said to have first used Fontana's eudiometer in 1770. Gmelin.

EUGUBINE TABLES, seven tablets of brass, probable date about 400 B.C., (with inscriptions relating to sacrifices, &c., four in Umbrian, two Latin, and one partly in both dialects), were discovered in 1444 at Gubbio, the ancient Eugubium or Iguvium. The inscriptions are accurately given by Lepsius, in his "Inscriptiones Umbricæ et Oscæ," 1841.

EUNUCHS, first mentioned among the Egyptians and Assyrians, and said to have been first employed by Semiramis, queen of Assyria, about 2007 B.C. Eunuchs frequently attained to political power in the later Eastern empire.

EUPATORIA (KOSLEFF), a sea-port on the west coast of the Crimea. After the allied French, English, and Turkish armies landed in the Crimea, 14 Sept. 1854, a detachment under captain Brook occupied this place, which was afterwards reinforced by the Turks. It was attacked 17 Feb. 1855, by 40,000 Russians under Liprandi. The latter were repulsed with the loss of 500 men by the Turks, whose loss was only 50, among which, however, was Selim Pasha, the commander of the Egyptian contingent.

EUPHRATES, the largest river in Western Asia. It rises in Armenia, and has two branches. On its banks are the remains of numerous ancient cities, such as Babylon and Birs Nimrud. The Euphrates Valley Railway, as a speedy means of reaching India, has been much advocated, especially by the late general Chesney, who published his survey of the Euphrates and Tigris in 1850. A parliamentary commission reported on it, Aug. 1872, when it was also considered at the meeting of the British association at Brighton. The construction would cost from five to ten millions sterling, and its advantages are considered rather hypothetical by the best judges.

EUPHUISM, an affected style of language, prevalent in the time of Elizabeth, arose from "Euphuës; the Anatomy of Wit," by John Lyly, published in 1581.

EURASIAN PLAIN, the great central plain of Europe and Asia, so named by ethnologists (1865). The offspring of a European father and an Asiatic mother is termed Eurasian. The degraded condition of the Eurasians, which has caused much anxiety, especially at Calcutta, was discussed early in 1891. The Marchioness of Duferin was deeply interested in the matter about 1884.

EUROPE, the smallest of the three divisions of the old world, really an appendage of Asia; area, nearly 3,800,000 square miles; population, 301,700,000 (1872); 333,054,908 (1888); about 400,000,000 (1910). For the history, see Greece, Rome, and the modern kingdoms.

EURYDICE, H.M.S. frigate, foundered in a squall off Dunnoose, near Ventnor, Isle of Wight, 24 March, 1878; see Navy and Wrecks, 1878.

EURYMEDON, a river in Pamphylia, near which Cimon, son of Miltiades, destroyed the fleet of the Persians at Cyprus, and defeated their land forces, 469 B.C.

EUSTACE, ST. (Lower Canada). The rebels were defeated here, 14 Dec. 1837, and compelled to surrender their arms. Their chiefs fled.

EUSTATIUS, ST., a West India island, settled by the Dutch, 1632; taken by the French in 1689; by the British in 1690; again by the British forces under Rodney and Vaughan, 3 Feb. 1781. It was recovered by the French under the marquis de Bouillé, 26 Nov. same year; captured by the British, 1801, 1810; restored to the Dutch, 1814.

EUSTON SQUARE MYSTERY, see Trials, July, 1879.

EUTAW SPRINGS (S. Carolina). Here the Americans were defeated by the British under Arnold, 8 Sept. 1781.

EUTYCHIANS, so called from Eutyches, an abbot of Constantinople, who asserted in 446 that there was but one nature in Christ, the human having been absorbed in the divine. This doctrine was condemned by councils—at Constantinople in 448, and at Chalcedon in 451. It has been also called Monophysite (of one nature), and Jacobit from Jacobus Baradaeus, its zealous defender in the 6th century. It is the form of Christianity now existing among the Copts and Armenians.

EUXINE, see Black Sea.

EVACUATION TREATY see France, Sept. 1871.

EVANGELICAL, a term applied to a portion of the clergy of the church of England (also called the low church), who profess to preach the gospel more purely than their brethren termed the high church party; see Church of England and Free Church.

The Evangelical Alliance was founded by sir Culling Eardley Smith and others at Liverpool in 1845, with the view of promoting unity among all denominations of Protestant Christians against Romanism and infidelity.

At a general meeting held in London 19 Aug. 1846, 921 members were present from all parts of the world.

Since 1845, annual meetings have been held in various towns in the United Kingdom.

General international conferences have been held.

The "Evangelical Church" in Germany began with a fusion of the Lutherans and Calvinists in Nassau in 1817; followed by similar movements in different parts of Germany, 1818-22.

A conference termed Reunion was held at Grindelwald, Switzerland, to promote a protestant union, July; it closed 15 Sept. 1892; at Lucerne, Sept. 1893; when annual conferences were decided upon.

Diamond jubilee of the Evangelical Alliance celebrated at Exeter-hall, 11 June, 1906.

International and diamond jubilee conference of the Evangelical Alliance held in London, 4-8 July, 1907.

Universal week of prayer opened, 2 Jan. 1910.

EVANGELISTS, preachers of the "gospel," or good news; see Gospels.

EVELINA HOSPITAL, Southwark, established in 1869 by baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, in memory of his wife. Enlarged 1903.

EVENING SCHOOLS for adults of the lower classes were strongly recommended by bishop Hinds in 1839, and by the committee of the Privy Council on Education in 1861. One was set up at Bala in Wales by the rev. T. Charles in 1811. See under Recreation. Evening Continuation Schools Established by school boards in most towns and cities, now (1910) carried on under the control of the Education Authorities.

EVESHAM (Worcestershire), where prince Edward, afterwards Edward I., defeated the barons headed by Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, 4 Aug. 1265, when the earl, his son Henry, and most of his adherents were slain. Henry III. at one period of the battle was on the point of being cut down by a soldier who did not know him, but was saved by exclaiming, "Do not kill me, soldier; I am Henry of Winchester, thy king!" This victory broke up the combination of the barons.

EVICTIONS (in Ireland), 482,000 persons evicted from 1849-82, 119,000 reinstated as caretakers, see Ireland, 1886 et seq. Many evicted tenants made terms with their landlords, and returned to their farms, 1891-2.

Eviction commission appointed, see Ireland, 14 Oct. 1892
Report recommending reinstatement, &c., presented to the commons . . . 9 March, 1893
24,000 evictions in Ireland from 1 Oct. 1881, to 30 Sept. 1887; 8,975 from 1 Oct. 1887, to 30 June, 1894; about 4,000 . . . Aug. 1894
Bill for the compulsory reinstatement of evicted tenants in Ireland; passed by the commons, 7 Aug.; rejected by the lords (249-30), 14 Aug., 1894; by the commons, 26 Feb. 1896; again rejected by the commons . . . 12 April, 1899

Documentary Evidence Acts, passed . . . 14 May, 1895
Prisoners in certain criminal cases were permitted for the first time in England to give evidence on their own behalf in 1872, and the practice has been legalised with good effect by 26 acts up to 1897.

The Evidence in Criminal Cases Act, making this practice uniform in all cases, passed . . . 12 Aug. 1898
Evidence act, 1907—evidence of colonial statutes proved by production of printed copy . . . 21 Aug. 1907

EVIL MAY-DAY (1 May, 1517), thus called on account of the violence of the apprentices and populace, directed against foreigners, particularly the French. The rioters were headed by one Lincoln, who, with 15 others, was hanged; and 400 more in their shirts, and bound with ropes, and halters about their necks, were carried to Westminster; but they crying "Mercy, mercy!" were all pardoned by the king, Henry VIII.

EVOLUTION THEORY includes the nebular theory and Mr. Darwin's doctrine of natural selection; see Development, and Progressionists.

In 1837 three forms of evolution were discussed:—1. That of all animals gradually from the lowest form, the ameba, up to man, in opposition to the Biblical account of the creation; 2. that of every animal from protoplasm in a cell, or egg; 3. that of all the parts of an animal from its blood. "Organic Evolution cross-examined, or some suggestions on the great secret of Biology," by the duke of Argyll, published April, 1899.

Mr. Alfred Wallace's work on "Natural Selection," published 1870; he was awarded the first Darwin medal by the Royal society, 1890.

EXALTATION, see Cross.

EXAMINATIONS of candidates for employment in the civil service has been enforced since 1855. Mr. Gladstone in 1862 said that the present might be termed the "age of examinations;" see Civil Service.

EXAMINER, liberal weekly journal, established Jan. 1808; last number, 26 Feb. 1881.

EXAMINER OF STAGE PLAYS, an office under the lord chamberlain, held by Mr. G. A. Redford, appointed March, 1895. Censorship Committee appointed from the two Houses of Parliament to enquire into Censorship. Sittings commenced 29th July, 1909. Closed 24th Sept. Report ordered to be printed 2 Nov. 1909.

EXARCHS, appointed by the Byzantine emperors of the East, to govern central Italy after its conquest by Belisarius and Narses, 548-553. They rule Ravenna from 568 to 752, when Eutychus, the last, was overcome by Astolphus the Lombard. The Exarch in the church was next in dignity to the patriarch.

EXCHANGE, formerly Bourse, the Royal Exchange being "Britain's Bourse," those at Paris and other continental cities are still named "Bourse," from bursa, a purse. One called Collegium Mercatorum existed at Rome, 493 B.C. The Exchange at Amsterdam was reckoned the finest structure of the kind in the world. See Royal Exchange, and Bills of Exchange. The new building of the Baltic Mercantile and Shipping Exchange, on the site of Jeffreys square, St. Mary Axe, covering 27,500 sq. ft., opened by the lord mayor 21 April, 1903.

EXCHEQUER, an ancient institution, consisting of officers with financial and judicial functions: the chancellor of the exchequer, the financial officer, formerly sat in the court of exchequer above the barons. The first chancellor was Eustace de Fauconbridge, bishop of London, in the reign of Henry III. about 1221. Sir Robert Walpole was the last chancellor of the exchequer who acted judicially (in 1735). The legal function of the chancellor was abolished by the Judicature act, Aug. 1873. Charles II. seized on the Goldsmiths' funds in the exchequer to prepare for war, 2 Jan. 1672. The English and Irish exchequers were consolidated by parliament in 1817; see Chancellors of the Exchequers, and Tally Office.

EXCHEQUER BILLS. The government securities, so called, said to have been invented by Montague, afterwards earl of Halifax, were first issued in 1697, and first circulated by the bank in 1796. These bills, of which more than twenty millions sterling are often in circulation, are in effect accommodation notes of government, that are issued in anticipation of taxes, at daily interest; and being received for taxes, and paid by the bank in lieu of taxes, in its dealings with the exchequer, they usually bear a premium.

Robert Aslett, a cashier of the bank of England, tried for embezzling exchequer bills, and found not guilty, on account of the invalidity of the bills, though the actual loss to the bank amounted to 342,697*l.*, 18 July, 1803.

Mr. Beaumont Smith tried for forging exchequer bills to the amount of 350,000*l.*; pleaded guilty; sentenced to transportation, 4 Dec. 1841.

EXCHEQUER BONDS, a species of public securities, introduced by Mr. W. E. Gladstone, in 1853.

TELLERS OF THE EXCHEQUER. Besides chamberlains of the exchequer, clerks of the pells, and auditor of the exchequer (offices which have all been discontinued since their last avoidance in Oct. 1826, or by surrender or abolition, in Oct. 1834), there were the four lucrative offices of tellers of the exchequer, also abolished, 10 Oct. 1834.

John Jeffreys Pratt, earl, afterwards marquiss Camden, was appointed a teller of the exchequer, in 1780, and held the appointment until his death, in 1840. During nearly half of this long term he relinquished the income (amounting in the whole to upwards of a quarter of a million sterling) and placed it at the service of the state, as it annually accrued.

COMPTROLLER AND AUDITOR-GENERAL OF THE EXCHEQUER. This office was created on the abolition of the offices of the auditor and the four tellers of the exchequer, and the clerk of the pells. The first comptroller-general was sir John Newport, appointed 11 Oct. 1834—34,438*l.* per annum have been saved to the state by the retrenchments in this department of the government.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. Erected by Edward III. in 1357. It was remodelled by Elizabeth, in 1584, and then made to comprise the judges of all the courts. This court is for error from the judgments of the courts of queen's bench, common pleas, and exchequer of king's pleas in actions commenced therein. Re-modelled by act 2 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 70 (23 July, 1830).

The Exchequer office, Westminster, was instituted by Henry IV. in 1390.

"The Red Book of the Exchequer," an ancient record of feodaries, edited by Hubert Hall, 3 vols., published Oct. 1897.

EXCHEQUER, COURT OF (Curia Regis), instituted by William I. on the model of the Transmarine Exchequer of Normandy, in 1079; according to some authorities, by Henry I. It included the common pleas until they were separated, 16 John, 1215. Coke's Reports. The exchequer is so named from a chequered cloth which anciently covered the table where the judges and chief officers sat. * Here were tried all causes relating to the king's revenue; such as are concerning accounts, disbursements, customs, and fines imposed, as well as all matters at common law between subject and subject. The judges are styled barons, first appointed 1234. There were a chief and four puisne barons: the fifth judge having been added 23 July, 1830. The office of Cursitor Baron was abolished in 1856. For changes, see Supreme Court. The ancient court sat for last time, 10 July, 1875. The Exchequer division was abolished in 1881; in Ireland in 1887. See Suprema Court Judicature Act, passed 27 Aug. 1881.

* In process of time the court of exchequer became gradually enlarged in its jurisdiction, until at length it was not merely a revenue court and one at common law between subject and subject, but one in which suits in equity were also instituted. In fact, until the act 5 Vict. c. 5 (1841), the court of exchequer possessed a triple jurisdiction; but by this statute its equity business was transferred to the court of chancery.

 1874. Christopher Palles. Jan.

The last of the chief barons.

EXCISE. The system was established in England by the Long Parliament in 1643, duties being levied on wines, beer, &c., and tobacco, to support the army against Charles I. It was continued under Charles II. Sir Robert Walpole's plan for extending the excise and introducing the bonding system was withdrawn through vehement opposition in 1733. Farming the excise duties led to many evils, see Smugglers. Bonded warehouses for the temporary storage of excisable goods, authorised in 1802, were begun in 1823. The system was modified in 1882. Bonds for the payment of the duties are entered into by the importers. The old excise office was built on the site of Gresham college in 1774; the present is at Somerset-house. The excise department of the inland revenue transferred to the Board of customs, the combined departments to be called the Board of customs and excise, 1 April, 1909. The officers of excise and customs were deprived of their votes for returning members to parliament in 1782; but received them again in 1868. In 1849 the boards of excise, stamps and taxes, were united, as "the board of commissioners of inland revenue." Notwithstanding the abolition of the excise duty upon numerous articles, and the reduction of duty upon various others, of late years, the total excise revenue, so far from having decreased, has progressively advanced (1847 and 1861 excepted) in its aggregate annual amount. Additional excise duties were charged by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 27, July 3, 1854. The excise duties were further modified in 1860-94; see Revenue.

EXCLUSION BILL (to exclude the duke of York, afterwards James II., from the throne), was passed by the commons, but rejected by the lords in 1680. The revival of the question led to the dissolution of parliament in 1681.

EXCOMMUNICATION, or separation from Christian communion (Matt. xviii. 17; 1 Cor. v., &c.), was instituted to preserve the purity of the church. The Roman church excommunicated by Bell, Book, and Candle (which see). See Interdict.

Gregory VII. excommunicated the emperor Henry IV., and absolved his subjects from their allegiance 1077

Innocent III. excommunicated John of England, placing the country under an interdict 1208-14

Gregory IX. excommunicated the emperor Frederick II. four times between 1228-45

Louis XII. of France was excommunicated by Julius II. 1510; Luther by Leo X. 1521; Henry VIII. of England by Paul III. in 1535; and Elizabeth by Pius V. . . . 25 April, 1570

The emperor of France, the king of Sardinia, and others, were virtually excommunicated (but not by name) on account of the annexation of the Romagna by Sardinia 20 March, 1860
 Father Geo. Tyrrel, b. 1861, excommunicated on account of his criticism of pope Pius X.'s encyclical "Pascendi," condemning modernism, 1907

EXECUTIONS, see Crime. In the reign of Henry VIII. (38 years) it is said that no less a number than 72,000 criminals were executed. Stow. In the ten years between 1820 and 1830, there were executed in England alone 797 criminals; but as our laws became less severe, the number of executions decreased. In the three years ending 1820, the executions in England and Wales amounted to 312; in the three years ending 1830, they were 178; in the three years ending 1840, they were 62. The place of execution in London (formerly generally at Tyburn) was in front of Newgate from 1783 to 1868, when an act was passed directing executions to take place within the walls of prisons. The dissection of the bodies of executed persons was abolished in 1832, see Death, 1868.

John Calcraft, born 1800, executioner for London, 1828-1871, died 13 Dec. 1879; his successor, Wm. Marwood, died 4 Sept. 1883; he was succeeded by Berry; said to have resigned March, 1892; Jas. Billington, in 1894; died 15 Dec. 1901; succeeded by his son. No appointment is now made to the office of executioner; the employment of the individual resting with the high sheriff in each case . . . 1910

EXETER (Devonshire), said to have been named Augusta from having been occupied by the second Augustan legion commanded by Vespasian: its present name is derived from Excestre. It was for a considerable time the capital of the West Saxon kingdom. The BISHOPRIC anciently comprised two sees: Devonshire (founded about 909) and Cornwall. The church of the former was at Crediton, of the latter at Bodmin, and afterwards at St. German's. About 1040 the sees were united. St. Petroc was the first bishop of Cornwall, before 900; Eadulphus, the first bishop of Devonshire, 905; and Leofric, the first bishop of Exeter, in 1050. The cathedral originally belonged to a monastery founded by Athelstan: Edward the Confessor removed the monks to his new abbey of Westminster, and gave their church for a cathedral to the united see, 1049; the see was valued in the king's books at 500*l. per annum*. Present stated income, 4200*l.* Population, 1901, 46,940; 1910 (est.) 52,000.

EXETER CHANGE (London), was built about 1680, on part of the site of Exeter house, the palace of Walter Stapleton, bishop of Exeter and lord treasurer in 1319, beheaded by order of the queen-regent, Isabella, in 1326. It was entirely demolished at the period of the Strand improvements, in 1829. The new Exeter Change, built by the marquiss of Exeter near its site, opened in 1845, was pulled down in 1862, for the Strand Music-hall, afterwards the old Gaiety theatre. See Gaiety Theatre.

EXETER COLLEGE (Oxford) was founded by Walter Stapleton, bishop of Exeter in 1314. The college buildings mainly consist of a quadrangle in the later Gothic style.

EXETER HALL (Strand, London), erected in 1830-1 for the meetings of religious and philanthropic institutions, concerts, oratorios, and musical societies, a large and magnificent apartment with a splendid orchestra and organ, and having rooms attached for committees, &c., opened 29 March, 1831. See under Music. Religious services were held here in 1856 by the Rev. C. Spurgeon, and in 1857 by ministers of the church of England, on Sundays.

The Sacred Harmonic Society met here 1831-80; last concert, "Israel in Egypt," 30 April, 1880.

The hall was purchased for the Young Men's Christian Association for 25,000*l.* July 1880; re-opened (jubilee), 29 March, 1881.

Centenary meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, under presidency of lord Northampton, 4 May, 1904.

The Young Men's Christian Association, rather than carry out the very costly alterations required by the county council, sold the remainder of the Crown lease (22½ years) to Mr. Lyons on condition that no licensed premises, theatre, or music-hall, shall be placed on the site. The association gave up position 22 July, 1907.

Demolished, and Strand Palace Hotel erected on the site, opened 14 Sept. 1909.

EXHIBITION OF 1851 (THE GREAT EXHIBITION). The original idea of a *National Exhibition is attributed to Mr. F. Whishaw, secretary of the Society of Arts in 1844. It was not taken up till 1849, when prince Albert, president of the society, said, "Now is the time to prepare for a Great Exhibition, an exhibition worthy of the greatness of this country; not merely national in its scope and benefits, but comprehensive of the whole world; and I offer myself to the public as their leader, if they are willing to assist in the undertaking."

Royal commission appointed . . . 3 Jan. 1850

The building † commenced . . . 26 Sept. "
 Many persons admitted into it in Jan.; it is virtually transferred to the royal commissioners by the contractors . . . Feb. 1851

The Exhibition opened by queen Victoria . . . 1 May, "
 The number of exhibitors exceeded 17,000, of whom 2018 received prize medals and 170 council medals.

The palace continued open 144 days (1 May to 15 Oct.), within which time it was visited by 6,170,000 persons, averaging 43,536 a day, whose admission at the respective prices of one pound, half-a-crown, and one shilling, amounted to 505,107*l.* including season tickets, leaving a surplus, after payment of expenses, of about 150,000*l.* ‡

The greatest number of visitors in one day was 109,760 (8 Oct.); and at one time (2 o'clock, 7 Oct.) there were 93,000; these persons were assembled at one time, not in an open area, like a Roman amphitheatre, but within a windowed and floored and roofed building. There is no like vast assemblage recorded in either ancient or modern annals, as having been gathered together, it may be said, in one room.

A memorial statue of the prince consort by Joseph Durham, placed in the gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society, uncovered in the presence of the prince and princess of Wales . . . 10 June, 1863

Prince of Wales elected president of the Royal Commission of 1851, in room of the Prince Consort, who had held that office since 1870, 10 Feb. 1903

EXHIBITION OF 1862 (INTERNATIONAL).

A proposal in 1858 for another great exhibition, to be held in 1861, was withdrawn in consequence of the war in Italy in 1859, &c. The scheme was revived in April 1860, when the prince consort and 1849, the last, being the eleventh, exceeding all the preceding in extent and brilliancy. The first exhibition of the kind in this country was the National Repository, opened under royal patronage in 1823, near Charing-cross. It was not successful. Other exhibitions were opened at Manchester in 1837, at Leeds in 1839, and at Birmingham in 1849. Exhibitions have since been held at Cork, Dublin, Manchester, New York, Paris, Montreal, Florence, Constantinople, Bayonne, Melbourne, Vienna, Philadelphia, and many other places (which see).

† The palace, with the exception of the flooring and joists, was entirely of glass and iron. It was designed by Mr. (aft. sir Joseph) Paxton (who died 8 June, 1865), and the contractors were Messrs. Fox and Henderson, to whom it was agreed to pay 79,800*l.*, or 150,000*l.* if the building were permanently retained. It cost 176,000*l.* 138*sd.* Its length was 1851 feet, corresponding with the year; the width 408 feet, with an additional projection on the north side, 936 feet long, by 48 wide. The central portion was 120 feet wide and 64 feet high, and the great avenues ran east and west through the building; the transept near the centre was 72 feet wide and 108 feet high. The entire area was 772,784 square feet, or about 19 acres. Four galleries ran lengthwise, and others round the transept. The ground-floor and galleries contained 1,000,000 square feet of flooring. There were altogether 4000 tons of iron in the structure, and 17 acres of glass in the roof, besides about 1500 vertical glazed sashes.

‡ This was placed in the hands of commissioners, who promoted the South Kensington museum, and in 1876 proposed the establishment of a science library.

* Industrial exhibitions began with the French; Expositions having been organised and opened at Paris in 1798, 1801, 1802, 1806, 1819, 1823, 1827, 1834, 1839, 1844.

engaged to guarantee 10,000*l.* if 240,000*l.* should be subscribed for by other persons.

A charter granted to the commissioners, 22 Feb. 1861
The guarantee fund amounted to 349,000*l.* in Nov. 1860, and to 452,300*l.* 22 Aug. 1862

The building,* erected at South Kensington, made over to the commissioners 12 Feb. 1862

The Exhibition opened by the duke of Cambridge and royal commissioners 1 May, "

The fine arts department included a noble collection of paintings and sculptures.

The Exhibition was closed 1 Nov., when the total number of visitors had been 6,117,450.

The Exhibition reopened on 3 Nov. for the sale of goods exhibited; was finally closed 15 Nov. "

The success of the Exhibition was much impaired by the decease of the prince consort, 14 Dec. 1861, and the breaking out of the civil war in the United States of America. The foreign exhibitors in 1851 were 6566; in 1862, 16,456.

EXHIBITIONS, INTERNATIONAL. A meeting was held 4 April, 1870, the prince of Wales in the chair, to promote annual international exhibitions at South Kensington, to commence 1 May, 1871.

I. 1871. Fine arts, pottery, manufactures, &c.; opened by the prince of Wales, 1 May; closed 30 Oct.

[34 countries contributed; total number of visitors, 1,142,154.]

EXODUS (Greek, way out), a term applied to the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, 1491 B.C.; and described in the book of Exodus. Chronologers vary in the date of this event: the LXX. give 1614; Hales, 1648; Wilkinson, 1495; Bunsen, 1320 or 1314.

EX OFFICIO INFORMATIONS are those filed by the attorney-general, by virtue of his office, without applying to the court where they are filed for leave, or giving the defendant an opportunity of showing cause why they should not be filed. Cabinet Lawyer. They were used by the Liverpool administration about 1817–19. William Hone was tried on criminal information, 18–20 Dec. 1817, and acquitted. The British bank directors were thus tried, 1857.

EXPEDITIONS. Many are described under their respective heads.

Expedition of "the Nations" or "the Ditch"; the third expedition of the Koreish (which see) against Mahomet, named from the nations who marched under their leader Abu Sophian, and from the ditch which was drawn before the city. They were principally vanquished by the fury of the elements. Gibbon. 625.

EXTRACT OF MEAT, obtained by Liebig in 1847; a company was formed to manufacture it in South America in 1866.

EXTRADITION TREATIES. The extradition of criminals formed part of the Ashburton treaty (which see), 9 Aug. 1842. Between Great Britain and France, 1843. In Dec. 1865, the French government gave notice of withdrawing from it in six months. It was renewed, with modifications, for six months, 21 May, 1866. A new act was passed, 9 Aug. 1870; amended in 1873. New act passed, 6 July, 1895. The treaty of Aug. 1876, amended 13 Feb. 1896. Similar treaties have been concluded with other powers; with Austria, 3 Dec. 1873 (amended 1901); Switzerland, 4 April, 1874; Holland, Aug. 1874; with Spain, 1878.

In 1866, M. Lamirand, charged with forgery and fraud against the Bank of France, fled to America. He was pursued, and was arrested at Montreal, on 12 Aug., under the governor-general's warrant. On 15 Aug., while his examination was still pending, he petitioned the governor-general not to warrant his surrender before he could apply for a writ of habeas corpus, and was assured on 17 Aug. that ample time should be allowed for this purpose. On 22 Aug. he was finally committed; and on 24 Aug. his petition for a writ of habeas corpus was presented to judge Drummond, twenty-four hours' notice having been given to the representatives of the crown and the Bank of France. After arguments had been heard and the case adjourned until the following day, he was surreptitiously carried off the same night by train to Quebec, and hurried on board a steamer bound for Europe, by virtue of an extradition warrant, purporting to be signed by the governor-general at Ottawa, on 23 Aug. He was conveyed to France, and on 5 Dec. was tried, found guilty, and condemned to ten years' imprisonment. These circumstances led to much discussion, and the Canadian authorities were censured for irregularity and want of discretion. The discussion ended by Lamirand declining British intervention.

Dispute with United States respecting the surrender of Ezra D. Winslow, a forger, by Great Britain, which is refused unless it is agreed that the prisoner shall only be tried for the offence for which he has been committed (according to the treaty) . . . April, 1876

Mr. Hamilton Fish, the American foreign secretary, stands on Ashburton treaty of 1842, wherein no stipulation is mentioned; although it is found in other treaties with other governments.

Winslow was discharged, 15 June; and Brent, another fugitive, a few days after . . . "

EYLAU (Prussia), where, on 7-8 Feb. 1807, was fought between the French and Russians one of the most bloody contests of the war. Napoleon commanded in person. Both armies by this and other battles were so much reduced, that the French retired to the Vistula, and the Russians on the Pregel.

EYRE (old French for ire, to go on), the itinerant court of justices, the justices in eyre, was instituted by Henry II. 1176; and when the forest laws were in force, its chief-justice had great dignity. These justices were to go their circuit every third year, and punish all abuses committed in the king's forests. The last instance of a court being held in any of the forests is said to have been in 1671. Beatson.

F.

F's, Three (that is, "fixity of tenure, fair rents, and free sale"), term much used respecting Irish land question in 1880-1. Sir Stafford Northcote termed them "fraud, force, and folly," and they were much opposed by Lord Dufferin and others.

FABIAN SOCIETY, a socialist association founded in London 1883, which "aims at the re-organisation of society by the emancipation of land and capital from individual and class ownership, and the vesting of them in the community for the general benefit." The society carries on its propaganda by lectures and discussions, and publishes Fabian Essays, and Fabian Tracts. It has a large number of branches in Great Britain, and also in the Colonies and the United States. The name is taken from Fabius, whose "Fabian policy" harassed the forces of Hannibal in the war, between Rome and Carthage (see Rome), to describe its methods of gradual progress by educational and legislative measures.

FABII. A noble family at Rome, said to have derived their name from Jaba, a bean, because some of their ancestors cultivated this pulse; or to have descended from Fabius, a son of Hercules. According to the legend, the whole family, on behalf of the state, carried on the war against the Veientes. During a march to Rome, they were surprised, and all the grown-up males (306) were slain 477 B.C. From a boy detained at Rome, arose the noble Fabii of the following ages. Fabius Cunctator (the delayer) kept Hannibal in check for some time without coming to an engagement, 217-216 B.C.

FABLES. "Jotham's fable of the trees (Judges ix., about 1209 B.C.) is the oldest extant, and as beautiful as any made since." Addison. Nathan's fable of the poor man (2 Sam. xii., about 1034 B.C.) is next in antiquity. The earliest collection of fables extant is of eastern origin, and preserved in the Sanscrit. The fables of Vishnu Sarma, or Pilyay, are the most beautiful, if not the most ancient in the world. Sir William Jones. Professor Max Müller traced La Fontaine's fable of the Milkmaid to a very early Sanscrit collection. Æsop's fables (which see) supposed to have been written about 565 or 620 B.C., were verified by Babrius, a Greek poet, about 130 B.C. (Coray), and turned into prose by Maximus Planudes, a Greek monk, about 1320, who added other fables and appended a worthless life of Æsop. The fables of Phædrus in elegant Latin-iambics (about A.D. 8), of La Fontaine (1700) and of Gay (1727) are justly celebrated.

FACIAL ANGLE (that contained by one line drawn horizontally from the middle of the ear to the edge of the nostrils, and another from the latter point to the ridge of the frontal bone) was invented by Peter Camper to measure the elevation of the forehead. In negroes this angle is about 70°; in Europeans varies from 75° to 85°. Camper died 7 April, 1789. His book on "Characteristic Marks of Countenance" was published in 1791.

FACTIONS of the Circus among the Romans, were parties that fought on chariots in the circus, and who were distinguished by colours, as green, blue, red, and white; Domitian added gold and scarlet, about A.D. 90.

Nika sedition.—In Jan. 532, a conflict took place at Constantinople, lasting five days, when about 30,000 lives were lost, and Justinian was mainly indebted for his life and throne to the heroism of his empress Theodora. The blues and greens united for a day or two against the emperor, taking Nika! (overcome) for a watchword. The blues soon turned, and massacred nearly all the greens. The conflict was suppressed by Belisarius with difficulty, and the games were abolished for a time.

FACTORY SYSTEM was gradually developed by Arkwright and others, 1774 et seq., to carry on the cotton manufacture, which had been greatly increased by the invention of machinery. The work had been previously executed by working men in cottages by the hand or stock cards, loom, and spinning wheel. Factories began to increase in this country in 1815. The Factory act, regulating the hours of labour, &c., was passed in 1833 and amended 1834 and 1844. Similar acts have been passed since; and an act for the extension of the principles of the Factory acts was passed in 1867 in relation to women and children employed in manual labour; short time on Saturdays was enacted. Other acts were passed in 1870-1878, and since.

The Act of 1878 (like that of 14 July, 1874) relates to sanitary provisions, safety from machinery, hours of employment, meal hours, women and children, holidays, education of children, accidents, &c., passed 27 May, 1878. Consolidating act passed in 1883.

The earl of Shaftesbury, the energetic promoter of this legislation, died 1 Oct. 1885, aged 84.

New Factories and Workshops act passed 5 Aug. 1891; amendment act passed, 6 July, 1895.

Factory and Workshop act (laundry clause omitted), royal assent, 17 Aug. 1901; amended by act passed 20 March, 1902.

FACULTIES, COURT OF, giving powers to the archbishops of Canterbury and York, 25 Hen. VIII. cap. 21, 1534. Master lord Penzance, 1876.

FAENZA, central Italy, the ancient Faventia, submitted to the emperor Frederick I., 1162; was taken by Frederick II., 12 April, 1241; held by the pope, 1275; by the Bolognese, 1282; by Cæsar Borgia, 1501; by Venice, 1504; by the papacy, 1509; by the French, 1512. After various changes early in the 16th century it was acquired by the papacy and retained till the annexation by Sardinia, 1859. Faience pottery owes its name to this place, where it was invented.

FAIRLOP OAK, with a trunk 48 feet in circumference, the growth of five centuries, in Hainault forest, Essex, was blown down in Feb. 1820. Beneath its branches an annual fair was long held on the first Friday in July, which originated with the eccentric Mr. Day, a pump and block maker of Wapping, who, having a small estate in the vicinity, annually repaired here with a party of friends, to dine on beans and bacon.

FAIROAKS, near the Chickahominy, Virginia, the site of two sanguinary indecisive battles between the Confederates, under general Joseph Johnson, and the Federal army of the Potomac, under general McClellan, 31 May and 1 June, 1862.

FAIRS AND WAKES, of Saxon origin, were instituted in Italy, about 500; in England by Alfred, 886. Spelman. Wakes were established by order of Gregory VII. in 1078, and termed Feriae, at which the monks celebrated the festival of their patron saint: the vast resort of people occasioned a great demand for goods, wares, &c. Fairs were established in France about 800 by Charlemagne, and encouraged in England about 1071 by William the Conqueror. Many statutes were made for the regulation of fairs (1328—1868). The "Fairs Act," passed 25 May, 1871, provides for the abolition of fairs; in 1872, Charlton and Blackheath fairs, and in 1873 Clapham fair, were abolished as nuisances. See Frosts and Markets.

FAISANS, ILE DES (island of pheasants), a small island on the Bidassoa, between France and Spain. Here was concluded the treaty of the Pyrenees by cardinal Mazarin and don Louis de Haro on the part of France and Spain respectively; called also Ile de la Conférence: see Pyrenees.

FAITH, see Defender. "Faith-healing," see Peculiar People.

FALCK LAWS, see Prussia, 1873.

FALCONRY OR HAWKING in England cannot be traced with certainty before the reign of king Ethelbert, the Saxon monarch, 858. Pennant. The grand seignior at one time kept six thousand falcons in his service. Juliana Berners' book on "Hawkyng and Huntynge" was printed in 1496; see Angling. Recent attempts have been made to revive falconry. Hawking was practised in Thrace. Aristotle.

FALCZI, on the Pruth, Turkey. Here was concluded a Peace between Russia and Turkey, 21 July, 1711, the Russians giving up Azof, and all the possessions on the Black Sea to the Turks. The Russians were saved from imminent destruction by the address of Catherine, the empress. In 1712 the war was renewed, and terminated by the peace of Constantinople, 16 April, 1712.

FALERII, a city of the Falisci, an Etruscan people who joined the Veientes against Rome, and were beaten by Cornelius Cossus, 437 B.C. It is recorded that when the city was besieged by Camillus in 394, a schoolmaster offered to betray to him the children of the principal citizens. On his refusal, the citizens from gratitude surrendered. They opposed Rome during the first Punic war; and in 241 the city was taken and destroyed.

FALERNIAN WINE, celebrated by Virgil and Horace, was the produce of Falernus, or, as called by Martial, Mons Massicus, in Campania. Horace in his Odes boasts of having drunk Falernian wine that had been, as it were, born with him, or which reckoned its age from the same consuls, 14 B.C.

FALKIRK (Stirlingshire, Scotland), the site of a victory by the English under Edward I. over the Scots, commanded by Wallace, part of whose forces deserted him. It is said from 20,000 to 40,000 Scots were slain, 22 July, 1298. A battle was fought at Falkirk Muir between the royal forces under Hawley, and prince Charles Edward Stuart, in which the former were defeated, 17 Jan. 1746.

FALKLAND ISLANDS, a group in the South Atlantic, belonging to Great Britain, seen by Americus Vesputius, 1502, and visited by Davis, 1592; explored by Hawkins, 1594; taken possession of by France, 1764. The French were expelled by the Spaniards; and in 1771, Spain resigned them to England. Not having been colonised by us, the republic of Buenos Ayres assumed a right to these islands, and a colony from that country settled at Port Louis; but owing to a dispute with America, the settlement was destroyed by the latter in 1831. In 1833 the British flag was hoisted at Port Louis, and a British officer has since resided there. Population in 1910 (est.) 2,310. Governor, W. L. Allardyce, May, 1904. Falkland Islands created a crown colony, March, 1892. FAMILY OF LOVE, a society, called also Philadelphians, from the love they professed to bear to all men, assembled at Brew-house yard, Nottingham. Their founder, David George, an Anabaptist, of Holland, propagated his doctrines in Switzerland, where he died in 1556. The tenets of the society were declared impious, and George's body and books ordered to be burned by the hangman. In England a sect with a similar title was repressed by Elizabeth, 1580; but existed in the following century. See Agapemone.

FARADAY MEMORIALS, &c. Professor Michael Faraday, natural philosopher and chemist (see Electricity), died 25 Aug. 1867. A public meeting was held at the Royal Institution, 21 June, 1869, the prince of Wales in the chair, to take measures to provide a public monument to him. A sufficient sum having been subscribed, the production of a statue was entrusted to Mr. Foley. The statue was placed at the Royal Institution, London, in 1876. From the same fund a marble bust was provided and placed in the National Portrait Gallery, 1886. The "Faraday Medal," to be given to distinguishing foreign philosophers by the Chemical society, was first awarded to M. Dumas, see Argon. For "Faraday," steamship, see Steam. The centenary of the birth of Michael Faraday (22 Sept. 1791) was celebrated at the Royal Institution on 17 June, 1891; the prince of Wales, vice-patron R. I., in the chair; on 26 June the duke of Northumberland, president, in the chair.

The "Michael Faraday" Board school, in Faraday-st., Walworth, opened by the marquiss of Londonderry, 23 May, 1897; the marble bust of Faraday in the boys' hall of the school is a copy of one by Matthew Noble. The "Michael Faraday" home of rest for the poor at East Dulwich (the house given by Miss Isabel Faraday), opened . . . 25 Oct. 1901

FARADISATION, the medical application of the magneto-electric currents which Faraday discovered in 1837. Apparatus for this purpose was first made by M. Pixii, and employed by Dr. Neef of Frankfort. "Furad," name taken for a unit of electric capacity, 1875.

FARCE, a short comic drama, usually of one or two acts. One by Otway is dated 1677. The best English farces (by Foote, Garrick, Bickerstaff, &c.) appeared from about 1740 to 1780. This species of dramatic entertainment originated in the droll shows which were exhibited by charlatans and their buffoons in the open streets; see Drama.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE, an organization of agricultural reformers; held a provisional meeting 27 May, and a conference 2 July, 1879. It was active during the elections of April, 1880. A Farmers' Alliance for Scotland was founded at Aberdeen, 1 Dec. 1881. The Farmers' Alliance in the United States, N.A., begun about 1873, became influential and elected about 23 representatives for Congress, Nov. 1890, see United States, N.A.

The battle lasted from 5 to 7 a.m. The enemy's loss was about 1,000, including Hammuda, the commander, many emirs, and about 500 prisoners. Egyptian loss, 20 killed. The enemy fought with desperate valour. Early in the action about 300 dervishes were surrounded, and refusing to surrender were nearly all killed.

FERMENTATION, termed by Gay-Lussac one of the most mysterious processes in nature: he showed that in the process, 45 lbs. of sugar are resolved into 23 of alcohol and 22 of carbonic acid. His memoir appeared in 1810. In 1861 Pasteur brought forward evidence to show that fermentation depends on the presence of minute organisms in the fermenting fluid, and that the source of all such organisms is the atmosphere. For his researches he was awarded an annual pension of 120,000 francs in 1874.

FERMIERS GÉNÉRAUX, officers who farmed the French revenues previous to 1789, frequently with much oppression. Lavoisier and 27 of these were executed 8 May, 1794.

FERNDALÉ COLLIERY EXPLOSION; 8 Nov. 1867; about 178 lives lost. See under Coal.

FERNS (Ireland), an ancient bishopric, once archiepiscopal. St. Edan was seated here in 598. Leighlin and Ferns were united in 1600; and by the Church Temporalities act, passed Aug. 1833, both were united to the bishopric of Ossory. See Ossory.—FERNS, an order of cryptogamous plants, much cultivated in Wardian cases; which see, and also Nature-Printing.

FEROZESHAH (India). The British, commanded by sir Hugh Gough, attacked the entrenchments of the Sikhs, and carried their first line of works, 21 Dec. 1845; but night coming on, the operations were suspended till daybreak, when their second line was stormed by general Gilbert, and 74 guns captured. The Sikhs advanced to retake their guns, but were repulsed with great loss, and retreated towards the Sutlej, 22 Dec.; and recrossed that river unmolested, 27 Dec. The British loss was reckoned at 2415.

FERRARA, formerly part of the exarchate of Ravenna, under the emperors of the East. It was subdued by the Lombards in the 8th century, and taken from them about 752 by Pepin, who gave it to pope Stephen II. About 1208 it fell into the hands of the house of Este (which see), and became the principal seat of the literature and fine arts in Italy. Pope Clement VIII. obtained the sovereignty in 1598, on the death of the duke Alphonso II., the last legitimate male of the Este family. His illegitimate nephew, Caesar, became duke of Modena. The French under Massena took Ferrara in 1796; but it was restored to the pope in 1814. An Austrian garrison held it from 1849; it retired in June, 1859, and the people rose and declared for annexation to Sardinia, which was accomplished in March, 1860. The centenary of the university, founded in 1392, celebrated 18 April, 1892.

FERRARS' ARREST. In March, 1542, Mr. George Ferrars, a member of parliament, while in attendance on the house was taken in execution by a sheriff's officer for debt, and committed to the Compter prison. The house despatched their serjeant to require his release, which was resisted, and an affray taking place, his mace was broken. The house in a body repaired to the lords to complain, when the contempt was adjudged to be very great, and the punishment of the offenders was referred to the lower house. On another messenger being sent to the sheriffs by the commons, they delivered up the senator, and the civil magistrates and the creditor were committed to the Tower, the inferior officers to Newgate, and an act was passed releasing Mr. Ferrars from liability for the debt. The king, Henry VIII., highly approved of all these proceedings, and the transaction became the basis of that rule of parliament which exempts members from arrest. Holinshead.

FERRO, see Canary Isles.

FERROL (N.W. Spain). Upwards of 10,000 British landed near Ferrol under the command of sir James Pulteney, in Aug. 1800. They gained possession of the heights; but, despairing of success, on account of the strength of the works, sir James re-embarked his troops. His conduct was much condemned. Soul captured Ferrol, 27 Jan. 1809. An insurrection of about 1500 men in the arsenal here broke out, headed by brigadier Pozas and capt. Montojo, who raised the red flag, 11 Oct.; they dispersed or surrendered when about to be attacked, 17 Oct. 1872.

FESCENNINE VERSES were rude extemporary dialogues, frequently licentious, in favour among the ancient Etruscans at weddings, and still popular in Italy.

FESTIVALS, see under Feasts, Clergy, Music.

FÊTE DE DIEU, a feast of the Roman church in honour of the real presence in the Lord's Supper, kept on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday. See Corpus Christi. Berengarius, archbishop of Angers, opposed the doctrine of transubstantiation, and to atone for his crime a yearly procession was made at Angers, called la fête de Dieu, 1019.

FÊTE DE VERTU, an annual assemblage, chiefly of young persons, to whom were adjudged rewards for industry and virtue. These fêtes, held at Nuneham, in Oxfordshire, begun by lady Harcourt in 1789, were continued till her death.

FEUDAL LAWS. The tenure of land by suit and service to lord or owner, partly in use in England by the Saxons, was mainly established by William I. in 1066. The kingdom was divided into baronies, which were given on condition of the holders furnishing the king with men and money. The vassalage, limited by Henry VII. 1495, was abolished by statute, 1660. The feudal system was introduced into Scotland by Malcolm II. in 1008, and the hereditary jurisdictions were finally abolished in that kingdom, 1746-7. The feudal laws, established in France by Clovis I. about 486, were discountenanced by Louis XI. in 1470. "Feudal Aids, 1284-1431," vol. i.

FEUILLANTS, a religious order founded by Jean de la Barrière in 1577 at the abbey of Feuillant, near Toulouse, and settled in Paris in 1587. The Feuillant club, formed in Paris by La Fayette and others in 1789, to counteract the intrigues of the Jacobins, was so named from the convent where they met. A body of Jacobins burst into their hall and obliged them to separate, 25 Dec. 1791; and the club was broken up in 1792.

FEVER, see Scarlet Fever.

FEZ (in the ancient Mauritania, Africa), founded by Edris, a descendant of Mahomet, about 787, was long capital of the kingdom of Fez. After long-continued struggles, it was annexed to Morocco about 1550. Leo Africanus describes it as containing more than 700 temples, mosques, and other public edifices, in the 12th century. Jewish quarter burnt, many deaths, Sept. 1896. Prison reforms well carried out, many prisoners freed, &c., Nov. 1901—Sept. 1902. See Morocco.

FICTIONS, see Romances.—FICTIONS IN LAW were invented by the lawyers in the reign of Edward I. as a means of carrying cases from one court to another, whereby the courts became checks to each other. Hume. Lord Mansfield, in the court of King's Bench, emphatically declared that "no fiction of law shall ever so far prevail against the real truth, as to prevent the execution of justice;" 31 May, 1784. They were mostly abolished in the 19th century.

"FIDELIO," Beethoven's single opera; composed in 1804, produced at Vienna, 20 Nov. 1805.

FIDENÆ, a Sabine city, frequently at war with Rome. It was finally captured and the inhabitants enslaved, 426 B.C., by the Romans, whose ambassadors they had slain.

FIELD. The country gentleman's weekly paper, first appeared 1 Jan. 1853.

FIELD OF MARCH AND MAY, see Champ.—FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD, a plain near Ardres, near Calais, in France, on which Henry VIII. met Francis I. of France, 7-24 June, 1520. The nobility of both kingdoms displayed their magnificence, and many involved themselves in debt. Paintings of the embarkation and interview are at Windsor castle.

FIFE. A maritime county E. Scotland, containing St. Andrews, Dunfermline, and other towns with ruined abbeys. Alexander William George Duff, born 10 Nov. 1849, created duke of Fife, 1889, married princess Louise Victoria of Wales (which see), 27 July, 1889. His house, Mar Lodge, built about 1825, was destroyed by fire 14 June, 1895.

FIFTH-MONARCHY MEN, about 1645, supposed the period of the Millennium to be just at hand, when Jesus Christ should descend from heaven, and erect the fifth universal monarchy. They proceeded so far as to elect him king at London. Cromwell dispersed them, 1653. Kearsley. Another rising with loss of life was suppressed, 6 Jan. 1661. Thos. Venner, a cooper, their leader, and 16 others, were executed soon after.

FIFTH PARTY, a term applied to the advocates of temperance in the House of Commons (about 60), Feb. 1884.

FINLAND, a Russian grand duchy, in the middle of the 12th century was conquered by Eric IX. of Sweden, who introduced Christianity. It was several times taken by the Russians (1714, 1742, and 1808), and restored (1721 and 1743); but in 1809 they retained it by treaty; see Abu. Its political constitution was confirmed by the Czar in 1800, 1825, and 1855. It was made nearly autonomous in 1883. Population in 1862, 1,746,229; in 1867, 1,830,853; 1875, 1,912,647; 1889, 2,388,404; 1897, about 2,572,801; 1903, 2,816,298; 1907, 2,954,330. During a dreadful famine, whole villages were starved. FIRE-BRIGADE. The "London Fire-engine Establishment," an amalgamation of the engines of the different companies, was established in London in 1832 by Mr. Charles Bell Ford, director of the Sun Fire-office. It then had 80 men and 19 stations. In May, 1862, a commission recommended the establishment of a fire-brigade, which was effected by the Metropolitan Fire-brigade Act, in 1865. The establishment then gave up its plant to the Metropolitan Board of Works, and was afterwards taken over by the London County Council under the Local Government Act of 1888. Now named the London County Council Fire-brigade. The fire-brigade is supported by a rate, and by contributions from government and from the insurance offices. In 1889, 591 men and 55 land fire-engine stations; 1909, 1351 officers and men, 80 land fire stations, 3 river stations, 76 horsed fire-engines, 77 horsed fire-escapes, 8 motor fire-engines, 8 motor fire-escapes, 5 motor hose-tenders, 2 fire-floats, and 4 steam fire-engines on rafts, 325 horses and 55 miles of hose; 1320 fire alarms in London. FIRE-DAMP INDICATOR, a small apparatus, about the size of a chronometer, invented by Mr. G. F. Ansell, and patented by him in 1865, by which the presence of very small quantities of fire-damp or light carburetted hydrogen gas may be detected in mines. It is an application of the law of the diffusion of gases.

FIRE-DETECTOR and ALARM, a mechanical and chemical apparatus invented by prof. Grechi, which causes a bell to be rung and exhibits coloured light, when the temperature of a room is greatly increased. It was tried at the International exhibition, London, 4 June, 1873.

Pearson's automatic fire-indicator, practically a Sixe's thermometer, reported successful Dec. 1897

Widely used, 1910.

FIRE-ENGINES are said to have been invented by Ctesibius, 250 B.C. They are mentioned by Pliny, A.D. 70. A "water-bow" was patented by Thos. Grent in 1632, one was constructed by John Van der Heyden, about 1663. Bramah's engine was patented in 1793. Mr. John Braithwaite constructed a steam fire-engine in 1830. A trial of steam fire-engines took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on 1, 2, 3 July, 1863, when prizes were awarded to a large one by Merryweather and a small one by Shand and Mason. Many great improvements since, and electrical and motor engines are now in use.

FIRE-ESCAPES were patented by David Marie (1766), and Joachim Smith (1773). The Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire was first established in 1836; its object was not fully attained till 1843, when it was re-organised, beginning with six escape stations in London. In Aug. 1867, the plan of the society was virtually presented to the Board of Works, in consequence of the passing of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, and subsequently passed to the London County Council (see Fire Brigade). The fatal fire in Queen Victoria-street, 9 June, 1902, occasioned an inquiry respecting the adequacy of the fire escapes in use. Versmann's composition for rendering washing dresses fire-proof was published about 1860. The British Fire Prevention Committee reported an incorporated scientific society, under the Board of Trade, March, 1899.

FIRE INSURANCE, see Insurance.

FIREMAN'S RESPIRATOR, the invention of Mr. Tyndall (1870-71), is a combination of his respirator of cotton-wool moistened with glycerine, and Dr. Stenhouse's charcoal respirator. Armed with this apparatus a man may remain a long time in the densest smoke.

The Loeb respirator was tried in smoke and poisonous vapour, and was reported efficacious at Westminster July, 1888

FIRE, ROYAL SOCIETY FOR PROTECTION FROM. See Fire-Escapes.

FIRE-SALVAGE CORPS formed, in 1865, by the London Fire Insurance Offices.

FIRE-SHIPS. Among the most formidable contrivances of this kind ever used, was an explosion vessel to destroy a bridge of boats at the siege of Antwerp, in 1585. The first use of them in the British navy was by Charles lord Howard of Effingham, in the engagement with the Spanish Armada, July, 1588. Rapin.

FIRE-WATCH or FIRE-GUARD, of London, was instituted Nov. 1791.

FIRE-WORKS are said to have been made by the Chinese in remote ages. They were invented in Europe at Florence about 1360; and were exhibited as a spectacle in 1588.

Macaulay states that the fire-works let off in England at the peace of Hyswick, in 1697, cost 12,000*l.*

Very grand fire-works were let off from a magnificent building erected in the Green-park, London, at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, Nov. 1748.

Exhibition of fire-works in Paris, 31 May, 1770, in honour of the marriage of the dauphin, afterwards Louis XVI.; nearly 1000 persons perished by pressure and drowning, through a panic.

The display of fire-works, under sir Wm. Congreve, at the general peace, and the centenary of the accession of the Brunswick family to the throne, 1 Aug. 1814

Another at the coronation of William IV., 8 Sept. 1831. A grand display of this kind (at a cost of 10,000*l.*) to celebrate the peace with Russia, 29 May, 1856.

In consequence of explosions frequently occurring at fire-work makers (particularly one on 12 July, 1858, at Mr. Bennett's in the Westminster-road, Lambeth, when five lives were lost, and about 300 persons seriously injured, and much property destroyed), it was determined to enforce 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 7 (1697), an act to prevent the throwing and forming of squibs, serpents, and other fire-works. An act regulating the making of fire-works was passed in 1860.

Ralph Fenwick, a maker, his wife, and six others, Broad-street, Lambeth, killed by explosion 4 Nov. 1873. Mr. C. T. Brock, first exhibited at the Crystal Palace, 1871.

FIRES IN LONDON (and elsewhere after 1903). The conflagration of 1836, with all its tumult of concomitant distress, is one of the most dreadful spectacles which this world can offer to human eyes. Dr. Johnson. Fires (false alarms) act passed, 6 July, 1895.

FIRST-FRUIT. were offerings which made a large part of the revenues of the Hebrew priesthood. First-fruits (called ANNATES, from annus, a year), in the Roman church, originally the profits of one year of every vacant bishopric, afterwards of every benefice, were first claimed by pope Clement V. in 1306, and were collected in England in 1316; but chronologers differ on this point. In the 26th of Henry VIII., 1534, the first-fruits were assigned, by parliament, to the king and his successors. Mary gave the Annates to the popes (1555); but Elizabeth resumed them (1559). They were granted, together with the tenths, to the poor clergy, by queen Anne, in 1703. The offices of First-fruits, Tenths, and Queen Anne's Bounty were consolidated by 1 Vict. c. 20, 1838; see Augmentation of Poor Livings. Annates were long resisted in France, but not totally suppressed till 1789.

FIUME (meaning river), the port of the kingdom of Hungary, on the Adriatic; a very ancient town, built on the supposed site of Tersatica, destroyed by Charlemagne about 799, and afterwards known as Vitopolis, Cività Sancti Viti ad Flumen, and finally Fiume. After being successively subjected to the Greeks, Romans, the eastern emperors, and the pope, it was transferred to the house of Austria. It was captured by the French early in the century, from whom it was taken by the English in 1813, and given to Austria in 1814. It was transferred to Hungary in 1822; to the Croats in 1848; restored to Hungary in 1868. A new port and railways constructed 1877. FIVE MILE ACT, 17 Chas. II. c. 2 (Oct. 1665), forbade Nonconformist preachers who refused to take the non-resistance oath, to come within five miles of any corporation where they had preached since the act of oblivion (unless they were travelling), under the penalty of 40*l.* They were relieved by Will. III. in 1689.

FLADENHEIM, or FLATCHEIM, Saxony. Here Rodolph of Swabia defeated the emperor Henry IV., 27 Jan. 1080.

FLAG. The flag acquired its present form in the 6th century, in Spain; it was previously small and square. Ashe. It is said to have been introduced there by the Saracens, before whose time the ensigns of war were extended on cross pieces of wood; see Carrociom. The honour-of-the-flag salute at sea was exacted by England from very early times; but it was formally yielded by the Dutch in 1673, at which period they had been defeated in many actions. Louis XIV. obliged the Spaniards to lower their flag to the French, 1680. Hénault. After an engagement of three hours between Tourville and the Spanish admiral Papachin, the latter yielded by firing a salute of nine guns to the French flag, 2 June, 1688. Idem; see Salute at Sea, and Union Jack.

The comte de Chambord definitively declined to give up the white flag for the tricolor (see France), 5 July, 1871 and 27 Oct. 1873.

FLAGELLANTS, at Perouse, about 1268, during a plague, they maintained there was no remission of sins without flagellation, and publicly lashed themselves. Clement VI. declared them heretics in 1349; and 90 of them and their leader, Conrad Schmidt, were burnt, 1414. In 1574, Henry III. of France became a flagellant for a short time.

FLAMMOCK'S REBELLION, see Rebels, 1497.

FLANDERS, the principal part of ancient Belgium, which was conquered by Julius Cæsar, 51 B.C. It became part of the kingdom of France, A.D. 843, and was governed by counts subject to the king, from 862 till 1369, the first being Baldwin, Bras de Fer, who is said to have introduced the cloth manufacture. In 1204, Baldwin IX. became emperor at Constantinople. In 1369, Philip duke of Burgundy married Margaret, the heiress of count Louis II. After this, Flanders was subjected successively to Burgundy (1384), Austria (1477), and Spain (1555). In 1580 it declared its independence, but afterwards returned to its allegiance to the house of Austria. In 1713 it was included in the empire of Germany. France obtained a part of Flanders by treaty in 1659 and 1679. See Burgundy and Belgium.

FLAX. The manufacture in Egypt in very early times was carried thence to Tyre about 588 B.C., and to Gaul about 1 B.C.; and thus reached Britain. It was ordered to be grown in England, by statute, 24 Hen. VIII. 1533. For many ages the core was separated from the flax, the bark of the plant, by the hand. A mallet was next used; but the old methods of breaking and scutching the flax yielded to a water-mill which was invented in Scotland about 1750; see Hemp. The duty imposed on imported flax, 1842, was repealed 1845. In 1851 chevalier Claussen patented a method of "cottoning" flax.

FLEET PRISON, MARKET, &c. (London), were built over the small river Fleta, now used as a common sewer. In the reign of Henry VII. this river is said to have been navigable to Holborn-bridge.

FLEET PRISON was founded in the first year of Richard I., and was allotted for debtors, 1640; and persons were committed here who had incurred the displeasure of the Star-Chamber, and for contempt of the court of Chancery. It was burnt during the Gordon riots, 7 June, 1780, and rebuilt 1781-2. It was pulled down in 1845 (and the debtors removed to the Queen's Bench prison). The site was sold to the London, Dover, and Chatham railway company for £9,000 on 2 June, 1864. Last vestige removed . . . Feb. 1868

FLEET-MARKET, originally formed in 1737, was removed, and the site named Farringdon-street in 1820. A new (Farringdon) market was opened 20 Nov. 1829. The granite obelisk in Fleet-street, to the memory of alderman Waithman, was erected . . . 25 June, 1833

FLEET MARRIAGES. Between the 13th of October, 1704, and 12 Feb. 1705, there were celebrated 295 marriages in the Fleet without licence or certificate of banns. 20 or 30 couples were sometimes joined in one day, and their names concealed by private marks, if they chose to pay an extra fee. Pennant says that in his youth he was often accosted with, "Sir, will you please to walk in and be married?" Painted signs, of male and female hands conjoined, with the inscription, "Marriages performed within," were common along the building.

This abuse abolished by the Marriage Act . . . 1753

FLEUR-DE-LIS, the emblem of France, said to have been brought from heaven by an angel to Clovis, he having made a vow that if he proved victorious in a pending battle with the Alemanni near Cologne, he would embrace Christianity, 496. It was the national emblem till the revolution in 1789, when the tricolor (white, red, and blue) was adopted. The comte de Chambord declared his adherence to the old national flag, 5 July, 1871 and 27 Oct. 1873.

FLIES. An extraordinary fall of these insects in London covered the clothes of passengers, 1707. Chamberlain. In the United States of America the Hessian fly, so called from the notion of its having been brought there by the Hessian troops in the service of England in the War of Independence, ravaged the wheat in 1777. Before and during the severe attack of cholera at Newcastle in Sept. 1853, the air was infested with small flies.

FLODDEN FIELD (Northumberland). The site of a battle on 9 Sept. 1513, between the English and Scots; in consequence of James IV. of Scotland having taken part with Louis XII. of France against Henry VIII. of England. James, many of his nobles, and upwards of 10,000 of his army, were slain; while the English, who were commanded by the earl of Surrey, lost only persons of small note.

FLOGGING by the Jewish law was limited to forty stripes, "lest thy brother should seem vile unto thee," 1451 B.C. (Deut. xxv. 3). Wm. Cobbett in 1810, and John Drakard in 1811, were punished for publishing severe censures on flogging in the army. Flogging was made a punishment for attempts at garrotting in 1863; and for juvenile criminals, 1847 and 1850; for burglars carrying revolvers proposed; the bill enacting it was withdrawn 2 Aug. 1889.

FLORAL HALL, adjoining Covent-garden theatre, is a large conservatory, 220 feet long, 75 feet wide, and 55 feet high, designed by Mr. E. M. Barry, and was opened with the volunteers' ball, 27 March, 1860. It was used as a flower-market, 22 May-Aug. 1861. Here was held the West London industrial exhibition, 1 May to 2 Aug. 1865.

FLORALIA, annual games at Rome in honour of Flora, early instituted but not celebrated with regularity till about 174 B.C.

FLORENCE (Florentia), capital of Tuscany (which see), and from 1864 to 1871, of Italy, is said to have been founded by the soldiers of Sylla (80 B.C.), and enlarged by the Roman triumviri. In its palaces, universities, academies, churches, and libraries, are to be found the rarest works of sculpture and painting in the world. The Florentine academy and Accademia della Crusca (established 1582) were instituted to enrich literature and improve the language of Tuscany; the latter was so named, because it rejects like bran all words not purely Tuscan: both are now united under the former name. FLORES, or Isle of Flowers (one of the Azores, which see), discovered by Vanderberg in 1439; and settled by the Portuguese in 1448.

FLORIDA, a peninsula, one of the southern states of North America, first discovered by Sebastian Cabot in 1497. It was visited by Juan Ponce de Leon, the Spanish navigator, April 4, 1512, in a voyage he had undertaken to discover a fountain whose waters had the property of restoring youth to the aged who tasted them! Florida was conquered by the Spaniards under Ferdinand de Soto in 1539; but the settlement was not fully established until 1565. It was plundered by sir Francis Drake in 1585; and by Davis, a buccaneer, in 1665. It was invaded by the British in 1702; and again by gen. Oglethorpe in 1740; ceded to the British crown in 1763; taken by the Spaniards in 1781; and guaranteed to them in 1783. Capital, Tallahassee. Population in 1880, 269,493; 1890, 391,422; 1900, 528,542; 1910, (est.) 700,000.

FLORIN, a coin first made by the Florentines. A florin was issued by Edward III. which was current in England at the value of 6s. in 1337. Camden. This English coin was called florin after the Florentine coin, because the latter was of the best gold. Ashe. The torin of Germany is in value 2s. 4d.; that of Spain, 4s. 4d.; that of Palermo and Sicily, 2s. 6d.; that of Holland, 2s. Ayliffe. Silver florins (value 2s.) were issued in England in 1849.

FLOWERS. Many of our present common flowers were introduced into England from the reign of Henry VII. to that of Elizabeth (1485-1603). The art of preserving flowers in sand was discovered in 1633. A mode of preserving them from the effects of frost in winter, and hastening their vegetation in summer, was invented in America, by Geo. Morris, in 1792. A very great number introduced into this country from America, Australia, the Cape, &c., during the 18th century. Many of the dates in the following list, given in botanical works, are doubtful:—

FLUORESCENCE. When the invisible chemical rays of the blue end of the solar spectrum are sent through uranium glass or solutions of quinine, horse-chestnut bark, or stramonium datura, they become luminous. This phenomenon was termed "fluorescence" by its discoverer, professor Stokes, in 1852. By means of fluorescence Drs. Bence Jones and Dupré detected the presence of quinoidine in animal tissues; see Calorescence.

FLUORINE, a gaseous element, obtained from fluor spar; first collected over mercury by Priestley. Its property of corroding all vessels is so great that it is separated with great difficulty. It was named by Ampère in 1810. Its chemical history was further elucidated by Davy (1809), Berzelius (1824), and succeeding chemists. The corroding property of fluoric acid was employed in the arts in 1760, by Schwankhard of Nuremberg. Gmelin.

Fluorine liquefied by M. Moissan and prof. Dewar at about 2100, May 27 seq., 1897; paper read at Paris, 21 Oct. 1897; solidified by them early 1903

FLUSHING, a seaport of the Netherlands, on the isle of Walcheren. For the siege, see Walcheren Expedition. It was fortified by Napoleon I., but the works were finally dismantled in 1867. The port improved, and new dock opened by the king of Holland, 8 Sept. 1873.

FLUTE. The transverse flute, incorrectly termed the "German" instead of the Swiss flute, was known to the ancients. It was described by Michael Pretorius, of Wolfenbuttel, in 1620, and by Mersenne of Paris, in 1636. It was much improved by the French in the 17th century, by Quantz, Tacet, Florio, Potter, Miller, Nicholson, and others in the 18th. In the 19th century also the Nicholsons, Boehm of Munich, Godfrey of Paris, Carter, Rockstro, and Rudall and Rose of London, greatly contributed to the perfection of this instrument. See Flageolet.

FLUXIONS, a branch of the higher mathematics, invented by Newton, 1665, similar to the differential calculus described by Leibnitz, 1684. A fierce controversy ensued as to the priority of the discovery. The finest applications of the calculus are by Newton, Euler, La Grange, and La Place. The first elementary work on fluxions in England is a tract of twenty-two pages in A New Short Treatise of Algebra, together with a Specimen of the Nature and Algorithm of Fluxions, by John Harris, M.A. London, 1702.

FLYING, ARTIFICIAL. In Greek mythology, Dædalus is said to have attached wings of wax to the body of his son Icarus, who, neglecting the advice of his father, flew so high that the sun melted his wings, and he fell into the Icarian sea. Archytas is said to have made a flying dove, about 400 B.C. Friar Bacon maintained the possibility of the art of flying, and predicted it would be a general practice, 1273. Bishop Wilkins says (1651), it will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey, as it is now to hear him call for his boots! Borelli (about 1670) showed the futility of these speculations. About 1800 sir George Cayley experimented on the subject, and in 1843 Mr. Henson invented a flying machine; but nothing has been devised capable of serving a practical purpose. The motion of birds in relation to aeronautics was much discussed by scientific men in 1867-8, and since. At a meeting of the Aeronautical society, 26 March, 1868, it was stated that a member had actually, by his muscular force, aided by apparatus, risen from the ground and flown horizontally. Dr. James Pettigrew published his elaborate researches on flying, 1867-71. M. Von Groof, a Belgian, "the flying-man," descended from a balloon by means of a parachute resembling wings, in 1874, but was killed by falling through failure of his apparatus at Chelsea, 9 July, 1874.

FOIX (S. France), a county established 1050, and united with Bearn, 1290. About 1494 Catherine de Foix, the heiress, married Jean d'Albret, whose descendant, Henry IV., as king of France, united Foix to the monarchy, 1589.

FOLK LORE, a general name given by Mr. W. J. Thoms, in 1846, to popular legends, fairy tales, local traditions, old outlying customs, superstitions, and similar matters. The Folk-lore society was established in 1878. National congresses are held. See Music, 1899.

FOLKMOTE, or Folkmoot, Anglo-Saxon, a general assembly of the people to deliberate on general matters relating to the commonwealth, resembling the public meetings of later times. From these meetings, parliaments and other elective assemblies were gradually developed. The name was also given to local courts.

FONTAINEBLEAU, near the Seine, France. The royal palace, founded by Robert le Pieux about 999, enlarged and adorned by successive kings, was completed by Louis Philippe, 1837-40. Fontainebleau was entered by the Austrians, 17 Feb. 1814. Here Napoleon resigned his dignity, 4 April, and bade farewell to his army, 20 April, 1814.

FONTENAILLE, or Fontenay (Fontanetum), a village in Burgundy. Near here Charles the Bald and Louis the German totally defeated their brother the emperor Lothaire I. 25 June, 841. This victory, termed "the judgment of God," conduced to the formation of the French monarchy.

FONTENOY, near Tournay, in Belgium, the site of an obstinate sanguinary battle on 30 April (11 May, N.S.), 1745, between the French, commanded by marshal Saxe, and the English, Hanoverians, Dutch, and Austrians, commanded by the duke of Cumberland. The king Louis XV. and the dauphin were present. The success of the British at the commencement is still quoted as an illustration of the extraordinary power of a column; and the advance of the Austrians during several hours at Marengo (14 June, 1800) was compared to it by Bonaparte. The allies lost 12,000 men, and the French nearly an equal number; but the allies were compelled to retire. Marshal Saxe (ill of the disorder of which he afterwards died) was carried about to all the posts in a litter, assuring his troops that the day would be their own.

FONTHILL ABBEY, Wiltshire, founded in 1796, the mansion of William Beckford, author of "Vathek," and son of Alderman Beckford. He died 2 May, 1844. Within this edifice (which alone cost 273,000*l.*) were collected costly articles of virtu and art, and the rarest works of the old masters. The sale of the abbey and its contents to Mr. Farquhar took place in 1822; 7,200 catalogues at a guinea each were sold in a few days. On 21 Dec. 1825, the lofty tower fell, and in consequence the remaining buildings were sold.

FONTS. Fonts are said to have been set up in churches in the sixth century.

FOOD, see Provisions. Sale of Food and Drugs act passed 11 Aug. 1875; another passed 9 Aug. 1899. International food exhibition at Agricultural Hall, 13-20 Oct. 1880. National food reform society advocates abstinence from animal food, 1883. Drink exhibition, Westminster, opened 3 Dec. 1898. Food exhibition, Albert-hall, opened 21 April, 1903, and annually since.

FOOD SUPPLY IN TIME OF WAR. The war in S. Africa and the important question of the security of the food supply of the United Kingdom in the event of hostilities with any one or more of the great powers directed public attention specially to this question. The subject was also brought forward in parliament and pressure was brought upon the government to institute an inquiry by a parliamentary committee or royal commission. In furtherance of this object an influential meeting was held at Stafford-house, 4 Feb. 1903, under the presidency of the duke of Sutherland, when The Association to Promote an Official Inquiry into the Security of our Food Supply in Time of War was formed. President, the duke of Sutherland; vice-president, lord Strathcona. Offices, 35, Parliament-street, Westminster.

Royal Commission appointed, prince of Wales president, lord Balfour of Burleigh chairman, April, 1903. Report issued, 8 Aug. 1905.

FOOLS, FESTIVALS OF, were held at Paris on the 1st of January, from 1198 to 1438, when, we are told, all sorts of absurdities were committed. Fools or licenced jesters were kept at court in England up to the time of Charles I., 1625.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE, see Cattle.

FOOTBALL, an old English game (is said to have originated with the Britons), popular in the middle ages, censured and opposed by Edward II., 1314, and Edward III., 1349. Its suppression was attempted by Henry IV., 1401, Henry VIII., and Elizabeth, but the playing of the game continued till about 1650. It was revived in various forms during the last century by public schools and clubs, such as Sheffield and Hallam, 1857, Blackheath and Richmond, 1858. The Football association was formed by the "dribbling clubs" in 1863, followed by the Rugby Football union in 1871. The game is now played in our colonies and the United States.

New Zealand representative Rugby football team, selected by the New Zealand Rugby Union, visit England (played 32 matches, won 31, lost 1; 830 points against 39) 8 Sept. 1905
New Zealanders beat all France at Paris; score, New Zealanders 4 goals, 6 tries = 38 points; all France, 1 goal, 1 try = 8 points 1 Jan. 1906
New Zealand team at Washington-park defeat a fifteen representing New York by 46 points to 13. Six of the New Zealanders played for New York, as the latter were unable to raise sufficient players, 1 Feb. "

FOREIGN BOND-HOLDERS were incorporated by licence of the Board of Trade as an association 1 Aug. 1873. A fund was created for the protection of the investing public. Reports issued 1895-96. Foreign consuls, see Consul, 1896.

FOREIGN CATTLE MARKET. The city of London having been required to provide this market before 1 Jan. 1872, by the Contagious Diseases act (for Animals), 1869, the common council, 7 Nov. 1870, agreed to the expenditure of 160,000*l.* for the purpose. The site chosen, Deptford dockyard, was much opposed. The requisite alterations were made by Mr. Horace Jones, and the market was formally opened by the lord mayor, 28 Dec. 1871; for use on 1 Jan. 1872.

FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT, 59 Geo. III. c. 69 (1819), forbids British subjects to enter the service of a foreign state, without licence from the king or privy council, and prohibits the fitting out or equipping ships for any foreign power to be employed against any power with which our government is at peace; see Trials, 1862, 1863. In 1606, Englishmen were forbidden to enter foreign service, without taking an oath not to be reconciled to the pope. The act was suspended in 1835 on behalf of the British Legion (which see). The act passed 9 Aug. 1870 relates to illegal enlisting, shipbuilding, and expeditions.

FOREIGNERS, see Alien and Law. Foreigners in the United Kingdom: 1871, 113,779; in 1881, 135,640; the Germans being about one-third. Foreign prison-made goods act passed (prohibitory), 1897.

FOREIGN JURISDICTION ACTS, passed in 1843, 1865, and 1866, were extended and amended by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 67, passed 16 Aug. 1878; these acts were consolidated in 1890.

FOREIGN LEGION. Foreigners have frequently been employed as auxiliaries in the pay of the British government; see Hessians. An act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 2) for the formation of a foreign legion as a contingent in the Russian war (1855), was passed 23 Dec. 1854.* Queen Victoria and prince Albert reviewed 3500 soldiers, principally Swiss and Germans, at Shorncliffe, 9 Aug. 1855. On the peace in 1856, many were sent to the Cape of Good Hope; but not prospering, returned.

FOREIGN LOANS, see Loans.

FOREIGN MISSIONS, see Missions.

FOREIGN OFFICE was established at the re-arrangement of the duties of secretaries of state in 1782. It has the exclusive charge of British interests and subjects in foreign countries. The secretary for foreign affairs negotiates treaties, selects ambassadors, consuls, &c., for foreign countries, and grants passports. The foreign office building in the Italian style (designed by Sir Gilbert Scott) was begun in 1864. A portion of it was inaugurated by Mr. Disraeli's reception, 25 March, and it was occupied by lord Stanley, 24 June, 1868. See Administrations under separate heads, and Secretaries.

* The endeavour to enlist for this legion, in 1851, in the United States, gave great offence to the American government. Mr. Crampton, our envoy, was dismissed, 28 May, 1856, in spite of all the judicious pacific efforts of lord Clarendon. Lord Napier was sent out as our representative in 1857.

FOREIGN ORDERS. No British subject is permitted to accept a foreign order from the sovereign of any foreign country, or wear the insignia thereof, without his majesty's consent, by orders issued in 1812 and 1834;—regulations published in London Gazette, 10 May, 1855.

FORESTALLING was forbidden by statutes (in 1350, 1552, &c.), all repealed in 1844.

FORESTERS, Ancient Order of, a friendly society, founded on the principle that many can help one; in times of sickness, in old age, in distress and at death; all religious and political discussions are strictly avoided. The earliest notice of Forestry is in a list of members made in "Court No. 1" of the "Ancient Royal Order of Foresters" in the parish of Leeds, 1790. In 1834, 294 courts of this order were incorporated in the Ancient Order of Foresters, which held its first court at Salford, 1835; 16,510 certificated members enrolled. Forestry introduced into the United States, 1832; subsequently into Canada and Australia. Juvenile Foresters' Society instituted at Hull, 1840. Females admitted 1892. The 76th High Court at Birmingham; number of members reported 690,000, 6 Aug. 1888. Number of members reported Dec. 1901, 928,035; Dec. 1909, 1,215,527. FORESTS, CHARTER OF THE. Charta de Foresta, granted by Henry III. in 1217, was founded on Magna Charta, granted by king John, 15 June, 1215. It was confirmed in 1225 and 1297. See Woods.

FORFARSHIRE STEAMER, on its passage from Hull to Dundee, on 6 Sept. 1838, was wrecked in a violent gale, and thirty-eight persons out of fifty-three perished. The Outer-Fern Lighthouse keeper, James Darling, and his heroic daughter

* The commissioners appointed to enquire into the state of the woods and forests, between 1787 and 1793, reported the following as belonging to the crown, viz. :—In Berkshire, Windsor Forest and Windsor Great and Little Park. In Dorset, Cranburn Chase. In Essex, Waltham or Epping and Hainault Forest. In Gloucestershire, Dean Forest. In Hampshire, the New Forest, Alice Holt, Woolmer Forest, and Bere Forest. In Kent, Greenwich Park. In Middlesex, St. James's, Hyde, Bushey, and Hampton-court Parks. In Northamptonshire, the forests of Whittlebury, Saley, and Rockingham. In Nottingham, Sherwood Forest. In Oxford, Whichwood Forest. In Surrey, Richmond Park. Several of these have been disforested since 1851, viz. Hainault, Whichwood, and Whittlebury. A committee of the house of commons respecting forests sat in 1863. Motion in parliament to preserve Epping Forest adopted 14 Feb. 1870; and the decision of the Master of the Rolls, 10 Nov. 1874, stopped the enclosures by the lords of manors. The commissioners' new scheme was published July, 1876. Memorial trees were planted by the duke and duchess of Connaught, 16 Oct. 1880. The forest was dedicated to the use of the people by queen Victoria, 6 May, 1882. 28 acres of land at Yardley-hill, given by Mr. E. N. Buxton to the forest, opened by the duke of Connaught, 1 June, 1899.

Grace, ventured out in a tremendous sea in a coble, and rescued several of the passengers.

The "journal of William Darling" from 1795 to 1860, published in 1887, states that forty-three persons out of sixty-one perished.

FORGERY of deeds, or giving forged deeds in evidence, was made punishable by fine, by standing in the pillory, having both ears cut off, the nostrils slit up and scared, the forfeiture of land, and perpetual imprisonment, 5 Eliz. 1562. Since the establishment of paper credit many statutes have been enacted; the latest Forgery act passed 9 Aug. 1870. The Forged Transfer acts were passed to preserve purchasers of stock from losses by forged transfers, 1891 and 1892. Convictions for forgery and offences against the currency, 1887-8, 652; 1894, 355; 1896, 327; 1899, 311; 1901, 282; 1907, 301, 1908, 381.

FORKS were in use on the Continent in the 13th and 14th centuries. Voltaire. This is reasonably disputed. In Fynes Moray's Itinerary, reign of Elizabeth, he says, "At Venice each person was served (besides his knife and spoon) with a fork to hold the meat while he cuts it, for there they deem it ill manners that one should touch it with his hand." Thomas Coryate describes, with much solemnity, the manner of using forks in Italy, and adds, "I myself have thought it good to imitate the Italian fashion since I came home to England," 1608. Two-pronged forks were made at Sheffield soon after. Three-pronged forks are more recent.

Silver forks, previously only used by the highest classes, came into general use in England about 1814.

Mr. G. Smith found a bronze fork with two prongs at Kouyunjik, Assyria, 1873.

VII. 1495.—This act has been remodelled, and now any person may plead in forma pauperis in the courts of law.

FORMIC ACID, the acid of ants (formicæ). Its artificial production by Pelouze in 1831 was considered an event in the progress of organic chemistry.

FORMIGNI (N.W. France). Here the constable de Richemont defeated the English, 15 April, 1450.

FORMOSA, an island in the Pacific, 90 miles from the Chinese coast. The early Spanish and Dutch settlers were expelled by Chinese colonists about 1661. Island ceded to Japan by Chi-a 1895. Area, 13,500 square miles; population, 303,975. 1905, including 57,000 Japanese. Amoy is the chief port. Savages hold the mountains. In May, 1874, the Japanese, with the consent of a Chinese mandarin, chastised the savage tribes here for massacring Japanese sailors on their proposed settlement on the isle. The Chinese threatened war if they did not quit within 90 days, 18 Aug. 1874. By British interposition the Japanese withdrew, an indemnity having been agreed on; treaty between Japan and China signed 31 Oct. 1874. FORNOVO (Parma, Italy). Near here Charles VIII. of France defeated the Italians, 6 July, 1495.

FORT DU QUESNE, N. America. Near here general Braddock was surprised by a party of French and Indians, his troops routed and himself killed, 9 July, 1755. The fort was named Fort Pitt after its capture by Forbes, 24 Nov. 1758. It is now Pittsburg.

FORT ERIE (Upper Canada). This fortress was taken by the American general Browne, 3 July, 1814. After several conflicts it was evacuated by the Americans, 5 Nov. 1814.

FORT GEORGE, Inverness, N.W. Scotland, was erected in 1747, to restrain the Highlanders.—FORT WILLIAM, besieged by them in vain in 1746, is now in ruins.

FORTH, a great river of Scotland, rising in Ben Lomond, and entering the North Sea as an estuary, termed the Firth of Forth. The FORTH AND CLYDE CANAL was commenced 10 July, 1768, under the direction of Mr. Smeaton, and opened 28 July, 1790. A communication was thus formed between the eastern and western seas on the coast of Scotland.

The FORTH RAILWAY-BRIDGE projected, and a raft launched in June, 1866.

Mr. (afterwards sir T.) Bouch, of Edinburgh, was engaged to prepare plans for a suspension-bridge, 1878. The Forth bridge company accepted tenders from Wm. Arrol & Co. (£250,000) for constructing bridge and railway, Oct. 1879; through Tay-bridge disaster, &c., the scheme was suspended and eventually abandoned by the company, 13 Jan. 1881.

The construction of the present FORTH BRIDGE was undertaken by the company supported by the North British, North Eastern, Great Northern, and Midland railway companies; the act was passed, June, 1882; engineers, Mr. John Fowler and Mr. Benjamin Baker, whose plans were based on the cantilever or bracket principle; Messrs. Wm. Arrol & Co. were the contractors. The rocky islet of Inchgarvie was of great importance in the construction of the bridge; the works began by building the foundations, Jan. 1883.

The last bolt was driven, 6 Nov. 1889; the strength of the bridge was tested by the passage of nearly 2,000 tons, steamed half way across, 21 Jan.; and officially tested for the board of trade, 20 Feb. 1890.

The first train which crossed the entire bridge was driven by the marchioness of Tweeddale, carrying a distinguished company, in five minutes, 24 Jan. 1890. The prince of Wales (afterwards Edward VII.), after driving in the last rivet, in the presence of the duke of Edinburgh, the duke of Fife, prince George of Wales, the marquis of Tweeddale, the earl of Rosebery, and other distinguished visitors, including M. Eiffel and other eminent engineers, said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I now declare the Forth bridge open," 1.30 P.M. 4 March, 1890.

The length of the bridge (from North to South Queensferry), with the approaching viaducts, is one mile 1,005 yards; the highest part of the bridge is 361 feet; the clear headway under the centre of the bridge is 152 feet above high water. The greatest number of men employed at one time was 5,000. 56 lives were lost during the construction, in spite of great precautions.

Estimated cost £1,600,000, actual cost about 2,500,000.

Mr. Matthew William Thompson, chairman of the Forth bridge and Midland railway companies, and Mr. John Fowler (died 20 Nov. 1898), were created baronets, Mr. Benjamin Baker, was made K.C.M.G., and Mr. William Arrol was knighted, 1890.

The bridge was opened for the ordinary railway trains, 2 June, 1890.

By the fall of scaffolding through high wind, 3 painters killed 29 Sept. 1891.

FORTIFICATION. The Phœnicians were the first people to fortify cities. Apollodorus says that Perseus fortified Mycenæ, where statues were afterwards erected to him. The modern system was introduced about 1500. Albert Dürer wrote on fortification in 1527; and great improvements were made by Vauban, who fortified many places in France; he died 1707. The new fortifications of Paris were completed in 1846; see Paris. In Aug. 1860, the British parliament passed an act for the expenditure of 2,000,000*l.* in one year upon the fortifications of Portsmouth, Plymouth, Penbroke, and Portland, the Thames, Medway, and Sheerness, Chatham, Dover, and Cork, and on the purchase of a central arsenal establishment; the estimated expense being 9,500,000*l.* A committee to investigate our fortifications was appointed, 16 April, 1868. Since 1895 fortification at all the principal forts of the Empire improved steadily. The Gibraltar fortifications are regarded as the most complete system in the world.

FORTIS, a powerful explosive invented in Belgium about 1837, said to be well adapted for mining purposes. In May, 1890, it was manufactured by the Fortis Powder and Explosives company. Successful experiments at Liège, 8 Sept. 1891.

FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW, first published in 1865, edited by G. H. Lewes, succeeded by John Morley in 1867, and others. It was afterwards published monthly.

FORTUNE-TELLING is traced to the early astrologers, by whom the planets Jupiter and Venus were supposed to betoken happiness. The Sibyls were women said to be inspired by Heaven; see Sibyls and Gipsies. In England the laws against fortune-telling were at one time very severe. A declaration was published in France, 11 Jan. 1680, of exceeding severity against fortune-tellers and poisoners, under which several persons suffered death. Hénault. Fortune-tellers, although liable by the acts of 1743 and 1824 to be imprisoned as rogues and vagabonds, still exist in England. See Palms.

FORTY-SHILLING FREEHOLDERS, see Freeholders.

FORTY-SHILLINGS' DAY, the name of a quaint custom annually kept up since 1718 on the feast of the Purification (2 Feb.), at Walton, in Surrey. William Glanville left 2*l.* each for 5 boys who should, placing their fingers upon his tomb in the churchyard, repeat the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and afterwards read 1 Cor. xv. and write out two verses of the chapter. The number of recipients has since been increased.

FORUM, at Rome, originally a market-place, became about 472 B.C. the place of assembly of the people in their tribes (the Comitia), and was gradually adorned with temples and public buildings.—Near FORUM TREBRONII, in Mœsia, the Romans were defeated by the Goths, Nov. 251. After a struggle in the morass, the emperor Decius and his son were slain and their bodies not recovered. See Rome, 1885, 1899–1902.

FOSSALTA, near Bologna, central Italy. Here Enzo or Enrico, titular king of Sardinia, natural son of the emperor Frederick II., was defeated and made prisoner, 26 May, 1249, and retained. He was kept in honourable captivity till his death, 14 March, 1272.

FOTHERINGHAY CASTLE (Northamptonshire), built about 1400. Here Richard III. of England was born in 1450; and here Mary queen of Scots was tried, 11–14 Oct. 1586, and beheaded, 8 Feb. 1587. It was demolished by her son, James I. of England, in 1604.

FOUDROYANT, Nelson's flagship 1798; purchased by Mr. J. R. Cobb, F.S.A., of Brecon, from a German firm, and brought to the Thames, 28 Nov. 1892; proposal to make her a Nelson museum unsuccessful, October, 1893. A company having failed, Mr. J. R. Cobb restored the vessel, 1895–96; it was moored off Woolwich, and open to visitors, 19 June, 1896; wrecked in a gale at Blackpool, crew saved, 16 June, 1897; destroyed in a gale, 28 Nov. 1897; Mr. Cobb died, 6 Dec. 1897.

FOUGHARD, near Dundalk, N. Ireland. Here Edward, brother of Robert Bruce, after invading Ireland in 1315, was defeated by sir John Bermingham, 5 Oct. 1318. Bruce was killed by Roger de Maupis, a burgess of Dundalk.

FOUNDLING HOSPITALS are ancient. A species of foundling hospital was set up at Milan in 787, and in the middle ages most of the principal cities of the continent possessed one. The French government in 1790 declared foundlings to be the "children of the state."

FOUNTAIN COLLECTION of Renaissance works, Faience, Limoges, Raffaele, and Palissy enamelled ware, &c. (unequalled); and also a fine collection of coins, medals, carved ivory work, &c., formed by sir Andrew Fountaine, in the reigns of Anne and George I.; placed in Narford Hall, Norfolk, about 1730; sold by Christie and Manson for 91,112*l.*, 16–19 June, 1884; by the sale of ancient drawings, on 11 July, the sum was raised to 96,278*l.* Sir Andrew Fountaine died in 1873.

FOUNTAINS. The fountain of Hero of Alexandria was invented about 150 B.C. Among the remarkable fountains at Rome are the Fontana di Trevi, constructed for pope Clement XII. in 1735; the Fontana Paolina, erected for pope Paul V. in 1612; and Fontana dell' Acqua Felice, called also the Fountain of Moses. The fountains in the palace gardens at Versailles, made for Louis XIV., and the Grand Jet d'Eau, at St. Cloud, are exceedingly beautiful. There are above 100 public fountains in Paris, the most striking being the Château d'Eau on the Boulevard St. Martin (by Girard, 1811) and that at the Palais Royal. London is not remarkable for fountains; the largest are in Trafalgar-square, constructed in 1845, after designs by sir Charles Barry. There are beautiful fountains at Chatsworth, in Derbyshire, the seat of the duke of Devonshire. The magnificent fountains at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, were first publicly exhibited on 18 June, 1856, in the presence of queen Victoria and 20,000 spectators.

The fountain at Park-lane, London, W., the gift of Mrs. Brown, was inaugurated and uncovered, 9 July, 1875. It has statues of Chaucer, Shakspeare, and Milton, the work of Mr. Thomas Croft, and cost 500*l.* Queen Victoria memorial, opposite Buckingham palace, in progress, June 1910.

FOURIERISM, a social system devised by M. Charles Fourier (who died in 1837). The Phalanstery (from phalanx), an association of 400 families living in one edifice, was to be so arranged as to give the highest amount of happiness at the lowest cost. The system failed; caused, it is said, by the smallness of the scale on which it was tried.

The Familistère, a somewhat similar system, established by M. Godin, a manufacturer of stoves, &c., at Guise, N. France, was reported successful in Jan. 1886.

"FOUR MASTERS," a name given to Michael, Conary, and Cucogry O'Clery, and Ferfeasa O'Mulconry, who compiled from original documents the annals of Ireland from 2242 B.C. to A.D. 1616. An edition of these "Annals," printed from autograph MSS., with a translation edited by Dr. John O'Donovan, was published at Dublin in 1851. The "Four Masters" lived in the first half of the 17th century.

FRANCE, the Roman Gaul (which see). In the 5th century it was conquered by the Franks, a people of Germany, then inhabiting Franconia, where they became known about 240. The country was gradually named Franken-ric, Franks' kingdom. For the dynastic changes, see list of sovereigns, infra. Previous to the revolution, France was divided into 40 governments. In 1790 it was divided into 83 departments, and subsequently into 130, including Corsica, Geneva, Savoy, and other places, chiefly conquests. In 1815 the departments were reduced to 86; in 1860 they were raised to 89 by the acquisition of Savoy and Nice,* reduced to 86 by the loss of Alsace and Lorraine. The political constitution has been frequently changed since 1789. For details of more important events, see separate articles. The title of king of France, adopted by the English sovereigns from Edwd. III., 1340, was given up by Geo. III. in 1802.
